Governor Grants Unconditional Release, Holding That Prisoner Had Suffered Sufficiently.

DOES NOT EXCUSE OFFENSE

LIKELY TO FREE FOUR MORE

Application Is Made for the Release of Remaining Political Prisoners Held by the State.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Governor Smith announced tonight that he had granted the application for Executive clemency made on behalf of James J. Larkin, the Irish labor agitator, who with a brief interval of freedom has been in prison under a conviction for criminal anarchy during a little more than two years of a five-year term.

Tonight similar applications were filed by Senator John A. Hastings of Kings on behalf of four other "political" prisoners serving long terms for the same offense. The applications were received by ex-Judge Owen L. Potter, pardon clerk in the Executive Department, and had not been submitted to the Governor when the executive offices closed for the day.

The initiative in the action to obtain freedom for the Irish agitator was taken by the American Civil Liberties Union, of which Roger N. Baldwin is director. Hale, Nelles & Shorr, a firm of lawyers with offices at 80 East Eleventh Street, New York City, were the attorneys in the case. The Civil Liberties Union and these attorneys are acting also for the other applicants for mercy at the Governor's hands.

Should the Governor act favorably upon these petitions, every offender convicted under the criminal anarchy statute in this State and now lingering in jail would receive his or her freedom. Two of the applicants are women. Benjamin Gitlow, a former member of the Assembly, also convicted on a criminal anarchy charge, is at present at large under bond, pending final disposition of his case by the United States Supreme Court. An application on his behalf has been forwarded to the capital by the Civil Liberties Union. Senator Hastings said tonight that this would not be filed for the present, but would await developments expected in the future.

In a statement made public by Governor Smith when he announced his decision in the Larkin case, the Governor took pains to make it clear that he utterly disagreed with the doctrines and principles enunciated by Larkin and others of the same school of political thought, but expressed the belief "that the safety of the State is affirmatively impaired by the imposition of such a sentence for such a case.

"Political progress," the Governor said, "results from the clash of conflicting opinions. The public assertion of an erroneous doctrine is perhaps the surest way to disclose the error and make it evident to the electorate."

The Governor stresses that Larkin had been guilty of no overt act, and also recalls that two dissenting Judges of the Court of Appeals maintained that he had been unjustly convicted, while the Judge who wrote the prevailing opinion even suggested that the sentence in his case was too heavy.

The Governor's Statement.

The Governor's statement follows:

I have decided to grant the application to pardon James Joseph Larkin, who was convicted and sentenced to a term of five years for violating Sections 160 and 161 of the Penal law. The great public interest aroused by this case prompts me to state my reasons.

The statute upon which Larkin was convicted defines criminal anarchy as the doctrine "that organized government should be overthrown by force or violence * * * or by any unlawful means." It provides that whoever advocates such a doctrine is guilty of a felony. What Larkin did was to join in issuing the manifesto of the so-called "Left Wing" of the Socialist Party. That manifesto counsels a change in our form of government to what is described as the "dictatorship of the proletariat," and that this change should be accomplished by strikes called to affect the political action of the electorate.

My present action in no way involves the slightest agreement with this manifesto. I condemn the dictatorship of "the proletariat," of the farmers, of the capitalists, of the merchants or of any other section of the community. In a free democracy we know no dictatorships and we endure none. No group has any legal, social or moral right to impose by dictatorship its views or interests on any other group. Likewise I condemn the project to coerce political action by any such method as the calling of general strikes. Labor has the right to strike for the purpose of securing reasonable improvement of its own conditions, but not for the purpose of driving other groups into the acceptance of a proposed political dictatorship. I disapprove such a project just as I would disapprove a combination of capitalists or of manufacturers to constrain political action of the laborers or the farmers by withholding from them the means of procuring the necessities of life.

I pardon Larkin, therefore, not be-

Court Too Cold for Judge, Holes Landlord to Explain

The landlord of the building in which Washington Heights Court is situated was summoned to appear in the court today on a charge of failing to supply enough heat for the courtroom. According to Court Attendant Edward P. Doran, on whose complaint Magistrate Charles A. Oberwager issued the summons, it is so cold in the court that prisoners, nervous under any condition, shake so that attendants have to hold them up, and that witnesses, spectators and court attaches shake and chatter so that proceedings can scarcely be heard.

The landlord is Anthony F. Koelble, of 158 West Seventy-second Street. Two years ago he was summoned on a similar complaint by Magistrate Edgar V. Frothingham.

WHALEN GIVES PLAN TO PAY FOR BRIDGE

SWEEPING IN ITS SCOPE

Proposed Revision Would Not Be Restricted to $42,000,000 9th St.-East River Structure.

A plan for raising $42,000,000 for the proposed Ninth Street East River bridge without encroaching on the city debt limit was explained yesterday by Grover Whalen, Commissioner of Plant and Structures, after he had asked the Board of Estimate for $200,000 for borings for the bridge and for $1,425,000 for the building of eight new ferryboats. Actions on both requests were deferred.

The plan is to amend the Charter of New York City, Mr. Whalen said at his office after the meeting, by exempting from the city debt limit public works such as bridges which can be shown to pay for themselves indirectly by raising property values, although they pay no direct return. The present debt limit provisions exempt public works like docks, which are self-supporting, or are supposed to be self-supporting, through fees and rentals. The new doctrine proposed by Commissioner Whalen would enable the city, regardless of the debt limit, to authorize works which promise to pay for themselves by increasing assessments and taxes.

"The traffic congestion and the financial condition of the city are such that some such plan for financing city improvements must be found," said Mr. Whalen. "This has not been worked out in detail, and I cannot say how far the proposal would apply to public improvements other than bridges. It might apply to other improvements which pay for themselves indirectly. An amendment to the Charter along these lines will be pressed by this department as a part of the city's legislative program.

"The proposed Ninth Street bridge would pay for itself by the increased property values on both sides of the river. It would produce a tremendous growth in sections which are practically dead at present. The congestion of the other bridges makes this relief necessary."

The proposed bridge would be the greatest in the world in many respects, according to Mr. Whalen. It would have an 1,800-foot span over the river, between two anchorages, a greater span than that of the Quebec Bridge, which collapsed twice while it was being built.

"This can be built in four or five years from the time that operation starts. Congestion on the other bridges, and especially on their approaches, will become intolerable unless relief is found, and this is the only practical method."

Three of the ferryboats asked for by Mr. Whalen were for the Astoria and East Ninety-second Street line. Five were for the Grand Street-Broadway municipal ferry line and for the Union Ferry line, which were taken over by the city on Dec. 17, 1922. Commissioner Whalen said large sums would have to be spent in the reconstruction of the old ferryboats and that it would be cheaper to build new ones. He continued:

"The department has therefore designed ferryboats adapted to these services, with three vehicle gangways instead of two, all steel instead of wood, screw propellers instead of side wheels, two cylinder high-pressure engines instead of beam engines, using oil as fuel instead of coal, and designed to make ten miles an hour instead of five or six.

"These boats can be operated much more economically than the present boats, saving not only in repairs and maintenance, but in actual operating costs, and with three such boats these two municipal ferry lines can meet all operating and maintenance costs and net a gross profit for the city. I therefore recommend that your honorable board authorize the issuance of corporate stock (revenue producing) to an amount not to exceed $550,000 for the construction of three 130-foot all-steel, screw-propeller ferryboats, including $10,000 for supervision and inspection."

$50,000,000 MERGER OF THEATRES NEAR; STOCK FOR PUBLIC

DEAL IS NEAR COMPLETION

OPEN TO OTHER INTERESTS

News of Big Movement Will Bring Shock to the Independent Producers.

The biggest theatre combine ever attempted in the United States has been virtually completed, according to authoritative statement last night. Under the arrangement, which was said to await little more than the signing of formal papers, a vast majority of the theatres in New York and throughout the country will pass under one control, thereby creating something like a monopoly of houses in which legitimate enterprises can find lodgment.

According to A. L. Erlanger, who admitted that the deal was far under way when rumors concerning it were presented to him last night, the principal factors in the combine will be himself and the Shuberts. The talk in the theatrical district was of an even more sweeping merging of interests, whereby some of the few remaining independent theatre owners would be found allied with Mr. Erlanger and the Shuberts, so that the would-be producer would find himself forced to find in a single office the only outlet for his productions. Whether the deal will be so extensive was not learned.

Mr. Erlanger did volunteer the information, however, that Charles B. Dillingham with his three big theatres, the Hippodrome, the Gaiety and the Globe, was expected to be a party to the merger. This admission drew attention to the power that will be wielded in the amusement world even by those three, should no others be brought into the new organization.

Two Features to Plan.

The exactions of theatre owners not alone in New York, but perhaps even more so in other large cities throughout the country, even under present conditions, have been a cause of sore complaint among playmakers in the last few years. The revenue that went into the pockets of the man who owned or leased the theatre has been so great a share of the box office returns that independent producing has been discouraged, and some who have put out plays have come back from the road complaining that they had been gouged in towns where the demand for theatres was greater than the supply.

Added to higher salaries, increased freight rates and big wages to stage hands, the take-out of the theatre proprietor, according to some who have had to pay tribute, has been an overwhelming factor against independence.

The new plan has two new features, the greatest innovation being that the public is to be let in on it. The amount involved in the deal, it is said, will reach approximately $50,000,000, and to finance it the public is to be invited to buy shares. No details of the stock-selling feature of the enterprise were available last night, but both Mr. Erlanger and Lee Shubert admitted that the public was to be invited to invest freely. Incidentally, that was one of the few points on which the two principals in the merger agreed, Mr. Shubert minimizing the assertion of Mr. Erlanger that the deal virtually had been completed, and insisting that the Shuberts had not even audited their books yet to determine the extent of consideration they would demand in return for participation in such a combine.

A second feature that has been lacking in the previous talk of theatre combines and earlier efforts actually to form one, is that New York is to be included. A year ago, when a pooling arrangement was attempted, it was intended to include all the cities in the country playing first-class attractions. Eventually that deal dwindled to an arrangement affecting Philadelphia alone, and throughout the present season the theatres there have been under one control with indiscriminate booking.

News that such an arrangement probably will be in force here and elsewhere

STATE STARTS WAR ON STOCK FRAUDS

ACTS UNDER MARTIN LAW

Plan Is to Enjoin Those Suspected of Bad Practices When They Cannot Be Indicted.

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—From now on there will be the fullest co-operation between the Attorney General's office and public prosecutors in the cities of the State in the prosecution of bucketshops, fake investment firms and unlawful stock promotions. Attorney General Sherman announced tonight that he had established a special bureau, with Deputy Attorney General Benjamin F. Schreiber in charge, to carry on this branch of the work.

As a rule the Attorney General does not exercise powers of criminal prosecution, except under special designation by the Governor to supersede local prosecutors. Two years ago, however, the Legislature enacted a statute conferring on the Attorney General power to prosecute offenses of this character.

Under Attorney General Sherman's predecessor this statute remained a dead letter. Charles D. Newton pronounced the new law so full of loopholes as to render it practically impossible to obtain convictions under it. He inveighed especially against an immunity clause embodied in the law which would apply to guilty parties giving information.

Mr. Sherman, while admitting the law was not as watertight as might be desired, said he would not let this deter him from vigorously prosecuting his drive against bucket shops and fake promoters.

"I intend," he said, "that this department shall function under the Martin act, being convinced that, while it is somewhat insufficient for the purpose of curbing illegal stock promotions, nevertheless, it contains certain valuable summary provisions which can be made effective. My primary aim will be to check present vast promotions where I am convinced that the investor will lose his money. I think that under this law, as it now appears on the statute book, many investors can be protected against fraud.

"The bureau which is now organized, or being organized, for this purpose will give the act a thorough demonstration, and we will test its efficacy without waiting for further appropriations or further legislation. Of course, all evils cannot immediately be corrected, but hundreds of thousands of dollars of savings can be withheld from smooth-talking promoters by vigorous action and yet without hampering legitimate investments.

"Under this plan this bureau will function immediately, co-operating with worthy investment institutions and with the District Attorneys of the various counties affected. In fact, we are prepared to investigate suspected violations at once."

Method of Procedure.

Attorney General Sherman said that this would be the course of procedure to be followed in the drive:

1—Questionnaires will be prepared with a view to eliciting information concerning the true value of property against which stock is issued, the capitalization and sources of income of the particular firm, the percentage actually realized by the corporation from the moneys received from the sale of its stock, the literature and prospectuses used as inducements and other information that would throw light upon a suspected swindle.

(a) By requiring the firm or individual against whom complaint is made to file a statement under oath, setting forth in detail information from which it can be judged whether or not the firm or individual is conducting a legitimate business.

(b) Whenever expedient an examination may be made of the officers of the corporations or any individual against whom complaint is made regarding fraudulent business practices.

(c) In the event the examination discloses facts which would warrant a criminal prosecution the evidence is to be forwarded to the District Attorney or will be presented by the Attorney General or his deputies to the Grand Jury with the object of obtaining an indictment.

(d) In the event the examination discloses fraudulent practices under circumstances or in a manner upon which an indictment could not be obtained, a restraining order will be applied for upon

DEADLOCK ON DEBT; BRITISH PREPARING TO SAIL FOR HOME

WILL EXPLAIN IN LONDON

DELAY, BUT NOT A RUPTURE

Baldwin, It Is Said, May Convince British Cabinet That Our View Is Just.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—The British and American Debt Commissions, having as yet been unable to reach an agreement as to the interest which shall be fixed in funding the British debt, the prospect tonight was that a decision might be delayed for several weeks.

There will be another joint meeting of the commissions tomorrow, and, if no agreement is found at that time, the members of the British mission will probably sail for London on Saturday to place the details of the negotiations before the British Cabinet.

As far as can be learned, the main point at issue is the interest rate. From the first it had been understood that the British hoped to obtain funding on the basis of 3 per cent. interest, to be spread over a period of at least fifty, and preferably sixty-six, years.

When this proposal was placed before the American commission, it is understood, the British Commissioners were given to understand that efforts to get legislation through Congress which would permit a reduction as low as 3 per cent. would be hopeless.

American Minimum Was 3½.

Some of the American Commissioners, it is said, were of the opinion that the interest should be fixed at 3½ per cent.; others that the charge should be from 3½ to 4 per cent., and some gave the view that there was no possibility of obtaining Congressional action which would permit less than 3½ per cent. The present legislation fixes the interest at not less than 4¼ per cent. and the maximum of the life of the bonds at twenty-five years.

There was no meeting scheduled for today, but Montagu C. Norman, a member of the British Commission, called at the Treasury Department to learn if there had been any developments favorable to reaching an agreement. He was informed that the attitude of the American Commissioners was unchanged.

He learned, it is said, that Secretary Mellon had been informed that the Senate was almost unanimous against the British proposal to reduce the interest rate to 3 per cent. and would never consent to such a proposition. Senator Smoot, a member of the American Commission, is said to have been the authority for such statements. It is also understood that Mr. Smoot opposed reduction to 3 per cent. at the joint conferences which have been held.

Agreed on Amortization.

The British had figured that payment of the debt at 3 per cent. interest over a period of sixty-six years would call for total payments of $12,186,000,000, and of about $14,000,000,000 at 3½ per cent. interest spread over a period of sixty-one years. These computations included, it was said, one-half of 1 per cent. amortization of the principal, which had been virtually agreed to at the meetings of the commissions.

It appears that provisions for amortization or the extension of payments over periods of from fifty to sixty-six years were not the chief subjects of contention at the commission meetings. All seem agreed that extension of the maturities was necessary and that there should be amortization provisions.

The British commission expects to receive further instructions from the home Government before the scheduled meeting with the American Commission tomorrow, and these instructions may point the way for a solution of the interest problem. In the event that no decision is possible, the British mission will return to London without having completed an agreement, and will expect to submit a further offer after conferences in London.

It was said today that there had been no open split and no feeling aroused among the Commissioners. The hope was expressed that a solution would be found either at tomorrow's session or soon after the return of the British Commissioners to London. As matters stood, however, the British

FRENCH SUMMON MINE OWNERS TO COURT; WILL SEIZE ALL COAL, INVASION COMPLETE; RUMORS AT RIGA OF SOVIET AID TO GERMANY

100,000 Troops Complete French Invasion Plan; More Coal and Coke Are Seized on German Cars

DUESSELDORF, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—The plan of military operations for the occupation of the Ruhr Valley, as prepared by Marshal Foch and executed by General Degoutte, has been completely carried out, it was officially announced at the French Headquarters here this afternoon. The French troops in the Ruhr now number nearly 100,000.

The limits of the occupational zone begin at Wesel, at the confluence of the Rhine and Lippe Rivers, the most northerly point in the hands of the Franco-Belgian forces. The line runs east along the Lippe to Dorsten, this part being held by the Belgians, who make junction with the French at the last named town.

The French hold the Lippe to Lunen, the extreme northeast limit of the occupation. The line then turns south in a semi-circle around Dortmund to Herdecke and Witten, then southwest to Hattingen and thence, skirting Barmen and Elberfeld, joins the Düsseldorf bridgehead at Dulfrath.

General Degoutte now has the Thirty-second and Thirty-third Army Corps, complete, under his command, with an independent unit formed by one division of cavalry and the Eleventh and Twelfth Divisions of Infantry as reserves.

PARIS, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—The French Government has begun its policy of requisitioning in the Ruhr, it was announced this evening. Five thousand eight hundred tons of coke and 600 tons of coal, which the Germans had loaded in cars, were taken and rerouted for distribution among the Allies.

The French engineers in the Ruhr are giving an acknowledgment in return for the requisitioned coal, but the acknowledgment contains no promise to pay.

The French, Belgian and Italian Governments today gave the order immediately to commence working the State forests on the left bank of the Rhine as penalty for Germany's default in the delivery of timber, as established by the decision of the Reparation Commission on Dec. 26.

One Is That Russians Are Preparing Attack on Rumania Together With Hungary.

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—Vorwärts warns the German people today against placing any hope of help in the present crisis in Russia. The paper explains that certain circles which ordinarily have no use for republics of any kind and hate Sovietism worse than poison had now eagerly turned to Russia, straining their ears to catch every word any Muscovite chieftain might utter that could be interpreted or construed as meaning help from that quarter against Poincaré.

Vorwärts asserts that the unrest of Hitler's national Socialists in Munich is mainly due to such ideas and as Hitler himself has repeatedly expressed the fear recently that he no longer is master of the movement he started and that his lieutenants have threatened to act without him, there is indeed danger, says Vorwärts, that Hitler's muddle-headed guards may add seriously to Germany's almost unbearable lot by riots and pogroms. Such is the lack of political instinct in some German circles that they seriously expect help from the Communist republic to pave the way for the ascendance of Rupprecht or some other German princeling to the throne.

Even among sober business men one not unfrequently hears the hope expressed that Russia will come to Germany's aid against France. Yesterday there was a rumor at the Stock Exchange to the effect that Russian agents had prompted large German banks more than two weeks ago to withdraw all their capital from Rumania and that the German banks had taken this cue. According to this rumor Russia was only waiting for hostilities between Hungary and Rumania to begin when she would crush the latter State out of existence. A similar fate is predicted by this re-

European Complications to Be Considered in a Final Test of Strength.

PARIS, Jan. 17.—For France the Ruhr is a second Verdun. Seven years ago France's cry was "On ne passera pas" (They shall not pass). Today France's cry is "On cédera." (They will give in). As on the Meuse hills around Verdun the French knew they must hold the Germans or the war would be lost, they seem to feel today that they must triumph in the Ruhr or the peace will be lost.

In the past several days French public opinion has grasped the fact that France has staked her whole claim to reparations; that if France fails in the Ruhr she will never be paid; that upon her shoulders must rest always the burden of repairing the ruin the Germans wrought upon her soil. Therefore, it may be taken for granted the French will make a great effort rather than confess failure. If the Germans suffer, they must suffer. If France's wartime allies who are not with her in her present enterprise endure losses and complain, they will probably have to complain. France will move relatively slowly, but whatever may be one's judgment of the effect on world conditions France intends to go through with her undertaking.

Now that Berlin has declared the treaty no longer binds her, what would be the value of France's claim to reparations were Degoutte to withdraw from the Ruhr and Poincaré be forced to acknowledge defeat? The answer to that question now is fully realised in France.

French Prepare for Opposition.

The French have encountered more opposition from the Germans than they expected, but no more than they planned for, it is said in Paris. Here leaders say that if the Germans try to stop coal production and seek to hinder its distribution their plan may appear as a noble principle, the brightness of which will fade when the German locomotives lack coal and when the light plants are out of fuel.

In fact, the French regard the German policy as a sort of suicide and persist in believing that Berlin will back down. One must wait one week, perhaps three, but Poincaré insists the Germans will come to terms since no one better than they know what a hold France has on their country.

When one asks if Germany has any other weapon against France than passive resistance, which may resemble a hunger strike before a relentless jailer, one opens up a vista of trouble whose bounds are the borders of Europe. It may be the Germans figure that if Poincaré is forced to call up more troops to the colors before their resistance, interior dissatisfaction in France would have its effect. That is probably a very bad bet. Reports of the last two days current in Paris, perhaps as yet without official foundation, that the Government may call one or two classes, has produced no furor. M. Poincaré can produce half a million more men without precipitating a revolution, and that number would be enough to march on Berlin of Poincaré wished to do so.

It is difficult to know just what Berlin and Moscow are talking about now. True enough, the Germans might bring the Soviets into an attack on Poland, France's ally, which might be hard on Poland, but which would probably end by being harder on Germany than on France. A Bolshevist attack on Ru-

DUESSELDORF, Jan. 17.—The coal owners late this evening sent a written reply to M. Coste, head of the engineering mission, to the order to deliver coal given them yesterday by General Simon at the interview in Duesseldorf.

When one of their representatives tried to speak yesterday, the French General told him he was not there to discuss matters, but to take orders. Today, therefore, the Germans addressed their reply to M. Coste, as head of the civil mission, couched in these terms.

"The allied Governments have in the Treaty of Versailles recognized the German Government, and consequently they have also recognized the duty of all Germans to that Government and that they should obey its laws.

"It follows, therefore, that no German citizen can be forced to violate the laws of his country. I therefore (here follows the name of each of the seven mine owners involved) declare in the clearest possible manner that I will not assist in any action which is in disobedience to the Government of my country and in violation of my honor and that of my fatherland."

French Trying New Method.

Strong methods and threats having failed to produce either coal or money, the French military and civil authorities began today taking new stock of the situation. Instead of arresting the German mine owners or taking any such other dramatic steps, they quietly opened a judicial inquiry, which is the French form of saying they began trial proceedings.

Tomorrow these proceedings will probably have advanced so far as to entail a request from the French military authorities to seven mine owners to appear in person and defend themselves. Some of them, it is expected, will attend the court, and it is tonight almost safe to say that they will be fined a good fat sum, but that no interference will be made with their personal liberty.

The threats of arrest made yesterday and the day before were the military fashion of proceeding. Civilian advice, which has reasserted itself, has given warning that any such drastic action would tend to make heroes of the coal kings in the minds of the German people, whereas all the workers would rather enjoy seeing their employers fleeced of part of their reputedly enormous wealth.

Miners in Continuous Session.

The greatest centre of activity is now the Miners' Congress which is in continuous session at Essen. It is betraying no confidences to say that the miners are far from sharing the official optimism which is observed here at Duesseldorf. They estimate that it will take 40,000 members of their craft to assure working the mines at anything like their normal rate, and though they are full of good courage, they refuse to make any prophecies of great success for their efforts.

Today has been, however, rather satisfactory to both sides. To the French its quiet and that of last night have given renewed confidence. To the Germans it has brought counsel and a change of policy.

The troop movements have for the present completely stopped, and it is officially announced that there will be no more. The line which the French occupy runs along the River Lippe on the north, swings around east of Dortmund, and along the south takes in all the mine basin back to Duesseldorf. In the words of one of the French civil administrators, they have enclosed the whole German coal supply, and can whenever they like open an outlet, letting it flow wherever they wish. But as to any further information of how their plan is to be operated, patience is counseled.

Marks Sends Flood of Marks.

In one matter there is likely to be an interesting battle of policy between Berlin and Paris. After having held up the supply of paper money to the district for some days, the Berlin authorities have now, it appears, decided to throw in more billions of marks.

The reason behind this decision has been the fear that the French would institute new money in the district. When the dollar at over 18,000 marks it went to 21,000 marks in New York yesterday the monetary situation has become such that the engineers realize that whatever steps are taken no revenue can be collected for France in marks. Berlin, therefore, having seen the game and to the situation, seems to have decided to flood the district with marks and make the institution of new money difficult, if not impossible.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Scenes such as Dickens would have loved marked the funeral of Fannie Collins today. Fannie was only a waif of the streets, a "flower girl," who for thirty-five years had sat beside her basket selling flowers in Ludgate Circus, but she had so impressed her fellows by her unselfishness and had proved such a tower of strength to St. Clement Danes Church that she had a public funeral.

Outside the church a hundred flower girls formed a guard of honor and showered white narcissi on the coffin as it bore past. Within, every pew was decorated with snowdrops and bore also the oranges and lemons of the nursery rhyme with which St. Clement's will always be associated. Fannie's basket and hawker badge were laid on the chancel steps, and near them were two magnificent crosses of white and red flowers. The service over, the funeral procession marched down Fleet Street and halted by Fannie's old stand for a brief prayer. It was a fit passing for a Londoner. Swirls of fog half hid the houses, heavy buses kept lumbering by, taxis tried to dodge past and city policemen were hard driven to keep a way clear.

Through all the noise and confusion the procession kept on its way. First came a band playing the Dead March in "Saul," then the surpliced choir, followed by the rector and the church wardens or St. Clement's, with their staves of office. Last came the hearse. It was covered with white flowers, and above it towered immense black plumes, the extreme mourning grandeur of a past generation. Beside the hearse walked the pallbearers. They were younger flowers sellers—young in years, but, as their half-defiant glances at the crowds on the sidewalks showed, soured by bitter experience and the hard life of the streets.

Fannie's contemporaries came behind, rows of short, portly dames, clad in black bonnets, purple shawls and voluminous skirts. It was a long tramp for them, but they earned their reward—for a few minutes in the busiest hour of the afternoon London paused to pay tribute to a girl once homeless who, by sheer strength of character, had won the love and admiration of her associates.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—President Harding was in bed today with a slight touch of the grip and all White House engagements for today and tomorrow were canceled.

His physician, Brig. Gen. Charles E. Sawyer, said there was nothing serious in the President's indisposition and that had he not been ordered to remain in his room he would have gone to his desk this morning as usual. The President has been feeling the effects of a severe cold that has made him so uncomfortable for the last two or three days that he has been spending only the mornings at his desk in the executive offices and the remainder of the day in his apartments at the White House.

This morning, Brig. Gen. Sawyer said, Mr. Harding had a slight temperature, and he ordered his patient to bed so that he might throw off the cold. It was said at the White House this afternoon that unless the President showed considerable improvement tomorrow his engagements for Friday, including a Cabinet meeting, would be called off.

Among tomorrow's engagements at the executive offices that have been canceled is a visit of Emile Coué, escorted by Ambassador Jusserand. If President Harding feels well enough to receive visitors at the White House tomorrow there is a possibility that M. Coué will call upon him there to explain his "better-every-day" system to Mr. and Mrs. Harding. As to this visit nothing definite could be learned at the White House tonight.

January colds have affected high Government officials. Postmaster General Work remained at home today nursing a cold.

by apparent compliance, the troops in the Munster district have been today withdrawn, and the French are apparently to be left to themselves to settle the problem in their own way.

The primeval development of the situation, as it appears here today and apart from all outside possibilities in the impossibilities of their facing by the engineers that they cannot hope to produce money out of their operations. From that the deduction must be that to obtain the 2,000,000 tons of coal or which Germany defaulted last year Premier Poincaré has undertaken an operation which, whatever it may produce for France, is held to have already thrown the mark beyond all possibility of recovery and placed the balance of the German budget, which he has always declared must soon be done beyond all hope by any normal methods.

For Germany and, for that matter, for France too, anything like the production of money there was from the coal tax has now disappeared. In the mines the amount of work being done is still normal, but in spite of French optimism there seems no doubt from conversations I have had with trades unionists that as long as the workers can obtain enough money to live on they are not going to exert themselves in the way they have done during the last two years.

One French official declared today that in the French plan there was adequate provision for securing a full output, and there is no doubt of the intention of the French to treat the workers well. They are counting on the experience they have had in the occupied parts of the Rhineland, and their judgment is not to be set aside. However, there are other factors here in the Ruhr which prevent a complete analogy.

Today the first experience was had of an appeal by workmen to the French as arbitrators in a dispute. The men of a locomotive building plant last night informed their employer that in future they would keep an eight-hour day instead of the nine hours they had been working.

The employer replied that as all his output was going to Belgium on reparations account and the German Government had refused to pay, it was more than likely he would shut down altogether. The workmen today appealed to the local French commander and the French official's version of his reply is that "satisfaction was given to them."

Whether this means that the French undertook to pay for the Belgian reparations cannot be confirmed, and the official use of the incident, which is being made is to demonstrate the good relations between the workers and invaders.

Germans Split Among Themselves.

A curious feature of the situation is that there is less feeling against the French than there is between what may be described as the owners and workmen and the Communists. At Dortmund today there was a clash between these two sections while the French stood aside and took no part. The Communist section seems to find the French just as bad masters as the German mine owners, but their resentment is far more strongly directed against those of their comrades who support their national orders. In this quarrel the French have, of course, no intention of interfering, and they hope rather to reap some profit from it.

The mine owners have been silent and non-committal all day. They are waiting events and, directing most of their energies to negotiations with Berlin. Immediately the French court-martial passes sentence on them, whatever it may be, their mines and all appurtenances fall in the way of implements, railroad trucks, barges, &c., will be "requisitioned." That last word is one which the French prefer to use instead of confiscation, although requisition in ordinary use entails the idea that payment will be made eventually for temporary forced appropriation.

When this requisitioning takes place there is almost certain to be a new difficulty. The Berlin Government, it is understood, is preparing to order the railroad management not to carry coal. If that order is put into effect the French will be obliged to requisition the railroads.

The great strength of the French position is that unless Stinnes and his fellow magnates are prepared to fight a coal war and have ample resources behind them Germany will have to depend on the output from the Ruhr. They can, if they like, starve Germany almost as completely as she was starved by the blockade during the war. But to what good? That is what every German is asking.

Workers Are Apathetic.

In the spirit of passive resistance with which the occupation has been met there is more than a little apathy. Among the workers, especially, that apathy begot of six years' semi-starvation is very obvious. There is far more drunkenness in this district today than ever was the case in Germany before the war. The only sense is the don't-care attitude which has come with defeat and with four years of disillusion and the abolition of all values, of which the monetary value is only one.

And so it is that here a large majority of the people are prepared to work for their daily bread unquestioningly just as slaves work. They are prepared to see the French exploit the mines if they can, and march to Berlin if they were to, doing more than protest. But what they do want to know is what good will it do anybody. And profoundly there is implanted in every German's mind this conviction—that whoever does eventually benefit, it will never be the people of the devastated regions.

French Orders Defied.

The meeting yesterday between the French commander of the district and industrials, who included representatives of Krupp, Stinnes and Thyssen, was a purely formal affair. General Simon informed these great leaders of industry that he could discuss nothing with them. He had called them together to repeat the order given them the day before that they should recommence delivery of coal irrespective of the orders they had received from Berlin. He gave them twenty-four hours in which to begin, and told them coldly that if they failed to make deliveries they would be tried by court-martial and imprisoned.

As they came out from the meeting one of their number said: "Well, we are not afraid of prison."

With the thirty-two workmen's unions the French had almost as ill success. The representatives were kept waiting for half an hour and getting tired of standing in the corridors they retired to a café to wait. Discovering that most of them had gone, General Simon began to make his speech to four who were left. He told them that during the two years since Düsseldorf had been occupied the relations between the French and the trade unions had been most cordial. All he hoped was that the same would be the case in the Ruhr.

The workmen's spokesman, replying to this, declared that the only reason for content in Düsseldorf was that the people had benefited by exchange to the detriment of other workers outside who were engaged in productive industry and not in commerce. In spite of all the bad results for Germany which the Treaty of Versailles had imposed, the Ruhr workmen had always accepted the position of reparations claims. They had tried on their side to fulfill the enormous demands made on them. But they could not tolerate the latest occupation.

"We cannot do more than we have done," he said, "and we protest against this new occupation in the name of all the workmen who will suffer by it. The small shortage there was in the coal deliveries was no real excuse for upsetting the industry and lives of millions of people, and though we are still disposed to help restore the devastated districts of France we cannot submit to coercion."

Much of the coal, he added, which had been delivered to France for reparations had been seized into Germany and the workmen had lost faith in the real intentions of the French Government.

To this statement General Simon retorted by reading from a written copy which began with an expression of regret that the German industrials were trying to aggravate the situation created by the bad faith of the German Government.

German Governor Protests.

Dr. Groetzner, the Prussian Governor of the district, at once took exception. He could not tolerate, he said, that such accusation should be made in his presence to German workmen, and he withdrew from the meeting.

Undisturbed by his protest, General Simon continued that the only reason for the French advance was the real need of France for coal deliveries which had been refused. These deliveries ought to include compensation for the mines destroyed in Northern France, which had caused loss of employment to 100,000 workmen. The troops were there only to support the engineers, whose mission it was to arrange for the delivery of coal and their presence ought in no way to disturb the economic life of the country. France, he promised, would do her best to better the conditions of the workers, and for all that had happened they could blame only the German Government and employers.

This declaration was heard in silence, but once out of the meeting the workers' delegates treated it with open scorn. There was far too much trickery in all the French did, one said, for them to swallow stuff like that. He declared, however, that work would be carried on even if the mines were confiscated, if only for the reason that the men had to draw wages and get enough to eat.

Population of Bochum Warned.

ESSEN, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—In view of the incidents that have occurred at Bochum martial law is being enforced more strictly there than elsewhere. A press censorship also has been established at Bochum and in other districts which thus far had been free from it. The population has been notified by the occupying officials that the troops will act without warning against any action directed at the French troops or officials, even if it be only whistling or shouting.

Probably no single feature of the actual occupation is attracting and interesting the Essen street crowds so much as the new French bookshop established in requisitioned quarters in the heart of the city. The walks in front of the shop window are continuously crowded by curious onlookers.

The German Federal Coal Commissar has put the mine owners rather between the frying-pan and the fire by supplementing his recent deliveries prohibition with an announcement that any violation of it would be dealt with under German law, which permits the imposing of a year's imprisonment.

An investigation revealed that no shipments went forward for France or Belgium today. It was reported that normal traffic prevailed and that the usual number of cars were ordered and provided; also that a number of trains, even with coal cargoes, departed, destined for points outside France and Belgium.

The control of railway traffic announced yesterday was raised today after a brief period. The Germans noted that even in case an attempt was made to force trains to carry out reparations coal the German authorities were empowered to forbid their movement.

The Germans have stopped returning empty barges of the Rhine to the Ruhr area, according to a statement of the Control Commission, which announces that proper measures therefor will be taken to provide the necessary transport facilities. This is interpreted as meaning that all barges at present along the Rhine in this territory will be seized.

French General Headquarters announced tonight that there was no intention of occupying Munster. The announcement was made with the purpose of allaying the fears of citizens of Muenster, who, the French say, are perturbed by the departure from the city of the Reichswehr forces, who carried away the archives and the German mobilization plans and all other military records. The Germans are under the impression that the French occupation in the Ruhr, in order to be successful, must control the knot of junctions of railways running through Muenster.

French Headquarters asserts that it has most reliable information that on Saturday, Jan. 13, after the occupation of Essen, the entire forces of Reichswehr and Shutzpolizei in Westphalia, numbering 25,000 to 28,000 men, received mobilization orders. The orders were issued, the French say, by the General Staff of the Sixth Commando of the Reichswehr, which had headquarters at Muenster. It called the officers to report there.

It is said that at the present time there are nearly 10,000 Reichswehr and Schutzpolitzei in and around Muenster.

Mine Owners Write Refusal.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—A French commission has arrived at the port of Emden to control German coal exports, according to a Central News dispatch from Berlin.

The British Government continues to observe a watchful waiting attitude. Italy's policy is not defined. Reports that the Italin Government is trying to mediate between France and Germany cannot be confirmed, and it is noteworthy that Germany is delivering or offering to deliver reparations coal to Italy and that the German Minister has not been withdrawn from Rome, indicating that there is hope in Berlin that Italy may be detached from the Franco-Belgian policy.

On the other hand, there is also a report of possible replacement of the American troops on the Rhine by Italian troops, but this is directly opposed to Premier Mussolini's announcement of his policy at a recent Cabinet council, and may possibly be explained as indicative of some compromise proposals from Italy to France.

ITALY NOT MEDIATING, BUT OPPOSES FORCE

Wants Germany Persuaded—Duesseldorf Hears She May Send Guard to Coblenz.

ROME, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—Reports from London of an offer by Italy to mediate between France and Germany on the reparations question were declared authoritatively today to have no foundation. The Foreign Ministry, it was stated, had not announced, as reported, that Italy had offered her mediation.

Italy has, however, repeatedly suggested that, in taking steps to obtain reparations, no recourse be had to military measures, and even favored a civilian as the head of the mission sent into the Ruhr, instead of a military man.

This country has persistently maintained that it would be easier to obtain reparations from Germany through persuasion, and even by helping her economically, than through violence, Italy has declared for economic co-operation between France, Belgium and herself, with the possible participation of Germany.

Italy is vitally interested in the collection of the reparations due her, which she needs as urgently as does France.

The Giornal D'Italia today says that the French action in the Ruhr constitutes a violation of foreign territory in time of peace.

"The Germans are perfectly right in maintaining that the Treaty of Versailles does not authorize France to act on her own initiative without previous agreement with all the signatory powers," the newspaper says. "France's action is so grave that it may provoke the most serious consequences for Europe."

The paper declares that Germany was in the wrong in not fulfilling her obligations, but says the mere fact that she has supplied the Allies with less coal than the amount fixed does not justify the serious measures taken.

DUSSELDORF, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—Reports gained circulation here today that negotiations were going on between the French and Italian governments which if successful might result in Italian troops replacing the Americans in the Coblenz bridgehead.

Premier Mussolini is reported here as very desirous that Italy should become the stabilising influence which Major General Allen, the American commander, has been on the Rhine in the settlement of disputes between the Germans and the French.

Berlin's Resistance Stiffened—Government to Pay Owners and Miners if They Strike.

By CYRIL BROWN.

HAMM, Westphalia, Jan. 17.—The French front line of occupation and penetration has found all quiet along the Lippe and the Ruhr. The bloodless and noiseless French offensive is proceeding pleasantly, peaceably, smoothly and uncannily, according to plan. And the country is very much occupied with almost German efficiency and Teuton thoroughness.

Hamm, the last ripe plum in the Rhenish Westphalian industrial basin proper, expects to fall into the hands of the French tomorrow, and there are rumors that the French will not halt at Hamm, but will cross the Lippe on a broad front and may grab off the ancient and honorable city of Muenster as part of the "new measures" to go into effect as France's reply to Teuton stubbornness in refusing to resume reparation coal shipments. [It is officially announced in Paris that the area now occupied is not to be extended.]

It was 5 o'clock this morning when THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent invaded dismal, dingy Hamm, a town of 100,000 dingy and dismal souls, yet highly desirable from the French viewpoint not only for its rich cluster of coal mines, but also as being a vitally important railroad junction for Germany.

In the completely unlighted early morning pitch darkness groups of miners flashing electric torches were picturesquely walking or riding bicycles to work. I looked in vain for a Frenchman, but the awakened hotel porter and would get here all right sooner or and would get here all right sooner than later.

I found there was only one motor car left in town; all the rest had fled to Bielefeld, fearing confiscation. The fear was unfounded, as a matter of fact, but it interestingly illustrates the popular state of mind as occupation gets uncomfortably close.

Quiet on the Front Line.

It was dawn when THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent began skirting the line of the French advance along the Lippe River, the natural eastern boundary of the Rhenish Westphalian coal and industrial area, 20 kilometers from Hamm. French tanks were already astride the Lippe at Lünen in control of this important railroad junction and also the Lippe canal. Quiet and good order reigned everywhere along the advance front, where tanklets were nosing the way for the troops to follow, and no French troops were visible until I motored into the Dortmund sector.

Here the familiar war picture unrolled itself, boxcar troop trains standing on sidings, troops and war paraphernalia being unloaded at the freight stations, troops bivouacking by the roadside.

The big town of Dortmund is a typical picture of the occupied cities. The familiar French sentries were at all public buildings. Good-humored poilus were buying picture postals, patronizing the blond pilsenereuse beer that made Dortmund famous, also imparitially patronising the dark Munich beer along with the hearty German cooking in restaurants and still showing signs of doubt and astonishment when the bills running into four figures were presented by German ex-machine gunners masquerading as waiters.

In Dortmund one noted that the French soldats and the native populace seemed to get along without friction. The town was well plastered with the Herr OberBuergormeister's proclamation telling the Dortmunders the city had been occupied and exhorting them to bear it with quiet dignity and endurance.

At this advanced stage of the occupation the French are not demeaning themselves as conquerors and there is even an indication that the French almost are going out of their way to avoid trouble and tactfully trying to share the sensibilities of the natives. For instance, a thorough canvass of the occupied area shows no French flag on the Rathhauses or other public buildings and the marching troops carried their tricolors carefully rolled up in black oilcloth.

The Ruhr cities differ as much in character as human beings, and Bochum felt ominous. Dortmund looked pleasingly placid, taking little cognisance of the French occupants, but Bochum is super-sullen, out-Essening Essen. Crowds of underfed faces stared at the French sentries like wild animals pacing up and down zoo cages. A French pioneer company resting in a side street before starting on the march to an unknown destination was the target of the same undernourished mass of stares.

Bochum was also the heaviest policed town seen in the Ruhr, armed German security police, mounted & la cossack, were patroling the occupied heart of Bochum, keeping the sullen town at bay. Bochum may be the first to blow up if pay-day is lost in the economic shuffle.

Motoring along the railroad to Essen, looking for trouble, you noted the French troop trains slowly rolling eastward. Criss-crossing back to the front between the two main arteries of French advance you noted a bleak, sparsely settled country, broken only by an occasional coal mine and with French troops few and far between, mostly solitary sentries guarding bridges and railroad culverts.

The ingenious French strategy of occupation is that this great central region with no visible French forces to hold it down is yet securely held in the grip of the pincers formed by the two main lines of French advance between which an occasional liaison only is established to encourage the big cities. What makes the war correspondence in the Ruhr particularly pleasant is that you can be on both the occupied and unoccupied sides and like wander in and out of the front line and go wherever you please. The model French study of occupation seems to require no laissez-passer and betrays no orthodox enthusiasm for stopping you.

German Resistance Stiffened.

BERLIN, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—Special dispatches from Essen report that the Ruhr mine owners and operators are standing pat, despite the ultimatum delivered by General Degoutte. The mines were operating normally throughout the morning, and there were no indications at noon of approaching control or other intervention by the French.

The effect of Tuesday's conference between General Degoutte's emissaries and the mine operators has served, if anything, to stiffen the German backbone, say the special correspondents, as the labor leaders and mine workers also are displaying indifference to the French ultimatums.

"The bait which the French General is holding out to the mine workers will fail to have the desired effect," says the Volkszeitung, Socialist organ, while the mine workers' official gazette declares the Düsseldorf conference plainly indicated that the French plans were doomed to defeat along the whole line, especially if the operators and mine workers continue their present united front.

"Our parole is a brief one," said one leading mine owner. "We propose to stand firm, do our duty by Germany, and refuse to surrender our coal—come what may."

At the Good Hope mine it was stated that, even if the directors should be arrested and detained, orders from the French would be disregarded. If the French proceed to confiscate the mines and seize the stocks on hand, it is stated, there is on hand sufficient cash to meet the payrolls.

Fritz Thyssen, son of August Thyssen, veteran Rhenish industrialist and mine owner, is the popular hero just now, and his plain-spoken manner as the spokesman for the Industrialists at the conferences with the French is working infectiously on his colleagues.

Herr Thyssen, who is the active managing head of the family's varied interests, enjoys considerable personal vogue with his subordinates and employes, of whom there are more than 85,000.

"The French will learn that the indigenous Westphalian psychology is quite different from that encountered in the Rhineland, for the native Ruhrite, be he mine owner or worker, is a man of stubborn mind and unbending will," one correspondent observes, in discussing the Westphalian mentality as affected by the French occupation.

"Nothing has yet been heard or seen of the much discussed Commission of Engineers which was widely heralded by the French when the advance began," says the correspondent of the Vossische Zeitung, who asserts that thus far "only French Centrals have been in evidence."

It is stated that reparation deliveries will continue to be made to Great Britain, Italy, Jugoslavia and Poland.

One of the reasons for the removal of the headquarters of the Rhenish-Westphalian Coal Syndicate from Essen to Hamburg, it is understood, was to secure closer touch with the British sources of supply.

It was stated in official quarters today that the German Government is not contemplating, and sees no reason for expulsion of French subjects from Germany.

Germany to Reimburse Ruhr Owners.

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

BERLIN, Jan. 17.—The Government today arranged to reimburse the mine owners for losses in refusing delivery of coal to the French, and at the same time agreed to pay the workers provided the French attempt to operate the properties themselves during a general strike.

The mine owners agreed that the owners, among whom are August Thyssen, are ready to go to jail where the French have threatened to send them, unless they instruct the operators to turn over the coal to them.

When the mine owners agreed on going to jail, the German engineers agreed to stand firm in their position that they are unable to give the French coal without instructions from their employers. If the French try to operate the properties themselves the workers are expected to declare a general strike and accept the Government guarantee to pay their usual wages.

The promises by Cuno to pay the mine owners is creating a furor among the Socialists, who are crying scandal and scoring the Government for its failure to force the owners to pay 40,000,000,000 marks in taxes. The newspapers are demanding that the Government force the owners to pay on a dollar basis in order not to profit in evasion of tax payments when due.

Significant also is the feeling of the workers in the departure today of the chief of miners' unions in Bochum—a conservative wing of the workers—to Amsterdam to ask the Second Internationale to order an international general strike of protest against France.

Hugo Stinnes has left for London, presumably to arrange coal deliveries but it is suspected in some quarters that he is trying to interest British capital in his Ruhr properties for protection from French confiscation.

It is understood Herr Stinnes already has obtained several million pounds credit for coal, possibly with his stock as security. Herr Stinnes also is suspected of an attempt to arrange a combination with the British to defeat the French industrials' plan to control the iron and steel industry of the Ruhr, Alsace-Lorraine and the Saar, as well as Upper Silesia, through the Poles, and to dominate the field heretofore controlled by the British and Germans.

The dissolution of the French Control Commission in the Ruhr, which attempted to check up distribution of coal, is hailed by the press as the first of a series of failures to "collect reparations with bayonets."

By sabotaging the French on the Ruhr the German Cabinet hopes to force a French retirement, but is not expecting this for two months at the most. The Cabinet still is insisting on the proposals which the Reparation Commission refused to hear in Paris as representing the limit of the Germans' capacity to pay, which they characterised as generous.

FOR IMPERIAL CONFERENCE.

London Times Would Call In Dominions on European Situation.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—The London Times today prints an editorial which stresses the need of holding an early meeting of the imperial conference, owing to the grave state of European affairs. It deplores the various difficulties standing in the way of certain dominion Premiers coming to London for the purpose, due to their own political difficulties.

It is declared by The London Times that peace in Europe hangs by a thread, and that the people of Great Britain and its dominions are compelled for the moment to watch, as spectators, actions which it is no longer in their power to influence.

HUGHES COMMENDS BOYDEN TO LODGE

NO REPORTS GIVEN OUT

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Secretary Hughes has written Senator Lodge a letter dealing at length with the status and activities of Roland W. Boyden, the American unofficial representative on the Reparation Commission. The letter leaves no doubt that Mr. Boyden continues to enjoy the confidence of the Harding Administration and that he is regarded by President Harding and Secretary Hughes as having rendered valuable services.

The letter was written in response to the Robinson resolution calling on the State Department for detailed information relative to the activities of Mr. Boyden. It will be laid before the Foreign Relations Committee at a meeting on Friday. Senator Lodge does not feel that he ought to make the letter public in advance of that meeting. The probabilities are the committee will give it out.

Senator Lodge has been informed by the Administration that Mr. Boyden is on the payroll of the State Department, Development of this fact came as a surprise to the Senator and other members of the committee.

Some Deem Him Overzealous.

There is a disposition in some quarters to feel that Mr. Boyden may have been overenthusiastic in his unofficial contact with the work of the Reparation Commission, and some annoyance has been occasioned by recent incidents in which he has figured in connection with that work. Some Senators attribute his recent zeal to loss of perspective as to the attitude of the United States, but members of the Foreign Relations Committee generally, it is believed, are disposed to adopt the view of the Administration that he has been a capable and excellent observer.

The Hughes letter gives a rather complete summary of the work of Boyden, stating why and how he has been retained, but indicates that so many communications have been received by the State Department from him, and that they cover so extensive and complicated a ground, that it would be a task of considerable labor to bring them together for submission to the Senate Committee. Unless the committee insists upon having detailed information along particular lines or insists upon all the Boyden reports being transmitted, it is now believed that they will not be sent to the Senate.

There is pending before the committee a second Robinson resolution suggestive of the appointment of an American official representative on the Reparation Commission. This is not favored at the present time by the Administration. A majority of the Foreign Relations Committee is understood to be in harmony with the President's position.

The American Government is marking time in the present situation in Europe. Its attitude is one of watchful waiting. Officials today refused to discuss the question as to how the Boyden memorandum happened to be placed on the agenda of the Reparation Commission for consideration Friday. It was insisted that the controversy over the communication submitted by Mr. Boyden to the commission was a closed incident." Officials stood on Secretary Hughes's statement of last night, the text of which has been cabled by the department to Mr. Boyden.

Not Using Pressure on France.

Inquiry developed the fact that this Government is not co-operating with Italy and Great Britain in any effort to bring pressure on France. In German diplomatic circles it was pointed out that the German Government all along has believed that the Italians would be more favorably inclined than the French, and that this consideration led the German Government not to annul payments to Italy in cash or in kind. The German attitude is that Italy has not broken the Versailles Treaty.

RUHR SEIZURE CLOSES NEWFOUNDLAND MINES

2,500 Men Thrown Out of Work When German Contracts Are Suspended.

SYDNEY, N. S., Jan. 17.—Twenty-five hundred iron miners are idle tonight and the greatest period of prosperity in the history of the Wabana district of Newfoundland has been brought temporarily to an end as the result of the French invasion of the Ruhr and the consequent suspension of German contracts for Newfoundland ores, according to information received here.

The Wabana mines have closed down upon receipt of advices from Germany. It was stated tonight.

Reports from Paris, quoting Hugo Stinnes as saying that the Canadian contracts had been cancelled, were denied. However, an authoritative statement said that they had only suspended until the present dispute between the French invaders and the resisting Ruhr operators was straightened out.

The output of the Wabana mines was not shipped to individual companies, but to a general receiving station, which distributed the ore as it was needed to the various industrial plants, the German steel makers having pooled their interests.

ALLIES TO RESUME CONTROL AT MEMEL

PARIS, Jan. 17.—The Council of Ambassadors met today and discussed the situation at Memel. It decided on the immediate dispatch of a special commission which will constitute a provisional government for Memel under allied authority, and the mission will reestablish order. The Ambassadors' conference will make a final decision when law and order once more prevail there.

Representations will be made to Kovno calling the attention of the Lithuanian Government to the grave responsibilities it incurred in not having in good time taken the necessary steps to suppress the insurrection. The Kovno authorities will be requested to use all their influence to persuade the Lithuanian elements at Memel to obey the orders of the special mission.

Meanwhile the French garrison of 200 at Memel remains confined to barracks, surrounded by Lithuanian irregular bands, which are alleged to be in the pay of Baltic barons.

The French battleship Voltaire is carrying stores and munitions to Memel, with a landing company brought to war strength.

Lithuania Accepts Allied Plan.

KOVNO, Lithuania, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—The latest reports received here from Memel are that all has been quiet there since the insurgents occupied the city.

According to a second note from M. Poincaré, the French Prime Minister, M. Galvanauskas, the Lithuanian Premier, reiterated that the Lithuanian Government was not participating in the movement at Memel. He emphasized that his Government placed entire confidence in the allied decision to establish a provisional interallied government at Memel under the authority of the British, French and Italians. He felt that this action would correspond with the spirit of the Versailles Treaty.

The Premier added that Lithuania would agree to act as intermediary in tranquilizing the Memel region should a suitable opportunity arise.

MEMEL, Jan. 17.—The Memel coup will reach its crisis today. About 2,000 Lithuanian peasants, residents of the Memel district, supported by regular Lithuanian troops, are occupying Memel.

Five French torpedo boats arrived last night, while a French cruiser carrying 1,000 regular troops came in today. The peasants say they will not surrender the city, and repressive measures and bloodshed are anticipated.

Lithuanians buried five members of the "Little Lithuania Volunteers" who fell in taking the city. In an impressive ceremony at the grave speakers declared they would hold the district. A Lithuanian diplomatic observer says that trouble is expected, and the Lithuanian Government intends to send troops to the Memel district.

While the Memel revolt appears to be a spontaneous uprising of the peasant population, there is an underlying situation which threatens the peace of northeastern Europe.

The Entente Governments possess authentic Soviet documents showing that Moscow wishes Lithuania to possess the Memel district in order to give the Soviet direct railroad connection between Moscow and Berlin via Dvinsk, Kovno and the Memel district to Lida, an important junction in East Prussia. The French and Poles are determined to prevent this.

The staff of the "Little Lithuanian Volunteers" have said repeatedly that they do not wish bloodshed, and only desire that the League of Nations fulfill its "promise" to give Memel to Lithuania. The peasants have avoided clashing with the French. Today they may disarm the French garrison and then grant them the freedom of the city.

MEMEL, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—Colonel Prousson of the French Military Mission in Warsaw arrived here today to take command of the allied forces which are on their way to Memel on warships.

Sympathy Felt at Kovno.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Frederick W. B. Coleman, the American Minister to Lithuania and Latvia, with headquarters at Riga, today cabled to the State Department that in response to protests from the British and French representatives at Kovno against the capture of Memel, the Lithuanian Government had denied complicity in the revolt, but expressed "understanding and sympathy with the natural desire of the people to be united with Lithuania and to work out their destiny with their brethren."

Minister Coleman's dispatch brought the first official information concerning the attitude of the Kovno Government toward the Memel revolt against French troops and the authority of the League of Nations.

Members of the Lithuanian Legation in Washington say that the Lithuanian claim upon the Memel district is based on ethnographic, geographic, economic and political grounds. While the revolt was nominally against administration under control of the League of Nations of a district 20 miles wide by 500 miles long, it was said that in reality the movement was one by the Lithuanian population in favor of the annexation of Memel to Lithuania, rather than for independence, which the Lithuanians assert would eventually result in the return of Memel to Germany.

The Lithuanians contend that, according to descent, the population of 140,000 in Memel is from 80 to 90 per cent. Lithuanian, and from 65 to 70 per cent. on the basis of language.

It is asserted that any move on the part of the Memel revolutionaries toward annexation to Lithuania will meet with a ready response from the Lithuanian authorities, despite any protests from Kovno or Great Britain. Lithuanians, being a member of the League, claims the right to an equal voice in the affairs of the district, and might even, on that account, send a military expedition into the territory.

RUHR INVASION FORCED, SAYS DEPUTY LONGUET

Declares National Group Compelled Poincare to Act—No Change Until Next Year.

M. Jean Longuet, Socialist leader and a French Deputy, who has been lecturing in the United States, yesterday deprecated the invasion of the Ruhr by France. In an interview on board the France of the French line, on which he sailed for home, M. Longuet said:

"I was surprised at the stories in several of the New York newspapers that the French people are solidly behind Poincaré. The present Chamber of Deputies by no means reflects the French people, as its delegates were elected in 1919, when France was still in white heat over the war, and the complexion of affairs in France has altered since that time.

"Poincaré was driven into advocating the occupation of the Ruhr by the national group in the Chamber of Deputies, and by no alternative Clemenceau, when in the United States, openly opposed the occupation, and while Clemenceau does not stand an opportunity of being returned to power, his sentiment in this particular more nearly expresses what I think is the attitude of the French people.

"Unfortunately the Chamber cannot be dissolved in France as is the case when a Ministry falls in England. Our Deputies are elected every four years, and the present Chamber has still two years of power to run, four years and six months, which means we can expect nothing in that direction until next year.

TURKS BALK AT DOLLARS.

Copyright, 1923, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 17.—Turkish banks refuse to exchange American dollars for Turkish money. They do not want the American dollars.

For with peace expected the Turkish pound has been skyrocketing, the dollar dropping from 170 piasters in two days, with indications of a continued slump. Tourists find that yesterday's unpaid hotel bills cost 12 per cent. more.

American business man, however, are optimistic, asserting that the rise of the pound will result in heavy Turkish purchases from Americans of flour, sugar, wheat and agricultural implements, which Angora is anxious to buy and which heretofore it could not afford. Angora, it was learned yesterday, that all agricultural implements should enter Turkey duty free, hoping to stimulate American exportation, and the exchange helps to make this possible.

The increased value of the pound is attributed to the expectation of peace, coupled with a report that England has given Turkey a loan of £8,000,000 (roughly $36,800,000), according to a private agreement whereby Great Britain gets rights to the Mosul oil fields.

CUT TRESSES OF GIRL WALKING WITH FRENCH

STEELE, Rhenish Prussia, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—A German girl tonight had her hair bobbed because she appeared in public with two French soldiers. Her tresses apparently were snipped off while she was in the midst of a crowd leaving a moving picture show with her companions.

This is the first case of its kind reported in the newly occupied Ruhr region.

KRETWIC, Rhenish Prussia, Jan. 17 (Associated Press). — A crowd tonight smashed the display window of a barber shop because the proprietor was showing in it postcards picturing the arrival of the French troops of occupation.

ADOPT PACIFIC TREATY IN FRENCH COMMITTEE

Chamber Will Take Up the Naval Disarmament Compact in Two Weeks.

PARIS, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—The commission on foreign affairs of the Chamber of Deputies today adopted the report submitted by Deputy Raynaldy to the sub-commission yesterday in favor of ratification of the Washington conference agreement concerning the Pacific.

The commission decided to recommend the same reservations as those made by the American Senate concerning military intervention.

The report of Deputy Guernier on the Washington naval agreement will come before the commission in a fortnight.

FRENCH DETERMINED TO SEE IT THROUGH

mania might embarrass France, for her ally would surely call for help, but Degoutte would not be left in danger in the Ruhr in order to save Bessarabia for Rumania. There are possibilities in the Memel mix-up for all sorts of developments. If Poland undertakes to drive out the Lithuanians with whom she is still quarreling over Vilna, the Russians might take a hand, with serious enough results. But it is not easy to see Germany getting any immediate help from such a scrap.

Rumanians here report that the Rumanians are mobilizing against them and thereby excuse certain preparations of their own. If that is true, there is danger of war there which would embarrass France. Rumania's partner. But one can still see how that would get Degoutte out of the Ruhr.

Near East Possibilities.

Looking at Lausanne, one sees a picture of more danger. The British and Turks seem drifting to the parting point, which would mean the resumption of a state of war in Turkey. The British say they have no intention of attacking the Turks in such a case, nor is there any reason to see why they should, being in Constantinople and Mosul, two places they wish to be. But there is every indication that the Turks would attack the English, possibly both at Mosul and Chanak, and that would call for British action. Such action would in all likelihood result in the dispatch of Greeks, Serbs, and possibly Bulgars and Rumanians, against the Turks in Eastern Thrace, while the British would hold the Straits zone. Ismet Pasha has told friends at Lausanne that if such a thing happened he would invite the Russians to vent militarily some of their dislike for England by helping the Turks, which would likely take the form of an attack on Rumania.

One may ask what that has to do with the Ruhr. Germany unquestionably has influence at Moscow, and she once had influence enough with the Young Turks to make their country her ally. The foes of Hungary are the foes of Germany, and Germany and Russia have a common hatred of Poland. Besides, when this military business starts it is sometimes hard to stop. But whatever scheming and planning may be going on with German assistance there is one fact not to be lost sight of—in any general mix-up of nations that one with the best army is liable to come out on top. The world's best army is that of France.

This short sketch is not intended to convey the idea that there is a probability of a new European war. It is intended to mention the possibility of it. The French occupation of the Ruhr, even if justified, has certainly not dampened any warlike sentiment which existed in Europe, and, what is more, one need not expect France to back down before threats.

To any such speculation your Frenchman would answer: "Mon ami, nous ne sommes pas encore là." My friend, we haven't yet reached that point."

But he would quickly add that there exists no possibility of France's backing down. Therefore, according to all Frenchmen, except an insignificant handful of Communists, there can be only one solution of the situation—a backdown by Germany. M. Poincaré has put all his cards on the French army.

ALLIES AND TURKS PLAY WAITING GAME

BOMPARD RETURNS TO PARIS

LAUSANNE, Jan. 17. (Associated Press).—The Orient and the Occident seem to be playing a game of waiting at the Near Eastern conference, each side seeking to wear the other out. The Turks, as Orientals, play a good hand at this game, but Ismet Pasha betrayed some uneasiness today that he might be overplaying it.

The head of the Turkish delegation sent his secretary among the newspaper correspondents to see if anybody knew anything about a statement attributed to Lord Curzon, predicting the collapse of the conference, and describing the possibilities of concluding peace aware of such a statement. But the British spokesmen have been openly pessimistic, and this had reached the Turkish delegates. Nobody was sure of the Turks.

As Secretary for Foreign Affairs, Lord Curzon feels that he would like to return to London as soon as possible, especially in view of the numerous post-Togan problems pressing for solution. He thinks two months enough to devote to Near Eastern discussions and believes that things should be brought to a climax—good, he hopes; bad, if it has to be.

The date for presenting the treaty to the Turks has again been postponed, however, to give time for final negotiations on economic and financial matters like the Ottoman debt, in which France is especially interested, as her people hold five-sixths of the Ottoman debt. M. Bompard, who arrived in Paris today accompanied by French and British experts, will go over the financial questions in detail tomorrow or Friday with the French Government and bring back Saturday night to the Allies the

CALLS ON AMERICA TO ACT IN EUROPE

Labor Leader's Resolution Causes Stir at Session of Committee of 100.

PLAN TO EDUCATE PEOPLE

ACT AFTER ROOT APPEAL

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—After a spirited debate on a resolution demanding action by the United States to prevent war in Europe, the National Civic Federation's Committee of One Hundred on Foreign Relations adopted today a permanent organization and a plan to collect and disseminate facts to help the people of the United States to participate intelligently in foreign affairs. This action followed a speech by Elihu Root, declaring that the principal cause of wars is the ignorance of the people of one nation of those of other nations and urging the need of teaching the people of the United States on international questions and giving them a sense of responsibility in foreign affairs.

The resolution demanding action in Europe was introduced by Daniel J. Tobin, Treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, who pictured the situation in the Ruhr as fraught with dangers greater than were found in the period preceding the World War. The resolution read:

"It is our judgment that the American Government should do everything in its power to prevent war in Europe between the nations now in disagreement."

Edgar A. Bancroft of Chicago objected on the ground that this might be construed as a criticism of the French policy in the invasion of the Ruhr Valley. Professor Jenks of New York University and Colonel Henry W. Anderson of Richmond, Va., opposed any such declaration at this time. Then the Rev. C. H. Wilson of Glen Ridge, N. J., offered a substitute resolution as follows:

"In the judgment of this committee the time has come when our Government might participate in the councils of Europe in order that we may exert our proper influence in securing the ends of justice by amicable agreement."

Calls Our Stand Inhuman.

President Smith of Washington and Lee University spoke in behalf of this resolution.

"It is inhuman," he said, "for us to remain out of world affairs at this time. As a Christian people we owe our distressed brethren something. Individually we collect food, clothing and money for them and devote our every energy to their welfare, yet our Government, supposed to be the organized expressions of the public, will stand to one side, apparently powerless to aid, unsympathetic, isolated and unchristian."

Ex-Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia said he was willing to have the Government do everything possible to promote peace, though he was not ready to indorse any resolution now. He said that America should have a representative on the Reparation Commission and help bring about a settlement for the good of the world.

Judge Alton B. Parker of New York, elected Chairman, and Ralph W. Easley of New York, Secretary of the permanent organization, and Professor Jenks, as Chairman of a subcommittee, presented a report outlining "the scope and the plan" to carry out the educational campaign advocated by Mr. Root. It was adopted unanimously by the full Committee of One Hundred. The plan reads:

"That the purpose of the committee is the collection and dissemination of facts to aid the United States to participate more intelligently and effectively in world affairs, and to pronounce from time to time any conclusions that the Committee of One Hundred may reach on questions under consideration.

"That the Chairman of the Committee of One Hundred appoint an Executive Committee to exercise the functions of the Committee of One Hundred in the intervals between meetings; to select the topics for consideration by the committee; to select subcommittees of the Committee of One Hundred; to collect facts on questions under consideration; to provide effective means of publicity; to secure needed funds, and to arrange for the expressions of opinion of the Committee of One Hundred on special questions that arise."

Laments Ignorance on Foreign Affairs.

Mr. Root in part said:

"The people of the United States have not bothered themselves much about international relations. From the time we swung away from the habits of thought of the old Colonial times, with the passing of the generation that had been concerned in the intimate action and reaction of mother countries and colonies, with the passing of that generation, the people of the United States became absorbed in their own home affairs. They were pushing after and conquering the Continent, building up a great nation, and there is an elation behind the ramparts of conscience so great that we could afford to do that.

"And down to the time of the Spanish War it was not worth the while for any public officer of the United States to familiarize himself with foreign affairs unless it was the Secretary of State. If a man wanted to be Congressman or a Senator and acquire the universal approval and gratitude of his countrymen by being in Congress he did not bother himself about foreign affairs because his constituents did not care about them. He would study tariff questions and currency questions and immigration questions and transportation questions because his constituents were interested in them, but he had not any time to spend over foreign affairs because knowledge about them would not help him along at all, with the result that with all our vast machinery of education, great system of education, continually growing, foreign affairs had been let down.

"And now we are brought into immediate and inevitable contact with them, and the whole people of the United States who take charge of the conduct of foreign affairs, and everybody, are expressing opinions about them, and a very large part of the discussion is carried on on a basis of insufficient knowledge. There are—I am keeping myself within bounds in this statement, I think when I say there are some people in the United States who lack humility, some. There are some people who think they know it all when they know very little. There are many people who think they can solve all the great problems of international affairs by evolving schemes of their own consciousness.

"And I have been much interested, being in the way of seeing and knowing about ever so many of these schemes, to see how uniformly they settle everything international except the difficulties. And they are in perfect good faith, because the men who get them up do not know difficulties exist. They not only don't understand them—they don't know they exist.

"Now one of the great troubles in life is a lack of understanding by men of each other. We give but little thought to the part played in the affairs of life by habit, habits of thought and feeling and action.

"There are a lot of Republicans and Democrats in this room. Why? How many of you are Republicans except because you were born and brought up Republicans; and how many of you are Democrats? It could not be for any other reason. [Laughter.]

Every Country Has Traditions.

"Now in every country on earth there is a set of traditions, of modes of thought and feeling and action, a set of conceptions of what is right, proper, appropriate and decent, a set of conceptions as to what constitutes liberty, what constitutes right as between man and man, and the inheritance of those traditions and modes of thought, the feeling and judgment in the back of every man's head, constitutes more than one-half of his motives of action in the present.

"There are many things in our monthly magazines and in our newspapers, but there is such a great mass, and the articles on foreign affairs are part of the enormous mass of material which the ordinary plain American citizen does not plow through, and the thing is to get some system by which we can get the fundamental facts about foreign affairs, the facts that it is necessary to know in order to discuss any of the living questions of foreign relations intelligently into the minds of the people who vote, and the people who constitute the great democracy and are going to settle those questions.

"I am bound to say that a great deal of the discussion that goes on about foreign affairs seems to me to proceed upon the basis of ignorance of all the premises from which one can usefully reason regarding foreign affairs. Now this business of educating people about this new field: People are perfectly competent to learn it. Do not let us make any mistake about that. It is very much the same problem as that of learning the fundamentals of civil liberty, of self-government, very much the same, and people who are competent to do one are competent to do the other, but we have been studying the problem of self-government for 300 years, and we have not got through yet.

"We are learning; we are learning something every day in every respect. Laughter.] About how to govern ourselves. Sometimes we do too little, and sometimes we do too much, and we do not know why. It is too little, or it is too much, but we are all the time learning lessons.

Must Study Other Peoples.

"Now that has got to be comparatively simple, because there are a great many people competent to teach; I mean there are a great many competent leaders of opinion, so that if a man has not thought much about such subjects he is a little puzzled, and he can strike somebody within a few rods; he can talk to somebody who has thought about it and who can tell him things. We have leaders of opinion very competent to teach in matters of self-government, but we have not competent teachers in matters of foreign affairs, dealing with these strange animals that inhabit other countries.

"We make speeches; even this speech of mine will not go very far. [Laughter.] I do not think more than 50,000,000 people out of 110,000,000 will memorize it. [Laughter]. We write articles and print them in magazines, in pamphlets. We increase the trade in waste paper baskets immensely. [Laughter]. Is it 5 per cent. of the power stored in coal that is utilized in the steam locomotive? If we can get that—that is ever so much, but then what is utilized from the output of magazine articles and newspaper articles and pamphlets and speeches? Ever so much better. If you can get not 5 per cent. but one-tenth of 1 per cent. of that which is in them utilized by getting into the minds of the people they are intended for you are doing very well.

"Douglas Fairbanks came in to see me a few years ago over at The Hague. He had just come from London, where people had given a tremendous reception to Mary Pickford—tremendous. And Fairbanks was very interesting. The lesson that he brought from that experience was that the film had opened a new means of access to the human mind. He said there were tens of thousands of people, hundreds of thousands, who could not be reached by speech or by the written or by the printed word, but somehow the film had gone through the eye into their brain and disturbed them. Now there is a great deal of food for thought in that.

"But our subject here is one that you cannot very well utilize for films since Fatty Arbuckle passed off the stage. The question is how to get these fundamental ideas about foreign relations into the minds of the great mass of the American democracy, and I take it the first object of this committee is to try to devise a means to do it—how to do it. And the second is to go to work and give effect, operate those means. I take it the committee is not to advocate or oppose. It is not to constitute itself an agency for any reform or any movement of any kind. It is to do something else, and that is to find a way to enlarge the knowledge and understanding of the uncontroverted facts upon which necessarily rests all useful discussion of questions of foreign relations.

Would Keep to Education

"Now, let us confine ourselves to that purpose. Don't let us go on trying to do anything else. You have got to train a lot of teachers to train others. It is going to be a long and difficult work. It is not something on which Judge Parker and Mr. Easley can make a final report next month, nor next year, nor the next generation. It is a long task. But somebody has got to begin it. A lot of people are trying to begin it. The idea was that the Civic Federation united so many different elements and different points of view that perhaps they would stroke out some methods of doing this thing, of which other people had not thought. The Civic Federation was organized in order to include different points of view. That was its purpose, and it fits the spirit of that federation to start a movement which is designed to carry truth into many minds, having many different points of view. And that is what has got to be done here.

"I think that covers about what I have to say, except this: that the entrance of democracy upon the field of foreign affairs, the manifest purpose of the great body of voters in democratic countries to control themselves directly, the agents who are carrying on the foreign affairs of their countries, involves a terrible danger as well as a great step in human progress—a great step in progress if the democracy is informed; a terrible danger if the democracy is ignorant. An ignorant democracy controlling foreign affair leads directly to war and the destruction of civilization. An informed democracy insures peace and the progress of civilization.

Urges Sense of Responsibility.

"You see, you can pick up a newspaper almost any morning and see accounts of where somebody who ought to know better is endeavoring either to gratify himself or to ingratiate himself with a prejudiced audience by abuse and insult of some foreign nation by the use of language which if it were employed in the intercourse between man and man within our own country would lead to an immediate breach. Now the trouble is that the men who are guilty of that kind of language in public speech and public writing never have had brought home to them any sense of responsibility as a member of a democracy to keep the peace. More fights come from insult than from injury. More wars come from international feeling because of a belief of insult and humiliation than come from any mere material thing, as a rule; not always, but as a rule. The material interests of a discussion which brings about war are seldom of the slightest consequence compared with the very first day's material expenses in carrying on the war. The wars come in the main because of an excited feeling cause by apprehension of injury or by a sense of insult, and you see the members of our democracy utterly oblivious to the idea that by taking part in foreign affairs they become subject to any responsibility whatever. People have got to learn that. And they cannot successfully conduct or control their foreign affairs until they have learned it. When they have learned it I think it will cease to be popular for a man to insult other nations in public, just as it has ceased to be popular for a man to insult another man in public.

"Now, the first problem I think is, can we devise some way of getting the fundamental groundwork for judgment and discussion upon foreign affairs into the minds of the American people—a widespread system if we can devise it. And the second thing is to go ahead and do it."

FIVE MEN DIRECTING DESTINY OF RUSSIA

HE WEARS LENIN'S MANTLE

Premier Not Seriously Ill, but Unable to Take Active Part in National Councils.

BY WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Jan. 16.—It is hard work being a Bolshevist leader these days, when the fate of Europe again seems hanging in the balance. At this critical moment five men, working twenty hours a day, have the whole weight of Russia on their shoulders. They are Trotsky, Stalin, Kameneff, Djerjinsky and Rykoff.

Lenin is resting in the country, not seriously ill, as reported abroad, and able even to write occasional articles for the official newspapers, but certainly unable to take an active part in the national councils.

Zinovieff, with Lenin and those members of the Inner Council just named, which controls the Central Executive Committee, which in turn determines Russian policy, is also taking a rest imperatively ordered.

Rykoff, Lenin's substitute on the Council of War and Defense, is worn out with his work and just manages to keep going on a couple of hours' sleep out of the twenty-four. Trotsky, the Red War Lord, and Djerjinsky, Minister of Railroads and the Interior, the latter of whom controls the Gay Payoo, as the Russian revolutionary tribunal is now called, seem made of iron. The former has just returned to Moscow from a flying visit to the provinces—report says an inspection tour of the army camps and depots.

Kameneff, in addition to his work on the Inner Council, is President of the Moscow Soviet, a post which entails an enormous amount of municipal detail.

There is also the President of the Russian Union, Kalinin, whose advice on all matters likely to affect the vast peasant masses, is of the greatest value.

Stalin's Great Influence.

Finally, there is the Georgian, Stalin, little known abroad, but one of the most remarkable men in Russia and perhaps the most influential figure here today. Stalin is officially the head of the Ministry of the nations that constitute the Russian Union and, more important still, General Secretary of the Communist Party. But his influence is not measured by his official position. To understand it requires an elucidation of the working of the system of the mysterious Inner Council—Council of Five, as it is sometimes called—which is the central authority of Soviet Russia.

Knowledge of this system explains the source of Lenin's power. Lenin has often been called the "Red Dictator." This designation is wrong; Lenin never had the right to dictate, although in practice his opinion generally carried the day. To take an American parallel, imagine the Inner Council to be made up of the most important members of the directorate—which corresponds to the Presidium Central Executive Committee of any big corporation. The Board of Directors meets, say, once a month, but each meeting is preceded by a sort of caucus of these important members, which really decides the policy to be submitted to their colleagues. How are the group's decisions reached? In Russia, at any rate, and probably in the biggest American corporations also, by a process of exhaustive argument. If you have a smash up with common aims, entire sincerity and unusual intelligence and logical ability, there is little time wasted in discussion that might hopelessly tie up the work of a larger or less homogeneous body. These men approach any subject from a double angle. What are the facts of the case, and what must be their policy in relation to these facts? One or all give their views. There is criticism and discussion. Finally a common basis is reached on both.

Secret of Lenin's Authority.

The secret of Lenin's authority, which did in fact amount to dictatorship, was that long experience had proved him right far oftener than his colleagues. It is said that once, at the beginning of the revolution, Lenin, faced by general opposition, wrapped his head in his cloak, saying: "All right! Argue it out for yourselves; but when you've reached the conclusion that my plan is the only possible one wake me up and say so. I'm going to sleep." An hour or two later they waked him and said: "We don't like your plan much more than we did, but we agree that it's the only way. You are right." As the event proved, Lenin was right in this case, and scores of others like it gave him such ascendancy that by 1919 or 1920 his opinions were hardly questioned.

But it was supremacy of brain, not of position. By 1921 it was so marked that during the last year, when Lenin was absent through illness, Kameneff had the greatest influence in Russia simply because his colleagues believed that he most accurately interpreted to them Lenin's thought.

But last year, despite the famine, was a year of relatively little stress for the Soviet Republic. In the present critical days, when the future of Europe may depend upon decisions by the Governments in Paris, London, Berlin and Moscow, real directing strength is needed. Trotsky is a great executive, but his brain cannot compare with Lenin's in analytical power. Djerjinsky goes straight to his appointed goal without fear or favor and gets there somehow, no matter what are the obstacles, but he also is inferior to Lenin in analytical capacity. Rykoff and Kameneff are first-class administrators, and hardly more.

But during the last year Stalin has shown judgment and analytical power not unworthy of Lenin. It is to him that the greatest part of the credit is due for bringing about the new Russian Union, which history may regard as one of the most remarkable Constitutions in human history. Trotsky helped him in drawing it up, but Stalin's brain guided the pen.

Leaders Work Without Jealousy.

For unity of aim and old friendship prevents jealousy among these Bolshevist leaders, joined also by the tremendous bond of common fanaticism. Suppose today Stalin outlines a policy which he thinks should be adopted. Others criticise it, not to weaken it, but to fill in possible holes. Stalin answers. Some amendments are accepted; the majority fail. The final decision is reached only when every one is convinced that no improvement is possible. Such is the real Government of Soviet Russia.

British Get £400,000 Lebaudy Tax.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—The British Government will receive £400,000 as the inheritance tax on the estate of Jacques Lebaudy, self-styled Emperor of Sahara, who was shot by his wife at their Long Island home four years ago. It was recently learned that the dead millionaire had deposited approximately £1,400,000 in sound rubber securities in an English bank, and under the law the heirs are liable for inheritance tax to the British Government.

Henderson Returns to Parliament.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Arthur Henderson, former Minister without portfolio in the British War Cabinet, who was defeated in the recent general elections, has regained his seat in Parliament in a by-election held at East Newcastle, called on account of the death of the sitting Labor member, Mr. Bell. The polling resulted as follows: Henderson, Labor, 11,066; Major Barnes, Liberal, 6,682; Captain Lee, Conservative, 6,489.

GEN. ALLEN RECEIVES FINAL SAILING ORDERS

Washington Directs Him to Send Troops to Antwerp, Although He Suggested Bremen.

COBLENZ, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—Major Gen. Henry T. Allen, commanding the American forces in Germany, received final instructions today from the War Department to embark the Eighth Infantry and other detachments here on the transport St. Mihiel at Antwerp. General Allen had suggested Bremen as the port of embarkation, but the War Department preferred the Belgian port.

The process of uprooting of the American population of Coblenz continues day and night both for the officers and their families and the soldiers and their families.

They are packing and repacking, throwing away articles that cannot be taken with them, paying their debts, buying civilian clothes and shoes, selling, swapping and rearranging their baggage ceaselessly, giving and receiving farewell parties, sleeping at odd times, settling old quarrels and attempting to right their relations with the German female population.

There is much marrying and giving in marriage; there is baptizing, as in the case of the infant son of Sergeant David Woods, Signal Corps, and the little daughter of Private Gustave Radice, the ceremony being performed by Chaplain E. P. Easterbrook; there is letter writing without end to folks now old friends, and to employers for positions in the United States on the part of those quitting the army.

There are numerous headquarters orders regarding the departure owing to the complicated nature of the exodus, which has not much of the nature of the ordinary troop movement. It has been decided that one passenger train and one freight train will be sufficient, each moving in two or more sections. While the Eighth Infantry will sail by the St. Mihiel, many of the other detachments, especially the officers, will take United States line ships early in February.

The last interallied stag hunt in which the American officers will participate took place today over the snow-clad hills and through the forests opposite Coblenz. These hunts have been regarded as the means of promoting friendship and sportsmanship among the Allies in the zones of occupation. Major Gen. Allen, who is a hunter and rider of international reputation, attended the hunt despite the many duties facing him.

GREEK QUARANTINE RUN BY OUR WOMEN

Dr. Mabel Elliott Is Establishing the World's Largest Station for Handling Refugees.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATHENS, Jan. 16.—American women will install, finance and direct the largest medical quarantine station in the world in the effort to cope with the unprecedented outbreaks of epidemic disease among the refugees in Greece. Dr. Mabel Elliott, director of the American Women's Hospitals, today arranged with the Greek Government to take over the entire island of Macronisi, thirty miles south of Athens, and equip it to handle 10,000 refugees at one time.

The island, which is ten miles long and two miles wide and uninhabited, will be equipped with 2,500 tents and the necessary hospitals, disinfecting plants, soup kitchens &c. Owing to the urgency of the situation, Dr. Elliott has guaranteed to have the station in operation within six days.

The resident director will be Dr. Olga Stasny of Helena, Ark., with a staff of forty Greek doctors and nurses. The cost of its operation is estimated at $100,000, which will be entirely defrayed by the American Women's Hospitals, in addition with their present work with the Near East Relief and among refugees.

Dr. Elliott has had three years' experience in large-scale medical work with the Near East Relief in Turkey, Armenia, Anatolia and Greece. She is a graduate of Rush Medical College and practiced at Benton Harbor, Mich., before coming to Europe.

GREECE TO BAR REFUGEES.

ATHENS, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—The Greek government has decided to admit no more refugees to the country unless private relief agencies provide for them. In view of the order, fears are expressed for the 35,000 refugees awaiting transportation from Asia Minor ports.

The Government says it is unable to meet the expense of supporting any newcomers, and points out that health conditions throughout Greece are now at a critical state. It is grateful for the outside aid already given, but considers it inadequate to handle the present number of refugees. To care for the additional refugees, the Government estimates, would require the expenditure of $1,000,000.

The Near East Relief is feeding the 35,000 awaiting embarkation at the Black Sea ports, but it is feared these unfortunates will soon be deported to the interior by the Turks, with consequent heavy death and suffering, unless they are quickly removed.

Demand for British Coal Increases.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Owing to the American and French demand for coal, the ports of South Wales are crowded with ships. There are 315 vessels at the dock, and 115 of these arrived in the last three days. Forty-eight boats are unable to find berths. The British coal output last week was 4,500,000 tons, which is a million tons above the previous week.

FREQUENT POLICE RAIDS

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MOSCOW, Jan. 17.—Although Moscow under the "Nep," as the economic policy is called, is more comfortable and more nearly normal than two or three years ago, conditions are still such as to produce fantastic economic dramas in the lives of individual citizens.

Imagine, for instance, the sensations of an ex-aristocrat, who deals most profitably in pictures, having once made his own fine ultra-modern collection, on finding, after a somewhat too friendly visit to the apartment of the wife of a friend in that friend's absence, a sentry at the door, who forbade him to leave the house. There was a group of anarchist plotters in the house, and the political police had chosen that afternoon for a raid. According to their usual method, they made the whole building a mouse trap for forty-eight hours. Any one might come in, but no one could go out.

The husband arrived in due time, and explanations were doubtless difficult. The delicacy of the situation was not relieved by the fact that the entire triangle had to spend two full days together in two small rooms, or by the ex-aristocrat's uneasy recollection that his own wife was a woman of the most jealous description.

If George Bernard Shaw could amuse the world with a play on such a theme, what would de Maupassant have made of the following situation, that arose from the enactment of a law compelling every one whose quarters amounted to more than twenty square yards to give up a part for the lodging of persons without a domicile? The majority of the latter are poor students who are actually reduced to sleeping in cemeteries under such shelter as gravestones offer.

But there are others. In the case I mention a refined old lady, formerly a governess in a noble family, was told that she must receive a young woman in her single room. If she had had money she might have bribed some one or made an arrangement with the girl, which is the way in which these things are generally arranged. But she had none. The girl was a street walker, who actually plied her trade in that room 3 yards by 5. Being a Russian, and therefore the most enduring and fatalistic of the human kind, the old lady did not cut her throat or go out to die in the Winter streets. As she told a friend of mine: "I hypnotized myself by prayer and the thought: 'There is one God over good and bad alike.'"

Hardly less painful, from a different point of view, is the plight of a beautiful and distinguished young woman who a week ago was a welcome guest at foreign Embassies and missions, which are the only real "society" that Moscow now offers. Today she is "sitting"—this typically Russian expression implies at once permanency and resignation—in prison. She and her husband gave a reception in their handsome apartment, where I need hardly say there were no poor students or other uninvited guests. But in the small hours of the morning the police appeared on the scene.

The charge was vague—apparently connected with illegal changing of foreign money or something of the kind—but the police took away the beautiful lady, her husband and their Russian visitors. They probably will not "sit" for long, but they will have learned the lesson that one must be discreet in the enjoyment of one's profits under the new economic system.

Of course foreign guests were unmolested. Nowadays it is very rarely that the Moscow police bother a foreigner unless there is reason to suppose that he is mixed up in some plot.

SUN YAT-SEN'S TROOPS STREAM INTO CANTON

Capital of South China Republic Is Quiet, Shops Are Closed and Business Is at a Standstill.

CANTON, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—Six thousand Kwangsi troops, supporting Sun Yat-sen, marched into the city last night and this morning. Others still are streaming in from across the Pearl River. The city is quiet, shops are closed and business is at a standstill.

Soldiers of Chen Chiung-ming, the Nationalist commander, have gone over to the invaders here. General Chang Kuo-chen, representing Hau Chung-chi, Dr. Sun's ally, has assumed charge of the city.

SHANGHAI, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—Sun Yat-sen, deposed President of the Southern Republic, announced today that in a message from Canton, his former capital, three Generals hitherto loyal to his enemy, Chen Chiung-ming, had requested him to confer authority on General Wei Pang-ping to maintain order in Canton. These signing the telegram were Liang Hung-kai, Chen Tsung-fu and Chen Yih-shang.

Dispatches given out by Dr. Sun reported other details of the military movements which resulted yesterday in his adherents entering Canton. When Chen Chiung-ming left Canton several days ago it was said to have been by request of his lieutenants. Large numbers of his forces, sent by rail from Canton to Waichow, whither Chen fled, were declared to have created a panic by attempting to pillage Saikwan, just outside of the Canton walls. The Canton-Kowloon Railway was bombed in an effort to prevent the Nationalists from reaching Waichow.

DEADLOCK ON DEBT, BRITISH WILL SAIL

Commissioners were not in a position to conclude a tentative agreement at an interest rate in excess of 3 per cent. It was understood, and therefore a deadlock had developed.

Stanley Baldwin, Chancellor of the Exchequer, it was said, would sail for London on Saturday regardless of developments here. It is possible that Mr. Norman will remain in this country for another week, but that will depend upon the nature of the advices which the British mission hopes to receive before tomorrow's meeting.

Break Is Denied in London.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 17.—Rumors of a rupture between Great Britain and the American Debt Commissioners are denied emphatically today in official circles.

Stanley Baldwin, Chancellor of the Exchequer, it is admitted, will return home immediately but that, it is explained, is merely because the negotiations have reached such a stage that they need fuller explanations than can be given by cable. It is realized here that the Washington Administration, in adopting a plan which will necessitate a change in the present law laying down definite figures with regard to the rate of interest and the amortization period, must consider public opinion in America, but it is impossible for the British Cabinet to appreciate properly the difficulties confronting Secretary Mellon and his colleagues until they have had a verbal report from Mr. Baldwin.

It is generally understood, though not officially confirmed here, that the point at issue has narrowed to one-half of 1 per cent. in the interest rate, but it is pointed out that this represents a considerable sum when the huge principal is considered and that the very desire of the Government to conclude a final agreement forces it to be very careful before it pledges the country to annual payments which will continue for two generations.

Confidence is expressed that it will be understood in America that the present hitch is due not to indisposition on the part of Great Britain to meet her obligation in full, but merely to her desire to reach an agreement which, once it is struck, will not be likely at any time to be questioned.

The suggestion is also made that it may not be necessary for Mr. Baldwin to return to Washington. He has made such progress in his negotiations that if he convinced his colleagues in the Cabinet of the justice of the American position it would be easy for Sir Auckland Geddes to conclude the final bargain.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—In a financial article discussing the postponement of the debt funding negotiations in Washington, The London Times says that opinion here differs as to whether the American offer of 3 per cent. interest for a decade and 3½ per cent. afterward should not have been accepted, but the general view appears to be that a compromise will not be difficult. The article adds that pending a settlement it is assumed that the interest on the debt will accumulate at the rate of 5 per cent.

COX SAYS PEOPLE WEARY OF DRIFTING

Attacks Republican Administration as Having Forfeited Public Confidence.

PICTURES JACKSON'S WAY.

He Tells Ohio Democrats That Party Leader Would Have Joined the League.

LANCASTER, Ohio, Jan. 17.—Ex-Governor James M. Cox, Democratic candidate for President in 1920, was the principal speaker at a Jacksonian observance here today and devoted his address to a discussion of the attitude of the Republican and Democratic parties toward the duty of the United States in the present chaotic after-war conditions throughout the world. He condemned the policy of the Republican Administration and declared that America should be in the League of Nations.

"In the last Presidential contest," said Mr. Cox, referring to the Democratic Party, "we lost the election, but history will certainly say of that campaign that the circumstances of our defeat were more creditable than the circumstances of the victory registered by the Republican Party. We are proud of the cause we espoused, while the opposition party is seeking to make a closed book of its sloganized misrepresentations."

The former Governor drew an analogy between the campaign of hate that brought the Whigs into power in 1840 and the similar campaign which defeated the Democrats in 1920. Hatred of Andrew Jackson, he said, brought heterogeneous groups together in 1840, but there could be no agreement on any vital question, and in 1844 the Whigs were defeated. In 1920, he continued, hatred again brought together the groups which followed the Republican standard, and again a "plurality quite beyond precedent was recorded against the party in power."

"Reaping the Harvest of Anger."

"No sooner was the change in government made," said Mr. Cox, "than the country began reaping for the second time in history the harvest of impulsive anger. Gestures were made now and then to one element or another, but protest from other quarters soon calmed the waters to a state of perfect tranquillity. There was no agreement at the outset on principles. Except for the element of hatred there was accord in nothing and quite naturally nothing to speak of has been done. The currents of public opinion are running now against the Republican leaders as they did against the Whigs. There is open revolt in the ranks. Unless present portents are misleading, the fate that befell the Whig Party may overtake its successor.

"The present public indictment is that general incompetence is enthroned at Washington. We have the President's own official statement that the Congress has passed two measures that would have bankrupt the Treasury except for his own intervention. The executive and legislative departments are equally responsible for a tariff law that is condemned in every community as a menace to our markets, a subsidy to campaign contributors, and the certain forerunner of industrial troubles.

"More lamentable is the failure in international affairs. Never since the dawn of civilization have the sons of man been so plagued with conditions that bring disaster to individuals, and uncertainty as to the very existence of nations. We have indeed had a world war and the whole world suffers from it! Its awful reactions have spared no nation. The disaster is so widespread that any attempt at piecemeal repair is but a pathetic evidence of national or racial endeavor. The concerted labors of peoples everywhere are essential, and this is practicable only through Governments.

"What fragmentary fortunes of war there are seem to be with us. We have a commanding gold supply and our agencies of productivity are unimpaired. However, we cannot trade with our gold except across the seas, and there can be no trade with prostrate nations. Our fields and factories can produce, but normal production is useless unless we can find a market in which to sell. Our aims in the war were admittedly selfish. We are not engulfed in the bitterness that has impaired reason elsewhere. Every element is present for a helpful leadership, spiritual and practical.

Sees the Nation Adrift.

"The teachings of every religion tell what any nation so circumstanced ought to do. Every human conscience free from the poison of partisanship is moved by a common prompting, and yet in the sea of international responsibility we drift as aimlessly as a floating derelict. For two years the Administration, Micawber-like, has seemingly lived in the hope that something would turn up. Doubtless its philosophy has been that matters couldn't get much worse and any development might improve the situation.

Mr. Cox argued at length that the Administration shared in responsibility for present conditions in the Near East because of its attitude in the Turkish imbroglio, its abandonment of our Allies in the forms and tasks of peace, its failure to prevent shipments of war materials to combatants in the East and its silence when the slaughter of Christians was at its height.

"There is another phase of the Near Eastern situation which will doubtless enter into the public's final analysis," said Mr. Cox. "It presents the question of whether the Administration's attitude of silence when women were outraged and thousands of adults and children killed squares with the time-honored American policy of protecting religious minorities. Secretary of State John Hay expressed it in a vigorous way when Jews were persecuted in Rumania in 1902. Other precedents are numerous in support of the American theory, which the Administration ignores. Such distinguished premiers as Cass, Evarts, Blaine and Fish felt no restraint in maintaining the nation's self-respect through plain words to offending foreign authorities.

"When the slaughter of Christians was at its height, a committee of church ministers called on the President of the United States and urged some official expression of our people's outraged feelings. The Executive is quoted as saying that he did not favor any protest unless we were in a position to back it up. Within a fortnight our Government filed a protest, but not in behalf of human life. Instead, it was entered to protect oil interests in a part of contested territory."

Calls for "a Show-down."

The former Governor detailed Republican pledges made during the Presidential campaign, and, pointing out that two years had passed, asked if it was not "time for a show-down."

"The Administration has forfeited the people's confidence because it has stubbornly held to views that common sense defied," he declared. "Our people are tired of following a leadership that neither leads nor gets anywhere.

"When positive action is proposed for remedial purposes there invariably comes a hint from the Administration that something else is under way, but it never materializes. Can there be any more effective device to wear out the patience of a forbearing public?"

Mr. Cox agreed with Secretary Hughes that the problem of international relationships should be removed from politics, but remarked:

"But if Mr. Hughes continues trying to strait-jacket the soul of America and if the Administration goes on drifting then what? In that contingency this great question unavoidably becomes more of a political issue than it has ever been before."

Tells of Mandate of 1920.

Mr. Cox held that if the result of the 1920 election was a mandate against our entering the League of Nations, then it was a mandate for acceptance of the Republican alternative of an association of nations, and said:

"When the war closed a going concern, the League of Nations, was formed to substitute reason for force. Nations bound themselves together in agreement to go to conference rather than war and to put an end to the system of secret treaties that had plagued civilization. It is the only organized movement for this specific purpose. Men criticise it, but they have no substitute, either in created or creative form.

"The proposed Republican alternatives presented in the campaign of 1920 have come to nought. We must enter into some international arrangement or remain in isolation. There is no middle ground. Since those who suggested other plans have abandoned them, common sense opens the only avenue of service—service not only for Europe, but ourselves as well."

After discussing the provisions of the Treaty of Versailles and the part America was expected to take in the League of Nations, Mr. Cox continued:

"Now assuming that the administration will not settle this question—then what will we as Democrats do? What would Andrew Jackson have done in like circumstances? What did Jackson do when France violated her treaty with us and even Clay, Webster and Calhoun denied him Congressional appropriations for the adequate maintenance of our self-respect? The timid said he should delay matters. He went forward and France settled. What did Jackson do when the franchise for the Federal bank was to be renewed or rejected? The timid, even in his Cabinet, said he should go slow, but he went forward and crushed the monster menace. What did Jackson do when the Government funds were to be taken from the Federal bank? The timid again, even in his Cabinet, urged postponement in order to avoid a panic. He went forward. The bank was closed and when the Whigs later tried to resurrect it, John Tyler, the Whig President, recognized that Jackson was right and twice vetoed the bill.

"What would Andrew Jackson do now? He would follow the path which his clear vision always blazed for him, the path of duty. He would establish relationships with the nations of the world in order to save humanity. Recognizing the futility of waiting longer for alternatives he would ask America to join the only operating concern created for this critical need—the League of Nations. He would impose such conditions as would befit the dignity of our country and harmonize with composite public opinion of our people. Andrew Jackson never retreated when duty faced him. He was unschooled in the art of retreat. A solemn duty confronts the Democracy now and we must not retreat."

LONGWORTH BACKED FOR HOUSE LEADER

Ohio Delegation Unanimous for Him—Graham Supporters Name Committee.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Unanimous endorsement was given by the Ohio delegation today to Representative Nicholas Longworth in his candidacy for the Republican floor leadership of the House, and a committee to manage his campaign was appointed. At the same time the Illinois delegation appointed a committee to work in behalf of Representative Graham of that State, who received the endorsement of his delegation last week for the same post.

Indications today were that while Mr. Longworth still had what looked to be quite the best chance for success, the race would be sharply contested. Longworth supporters, including Mr. Fess, who will soon leave the House for the Senate, made the point that the understanding between the President and their candidate counted for much in his favor. The selection of Mr. Longworth, his lieutenants said, would assure unity of action between the White House and the floor leader, which they evidently did not believe would necessarily exist if Mr. Graham won.

Conservative members of the House want a Republican caucus held about the last day of February, at which candidates for Speaker, floor leader and whip would be nominated, but the Progressive-Radicals who are backing Mr. Graham are against this plan. They want to wait until the new Congress comes into being and they argue that to hold a caucus now would be unfair, as about thirty-five Republicans newly elected to the next House would not be present. The Graham faction counts on votes from the new Republicans in the coming Congress.

Alliances of various kinds are rumored. For one thing, it is said that Mr. Longworth is quite willing to have Representative Tincher of Kansas, a prominent farm bloc member, selected as the Republican whip. On the other hand it is said that the Graham forces want to put Mr. Tincher on their ticket. Another candidate for whip is Representative Clarke of New York, whose delegation has endorsed him for that place.

Support for Longworth will come principally from the Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York delegation, as well as from New England, while the Graham backers are counting upon a large share of Middle Western support. As the Graham movement is directed not only against Longworth but against the re-election of Gillett as Speaker, the Ohio man is supposed to be able to capture practically all the Gillett votes.

The campaign committee appointed to act for Longworth includes Representatives Begg, Burton and Kearns of Ohio. Representative Graham's committee is composed of Messrs. McKenzie, Williams, Sproul, Chindblom and Funk of Illinois.

Another meeting of the Illinois delegation will be held Friday, when an advisory committee made up of men from other States will be appointed to assist in the campaign.

Graham adherents talked today around the lobbies about the "necessity of injecting new blood" into the House leadership, but the fact that Longworth has been in Congress twenty years with the exception of one term, while Graham is a comparative newcomer, having taken his seat in 1917, will solidify opposition to the Illinois man.

PREDICTS HIGHER PRICES.

Harvard Economic Service Says Advance May Continue Through 1923.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 17.—Commodity prices during the first half of the present year are expected to advance, with a strong probability that the upward trend will prevail for the entire year, the Harvard Economic Service said today in its weekly letter. The present price structure and economic conditions were not calculated to halt the upward tendency, the letter said.

In 1922, the letter added, the upward movement amounted to a rise in general price level of approximately 13 per cent. This was accounted for by marked advances in the prices of metals, building materials and farm products. Such a jump in one year was not to be found in any one of the business cycles between 1904 and 1914, the greatest rise taking place in the three-year period of 1904-7, when it attained 17 per cent., but required three years for its completion.

SAYS COAL ECONOMY MUST BE PRACTICED

Goethals Warns Householders They Must Use More Substitutes or Have Cold Homes.

MEETS DISTRICT FUEL HEADS

Kips Bay Profiteers Are Checked—Free Stations Report Increase in Distribution.

More soft coal or coke must be burned by householders if an even more acute shortage is to be averted during the rest of January and the month of February, General George W. Goethals, State Fuel Administrator, declared yesterday. While no orders for the use of these fuels as substitutes for anthracite were issued, General Goethals said that the supply of pea coal and steam sizes which the Fuel Administration had recommended as substitutes was dwindling rapidly.

"One of the reasons why the State of New York has not suffered acutely from the 40 per cent. shortage of domestic anthracite," General Goethals said, "has been the larger use of small sizes of anthracite, such as pea and buckwheat. These sizes, once despised, gradually became popular in preference to soft coal. They have now become almost as hard to get as stove and nut sizes.

"If the stove and furnace are to be kept going during the remainder of January and all of February, the consumer must provide himself with soft coal or coke to the extent of at least 25 per cent. of his needs."

General Goethals said there was a general erroneous impression that coke is a dangerous fuel to burn because of danger of asphyxiation. "As a matter of fact, in the process of becoming coke the gas is extracted and coke is, therefore, one of the safest fuels that can be used," he said. "In addition, coke is clean and makes the hottest kind of a fire. Hence consumers are urged by the Administration to take advantage of the Consolidated Gas Company's coke stations as an emergency relief," he added.

Where the Stations Are.

The stations are at the following points: Manhattan—Northeast corner of Fourteenth Street and Avenue C; northeast corner of Twenty-first Street and Avenue A; northeast corner of 110th Street and First Avenue; West Sixty-fifth Street, west of Tenth Avenue. Bronx—East 138th Street and East River; 539 Courtlandt Avenue. Long Island City—Webster and Vernon Avenues; Flushing, 32 Myrtle Avenue. The coke is sold at twenty-five cents a bushel and must be carried away from the stations.

General Goethals said that there was plenty of soft coal. Anthracite shipments, he said, were well above the allotment, and there was no decrease because of the recent bad weather. The cold wave which arrived yesterday was severe enough, however, to cause greater consumption. As an indication of this it was said that the Mayor's Committee of Women gave out 500 tickets for free coal yesterday as compared with 270 the previous day. Prolonged severe weather will also mean a delay of shipments, fuel officials fear, because of its effect on locomotives, many of which are out of repair.

General Goethals conferred yesterday with a group of the district administrators regarding the general situation in this State. The district administrators who attended the meeting were Arthur S. Learoyd, New York; Albert E. Cluett, Troy; Clarence B. Kilner, Saratoga Springs; C. A. Chase, Syracuse; M. D. Thompson, Elmira; Edward B. Holmes, Buffalo, and his assistant, G. L. Couch; M. S. Miller, Rochester, and A. W. Lawrence, Bronxville. Members of the administration staff present were Harry T. Peters, W. H. Williams, R. Stephens, G. N. Snider, J. W. Lieb, J. F. Birmingham, George Barr Baker, H. E. Wick, E. W. Kahn and Colonel C. W. Wickersham, counsel.

On complaint of the Kips Bay Neighborhood Association that dealers on East Forty-sixth Street were profiteering the police made an investigation yesterday and reported that two peddlers were charging $24 to $26 a ton. Warning was issued by the Fuel Administration that unless the practice was stopped their supply of coal would be shut off.

HARTFORD LEGISLATORS RIDE ON FREIGHT TRAINS

Special to The New York Times.

HARTFORD, Conn., Jan. 17.—Some members of the Connecticut Legislature had to ride on a freight train yesterday in order to reach their homes, with the result that the newly appointed joint committee on railroads held an emergency session in the Speaker's room immediately after adjournment this afternoon to decide how to make the New Haven Railroad furnish better service. It was voted to authorize the Senate and House chairmen to draft a resolution to be presented to the House tomorrow. This resolution, while requesting an explanation for the present service and a promise by the New Haven road of improved service, will in fact cite the company management to appear before the Assembly for a general inquiry into service conditions.

One committee member, living in Brookfield, Fairfield County, near the New York State line, said he reached home every night in time to look over his stock, and then turn around and start back to Hartford if he was to be in time for the next day's session. Others who related trying experiences suggested receivership and a change of management as possible solutions for the present problem.

BRUNEN'S SLAYER GETS LONG TERM IN PRISON

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Jan. 17.—From twenty to thirty years will be served in the State Prison at Trenton by Charles M. Powell, who confessed he killed John Brunen at Riverside last March. Today he pleaded non vult when arraigned before Justice Kalisch. The plea was accepted in view of Powell's assistance to the State in convicting Harry C. Mohr, sentenced last week to life imprisonment at Trenton following his conviction Dec. 22 as a conspirator in the murder.

At the same time Mohr was convicted his sister, Mrs. Doris Brunen, widow of the murdered man, was acquitted.

Justice Kalisch said the plea of non vult was accepted under an act of 1917 and under a precedent established by the Supreme Court in a Camden case in 1870, when the court said that an accomplice was entitled to consideration if the prosecution took advantage of the assistance that he was prepared to give. Mrs. Powell, who has been living in Mount Holly for several months, was in court with her husband. No emotion was shown by either when sentence was pronounced.

Mohr's counsel, Walter H. Keown, made it known today that he proposed to carry Mohr's conviction to the Court of Errors and Appeals.

MINERS DENOUNCE DESIGNS OF REDS

ACTION BY EXECUTIVE BOARD

John L. Lewis, President of the United Mine Workers of America, made public last night a report of the action of the Executive Board, replying to frequent charges that the mine workers' organization was controlled and dominated by radicals. The report officially denounces all radicalism and Bolshevism and scores the attempts of the radicals to destroy the American labor movement.

The action was taken as the result of a request of the district organization of the union in Nova Scotia, which asked if it was permissible to affiliate with the Red Trade Union International. A subcommittee of the executive committee drew up a report in which it declared that no unit affiliated with the mine workers could join the Red Trade Union International and the Nova Scotia Union was asked to withdraw its application for affiliation with Moscow. If the union fails to comply with this request it will be suspended and the mine workers' general organization will assume control of the district.

The report declared that the Red Trade Union International had for its aim the destruction of the bona fide trade union movement. Quoting the revolutionary sections of the Red Trade Union International to show that the Moscow program was in direct contravention to the practices of the United Mine Workers, it was declared that the latter organization believed in the principle of collective bargaining and the sanctity of contracts. The report continues:

"Toward this union-wrecking movement the usual sentiment within the great and genuine trade unions is regret that anywhere working people can be found so woefully deficient in the knowledge of trade unionism that they will blindly follow the false teachings of the propagators of such movements.

"Impatient resentment at social wrongs may prompt wild attempts for the abolition of capitalism. Organizations like the Red International may proclaim world happiness through the abolition of collective bargaining of the inequitable wage system, but it remains for the trade union movement to continue its work with unfailing and direct practicality. It is our purpose to continue the onward march of progress to greater and better days for the United Mine Workers of America through the safe, sane, orderly and lawful methods of the American labor movement. We cannot subscribe, give comfort or sympathy to the promotion of an organization whose chief claim to fame lies in its attempt to destroy institutions such as the United Mine Workers of America."

JURY CORRUPTION ALLEGED IN BOSTON

BOSTON, Jan. 17.—Charges of wholesale bribery, corruption and "fixing" of juries in Suffolk County were made by Attorney General Allen in his last annual report to the Legislature today. Accompanying the report were extracts from an alleged confession by William J. Corcoran, former District Attorney of Middlesex County, on matters relating to a so-called bribery ring of attorneys.

Recommending the creation of a commission to pass on the qualifications of jurors, the retiring Attorney General reviewed in detail his recent experiences in proceedings brought before regular and special Grand Juries before whom he sought indictments of Pelletier, Daniel H. Coakley, a disbarred Boston attorney, officials of the closed Hanover and Cosmopolitan Trust Companies and others.

The Corcoran "confession" set forth Corcoran's own story of what he knew regarding the Pelletier charges, in which Meyer Berman and others were alleged to have been mulcted of $50,000 on false charges.

When the last special Grand Jury was called, Mr. Allen asserted, a son-in-law of Daniel H. Coakley was reported to have made inquiries about members and to have told certain persons that there was "a big bunch of money available."

Mr. Allen asserted that there were men in the jury room who said they would not vote to indict either Pelletier or Coakley, no matter what the evidence against them might be. According to reports which came to the attention of the Attorney General's office, the President of the Cosmopolitan Trust Company was approached and told that if he would pay a certain amount of money the Grand Jury would hear him and would return a "no bill" in his case.

Because of the "wholesale corruption and attempted fixing of juries," Mr. Allen said, he declined to present further evidence against Pelletier to the last special Grand Jury, although he had additional evidence of cases which were not known at the time of the Pelletier removal proceedings, in three of which, he said, the amount alleged to have been extorted was $490,000.

Britons Seek Work in Ruhr Mines.

Officials of the consulate say nothing can be done in this connection, as no official instructions have been received from France.

very soon, is expected to come as something of a shock to independent producers, who hitherto have been in position to bargain between two booking offices, whereas now they may find themselves compelled to accept the best terms vouchsafed them by a single agency.

There are fifty-three theatres in New York offering legitimate attractions. There are a few independent owners and operators, such as A. H. Woods, the Selwyns and H. H. Frazee, but some of the New York houses of such men already are in close alliance with one or the other party to the combine now under way. The Shuberts and Erlanger, it is estimated, now control about four-fifths of the available houses, and, according to the best information obtainable, they control the stages throughout the country in about the same proportion.

The following theatres are listed in the present Erlanger combination, a few of which, however, are independently owned or operated: The Empire, Lyceum, Globe, Henry Miller's, Earl Carroll, Sam H. Harris, Belasco, Daly's Sixty-third Street, Hudson, Hippodrome, Fulton, Music Box, Eltinge, Gaiety, Cort, Forty-eighth Street, Klaw, Liberty, George M. Cohan, Vanderbilt, Knickerbocker, New Amsterdam Theatre and Roof.

The theatres listed in the Shuberts' combination, to which some exceptions as to ownership or operation also apply, are: Broadhurst, Winter Garden, Ambassador, Shubert, Bayes, Central, Astor, Apollo, Times Square, Selwyn, Booth, Longacre, Morosco, Princess, Frazee, Garrick, Maxine Elliott's, Ritz, Republic, Bijou, Little, Century Theatre and Roof, Jolson's Fifty-ninth Street, Comedy, Forty-ninth Street, Thirty-ninth Street, Casino, Forty-fourth Street, Playhouse, National and Belmont.

ARKANSAS STRIKERS JAILED FOR ARSON

WITHSTANDS VIGILANTES

Latter Demand Mayor Resign, but He Refuses—Governor Forces Inquiry Into Lynching.

Special to The New York Times.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Jan. 17.—Legal procedure today displaced mob violence at Harrison, headquarters of the Missouri & North Arkansas Railroad, where a striking former employe of the road was lynched early yesterday morning. Two other strikers are on their way to the State penitentiary to serve terms for crimes of sabotage, to which they pleaded guilty in the Boone County Circuit Court this morning.

"Red" Orr and Luther Wise appeared before Judge Shinn this morning, and after pleading guilty to charges of arson in connection with the burning of railroad bridges, were sentenced to serve seven years each in prison. Deputy Sheriffs hastily removed them from Harrison, and started with them for Little Rock. It is said there were no threats of mob action against the two men, but Sheriff Bob Shaddox of Boone County, who has taken control of a situation that escaped from the municipal authorities of Harrison, was unwilling to take a chance on the mob spirit asserting itself again.

For a while this morning there was danger that the courageous Sheriff would lose his grip on the situation, but the trouble passed quickly. The threatened break came when a young woman, Miss Gertrude Branham, daughter of an alleged strike sympathizer, fired twice into a crowd of men who were escorting her father to the building where the "citizens' court" was in session questioning strikers and their friends. She was quickly overpowered. No one was injured and there were no further developments.

Judge Shinn this morning forfeited a $10,000 bond made by Albert Stevens, a former conductor, who is charged with arson. Stevens failed to appear in court for trial. The bondsman is George O'Neal, hotel proprietor, who was whipped by the mob yesterday.

Traveling along with several union men who have fled from Harrison since the "Committee of 1,000" took charge is former Night City Marshal Rash, said to have been in sympathy with the strikers. Rash left early yesterday morning. Alderman George Minicus, also accused of favoring the strikers, has resigned. The "committee" also called upon Mayor J. L. Clute to resign, but the Mayor refused and still holds his office.

Reports from Harrison today are that few strikers remain in that city or in other cities along the 140-mile route of the Missouri & Northern Arkansas road.

J. P. "Pete" Venable, Secretary of the Harrison local of the Order of Railway Conductors and a leader in the two years' strike of the M. & N. A. employes, arrived in Little Rock this afternoon. Venable is said to be the man the mob wanted when it seized and lynched C. E. Gregor yesterday. He attended the meeting of strike leaders at Chicago on Sunday and was on his way back to Harrison yesterday when he was met by his wife, who warned him not to return to that city. He came on to Little Rock instead.

Venable called on Governor McCrae this afternoon and gave the Governor a report of what he called a "horrible situation." Union men, their wives and families are being persecuted, he said, and he urged the Governor to send troops to the scene in spite of the assurances of Sheriff Shaddox that the situation is under control. The Governor took no action regarding the use of troops ordered out yesterday and recalled later on the advice of the Sheriff.

After the House of Assembly in the State Legislature had sent to committee the Senate resolution calling for an investigation of the M. & N. A. strike situation, Governor McCrae sent another message to that body, asking that it adopt the resolution, so that the investigation could be had. Late this afternoon the House recalled the resolution from the committee and adopted it. A committee was appointed and instructed to go to Harrison tomorrow to begin its investigation.

In the meantime a request has been made of Federal District Judge Youmans of Fort Smith by the "Citizens' Committee" that he call a special Federal Grand Jury to investigate the entire situation.

United States Marshal J. L. Russell has been on the scene for two days, making an investigation ordered last week by Attorney General Daugherty.

In an effort to bring to justice the party or parties guilty of lynching E. C. Gregor, a railroad striker, and flogging two union sympathizers in Harrison, Ark., the American Civil Liberties Union yesterday wired Governor McRae of Arkansas offering the services of its attorneys and investigators in connection with any inquiry undertaken.

John E. Edgerton, President of the National Association of Manufacturers, also issued a statement declaring that the lynching of union workers in Arkansas by a mob of citizens demands drastic and immediate punishment, "exactly as the murder of nonunion workers at Herrin, Ill."

Standing squarely on this position, Mr. Edgerton sent a telegram to Governor McRae of Arkansas, asserting that the crime "warrants the severest condemnation and censure by the general public, and the immediate official investigation by the authorities of the State will be warmly applauded by all citizens who believe in the law of the land."

Report Twenty Strikers Flogged.

FORT SMITH, Ark., Jan. 17.—A dispatch from The Times Record staff correspondent at Harrison says that twenty strikers were severely whipped by citizens at Leslie last night.

HARRISON, Ark., Jan. 17.—With the Circuit Court and the Grand Jury in session early tonight, and no intimation given as to the probable results of their deliberations, speculation centred on the activities of the "citizens' court"—a self-styled tribunal consisting of twelve men appointed yesterday by "the Committee of 1,000" to investigate the recent bridge burning and other destruction of property along the lines of the Missouri & North Arkansas Railway. The "citizens' court" late today announced that it would give a complete statement of its "findings" later.

Report Twenty-five Indictments.

JOPLIN, Mo., Jan. 17.—Twenty-five indictments were returned by a Grand Jury at Harrison, Ark., yesterday in connection with its investigation of bridge burning and other depredations on the Missouri & North Arkansas Railroad, Circuit Judge J. M. Spinn of Harrison, told The Joplin Globe over the long-distance telephone tonight.

FIRST DEGREE MURDER VERDICT FOR NORKIN

Jury Deliberated Four and a Half Hours—Reported Early This Morning.

Reubin Norkin, indicted for complicity in the murder of Mrs. Abraham Becker, the Bronx "pit" victim, was convicted of murder in the first degree last night by a jury before Judge Gibbs in the Bronx County Court. The jury began its deliberations at 9 o'clock and returned at 1:50 this morning with a verdict.

Abraham Becker, husband of Mrs. Becker, was convicted a few weeks ago on a charge of murder. Becker lured his wife to a lot at 140th Street and Southern Boulevard, where he killed her with a blunt instrument. Becker, according to the testimony, then threw the body into a pit. Norkin was charged with having assisted in the crime. At the trial, which has lasted two weeks, Norkin's defense was that he was an unwilling witness to the crime, having ridden to the scene on the running board of Becker's auto which he had repaired.

CAPPER BILL GOES OVER.

But Senate Expects to Vote on Farm Credits Measure Today.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Unexpected and prolonged discussion of minor amendments and extraneous subjects developed today in the Senate's consideration of farm credits legislation, and a vote on the Capper bill again went over. No further opposition to the bill developed, however, and its managers said final disposition of the measure tomorrow was assured.

The Senate rejected, 43 to 28, an amendment by Senator Fletcher of Florida, to the provision increasing from $10,000 to $25,000 the maximum individual loans permitted by farm land banks. Senator Fletcher sought to prohibit loans of the maximum amount until small farmers applying for $10,000 were taken care of. He expressed fear that the banks' funds might be taken up by live stock producers and other large borrowers and loans denied to small farmers.

Opponents of the amendment declared the $25,000 maximum was needed by operators of large farms and ranches.

Senator Dial of South Carolina offered as an amendment his bill to revise the Smith-Lever Cotton Future Trading law. A vote on his proposal went over until tomorrow. The measure would change the number of grades which could be tendered in completing cotton future trades.

BUTTON ORDER STIRS POLICE

Policemen are angry over an order recently issued by Commissioner Enright which calls on every member of the force to purchase three sets of new buttons at $2 a set. The patrolmen claim that they cannot afford them and superior officers say there is no need for them.

It was said that in Brooklyn and Queens policemen are circulating a "round robin" protesting against the new order, while policemen in the other boroughs contemplate forwarding protests to Enright through their captains. The order is said to have emanated from complaints made to Commissioner Enright that the buttons on the uniforms were tarnished.

SOFT COAL MEETING TO AVERT A STRIKE

Operators and Miners Meet Here Today in an Effort to Reach Agreement.

BOTH SIDES EXPECT PEACE

A Successful Result Would Affect 450,000 Workers, Producing 375,000,000 Tons Yearly.

Representatives of coal operators and miners in the central competitive field, comprising Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania will meet today in the Hotel Pennsylvania in an attempt to reach an agreement that will avert the necessity of a strike in the bituminous field on April 1, when the present agreement expires.

The meeting was called by John L. Lewis, President of the United Mine Workers and Phil A. Penna, Secretary of the Indiana Bituminous Coal Operators' Association, following the collapse of the Chicago conference on Jan. 5. Ellis Searles, editor of the United Mine Workers' Journal, said that both sides were entering the conference with optimistic expectations as to the outcome.

An agreement at the conference would affect directly 200,000 miners in the central competitive field. As an agreement in the central competitive field would serve as the basis for agreements in the outlying fields, a successful conclusion of the negotiations would affect approximately 450,000 miners in the bituminous fields of the country, producing a total of 375,000,000 tons of coal annually.

The miners have suggested to the operators a two-year agreement in order that the industry may be stabilized. There has been general talk among the operators of a one-year agreement.

The conference will be attended by eight delegates representing the miners from each of the four States, and seats will be open for a similar number of operators, making sixty-four representatives in all. In addition the union will have its international officers, including Mr. Lewis, Phil Murray, Vice President; William Green, Secretary-Treasurer, and District Presidents Frank Farrington, Illinois; Lee Hall, Ohio; John Reesler, Indiana, and P. T. Fagan, Western Pennsylvania.

Mr. Penna will head the operators, and it was said last night that operators from Ohio, Illinois and Indiana would be present. There was some doubt as to whether the Western Pennsylvania operators would appear. The conference will be presided over by an operator who will be agreed upon by both parties. It was reported last night that Mr. Penna would probably be chosen. The miners will be allowed to name the Secretary and they will chose Secretary-Treasurer Green.

Following the work of reorganization the miners will present their demands. The operators will hold a private caucus and may serve the union with counter-demands. Committees from each side will then be designated to confer in an effort to prepare a form of agreement to be submitted to the entire conference.

WIFE OF COMPOSER SENT TO ELLIS ISLAND

Arrived With Gladys Cooper and Lady Tichborne—Released After Observation.

Mrs. Frederick Thompson, wife of the English composer of "The Bing Boys" and other musical comedies, who arrived yesterday from London on the White Star liner Olympic with Lady Tichborne and Gladys Cooper, the actress, as the guests of Gilbert Miller, manager of the Empire Theatre, was detained by the immigration authorities and sent to Ellis Island for examination as to her mental condition.

Dr. Miles Prior, senior surgeon of the Olympic, expressed surprise at the action taken by the immigration authorities. He told the Public Health officer that she was suffering only from exhaustion after severe seasickness. Rest and nourishment, he said, would soon restore her. His diagnosis was confirmed by Mr. Miller's physician, who hurried to the ship in response to a telephone summons.

Miss Cooper went when she was told that the immigration officials insisted upon sending Mrs. Thompson to Ellis Island on a barge with 236 steerage aliens. With Lady Tichborne the actress went to the Ritz-Carlton to await developments.

On arrival at Ellis Island Mrs. Thompson went before the chief medical officer and was soon released. She went with Mr. Miller to the Ritz-Carlton, where it was said last night that she was still very weak, but that speedy improvement was expected.

LARKIN PARDONED; LEAVES SING SING

The Court of Appeals has decided that the issuance of this manifesto constituted a violation of the statute. It is my duty to recognize to the fullest the authority of that great Court. And yet I find that two of the judges dissented from the judgment in an opinion strongly maintaining that Larkin was unjustly convicted, in that he was not advocating anarchy (which is the absence of all organized Government), but merely a new and radically different form of organized Government.

Executive clemency is the reserved power of the State, through the Governor, to mitigate the undue rigors of the law and in a proper cause to temper justice with mercy. That two judges of our highest court regarded this conviction as legally unsound is a circumstance which I take into account, though, of course, standing alone it would be an inadequate reason. But in this case I must consider it in connection with the following additional circumstances:

Larkin's prison record has been good and the application for his release has the approval of many highly respected citizens, including that of the Assistant District Attorney who conducted the prosecution.

Moreover, there is no evidence that Larkin ever endeavored to incite any specific act of violence or lawlessness. What he did was to voice a faith that in the ultimate development of our political institutions there should be the radical change which I have described and condemned. Substantially his offense was nothing more than the issuance of a misguided opinion that in the remote future our system of Government should be changed by a process abhorrent to our institutions. Our State rests too firmly upon the devotion of its citizens to require for its protection an imprisonment of five years for the mere expression of an erroneous, or even an illegal, political doctrine, unaccompanied by any overt act.

Moreover, I believe that the safety of the State is affirmatively impaired by the imposition of such a sentence for such a cause.

Political progress results from the clash of conflicting opinions. The public assertion of an erroneous doctrine is perhaps the surest way to disclose the error and make it evident to the electorate. And it is a distinct disservice of the State to impose, for the utterance of a misguided opinion, such extreme punishment as may tend to deter, in proper cases, that full and free discussion of political issues which is a fundamental of Democracy.

Stripped of its legalistic aspects, this, to my mind, is a political case where a man has been punished for the statement of his beliefs. From the legal point of view, it is a case where a man has received, during the period of unusual popular excitement following the close of the war, too severe a sentence for a crime involving no moral turpitude. One of the prevailing opinions in the Court of Appeals stated that the judge of that Court recognized that "the sentence may have been too heavy for the offense." He has already served over two years in prison. This, in my judgment, fully expiates his offense. The State of New York does not seek vengeance and the ends of justice have already been amply met. For these reasons I grant the application.

(Signed) ALFRED E. SMITH.

The Other Prisoners.

The other prisoners whose freedom is being sought by the Civil Liberties Union are:

Minnie Kolmin, 40 years of age, convicted in the Bronx County Court last April and sentenced to a term of two years and three months at Auburn.

Anna Leissman, 40 years of age, convicted in the Bronx County Court last May and sent to prison under an indeterminate sentence of from one year and nine months to six years at Auburn.

Paul Manko, 25 years old, convicted in the Bronx County Court in June, 1921, and sent to Sing Sing for a term of from two and one-half to nine years. Manko became temporarily insane while in prison and was sent to Dannemora, where he is now confined.

Ignatz Misher, 38 years old, of Cortland, who was sent to Auburn prison on June 20, 1920, under a sentence of from five to ten years.

Misher was sent to prison for distributing copies of a communist manifesto in front of a church in Cortland attended by State Senator Lusk. Paul Manko also was found guilty of distributing copies of the manifesto and a pamphlet bearing the illuminating title "Seeing Red."

Larkin Comes Directly Here.

James J. Larkin, the Irish agitator, who received an unconditional pardon from Governor Smith after serving two years of a five-year sentence for criminal anarchy, left Sing Sing Prison at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon and came immediately to New York City. A special messenger named Hickey took the pardon from Albany, and Warden Lawes immediately released the prisoner.

It was the first time in five years that a prisoner in Sing Sing has received an unconditional pardon. Generally a pardoned prisoner is released subject to parole, and he does not obtain his freedom until the Board of Parole acts.

It was rumored about Sing Sing yesterday that the United States immigration authorities would rearrest Larkin immediately upon his release and deport him, but no Federal representative was present when he walked through the prison gate a free man today.

"I am awfully thankful," said Larkin, when the news of his pardon was conveyed to him by the Warden. "I never deserved to be sent here in the first place."

Larkin entered Sing Sing on May 3, 1920. He was allowed out for three months when his case was on appeal, but when the decision of the higher court went against him he was taken back. He would have been eligible for release, with a year and a half off for good behavior, on Jan. 7, 1924.

OFFERS $1,000 FOR SAILOR WHO HIT HIM

UNPROVOKED, HE ASSERTS

Has Been Kept From Business by Cuts Requiring Ten Stitches on the Face.

Yat H. Tsang, a Chinese merchant, yesterday announced a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the identification, trial and conviction of an American sailor who assaulted him on a Sixth Avenue elevated train last Friday night. According to Tsang, the sailor attacked him without provocation, except that he was Chinese. The sailor struck him several times on the face, he says, breaking his glasses and cutting such gashes under and over the left eye that ten stitches had to be taken by an ambulance surgeon from Flower Hospital.

Tsang is head of the Sincere Trading Company, 16 and 18 East Thirtieth Street, importers of Chinese goods. He is about 30 years old, married and lives in an apartment at 148 East Thirtieth Street. News of the attack became public after he had sent an advertisement of his reward offer to newspapers. He offered $100 "for information as to name of warship on American sailor's hat who assaulted Chinese gentleman on a downtown train of the Sixth Avenue elevated road, between Fifty-ninth and Fifty-third Street station, on Friday night, Jan. 12, 1923, at about 12:15 P. M." He offered $900 additional "upon aid in prosecution of same and conviction."

Struck Without Warning.

In his apartment last night Tsang told the following story of the assault:

"I had been spending the evening with friends uptown. Leaving for home late at night, I boarded a Ninth Avenue elevated train at 104th Street and rode down to Sixty-sixth Street. There I changed to a Sixth Avenue train because it was more convenient to my home.

"There was a sailor sitting opposite me when I seated myself in the Sixth Avenue train. He was a man between 20 and 25, of medium height, with dark hair and the regular United States Navy uniform, with a coat. I paid no attention to him and did not interfere with him in any way. He said nothing to me until after the train had passed Fifty-ninth Street. Then he called across the aisle and asked me to sit by him. I still ignored him, so he came over and started to sit by me.

"'What nationality are you?' he asked.

"'Chinese,' I said.

"All of a sudden, without saying anything more, he hit me with his fist and broke my glasses. I have very poor eyes, so when the glasses fell on the floor I could not see at all. But he kept on punching me in the eye and on the mouth until the train got to Fifty-third Street.

Ten Stitches in Face.

"There were about ten American gentlemen in the same car, but they did not do anything, except one gentleman, who picked up my glasses and my gloves. When the train stopped at Fifty-third Street, the sailor ran out of the car. I asked the conductor to blow the whistle for the police or to try to stop the sailor, but he wouldn't do anything. Then I got off the car and went to the ticket agent, and got him to telephone Police Headquarters.

"By and by, a long time after the sailor had escaped, two policemen came, and an ambulance from Flower Hospital. They took me to the East Fifty-first Street Police Station, where I told the police what had happened, and the ambulance doctor took the stitches in my face and put on a bandage. I stayed there until about 3:30 o'clock when I took a taxi home. I have been home ever since.

"I hope that some gentleman who was in the train can tell me something, because I want to find out why that sailor, whom I never saw before, beat me so, and I want to have him punished."

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Jan. 17.—August Ketchum of New York City was instantly killed in an automobile accident on Mount Pisgah, four miles north of Cripple Creek gold camp, at noon today. SIMON TAKES CHAIRMANSHIP

Heads Trades Committee to Promote Business Arbitration.

The chairmanship of the Trades Committee, which is to participate with the general committee headed by Charles M. Schwab in the city-wide movement to promote arbitration and to enlist trade support for the Arbitration Society of America was accepted yesterday by Franklin Simon, President of Franklin Simon & Co. and of the National Garment Retailers' Association.

Mr. Simon announced his acceptance at a meeting of prominent business men, under the chairmanship of Manny Strauss, at the Lawyers' Club, 115 Broadway. Mr. Simon expressed the belief that arbitration will help relieve the courts as well as help lighten the burden for business men by affording a means for the speedy and economical settlement of disputes that relate to fact or trade customs.

affidavits, setting forth the testimony elicited at the preliminary examination and a trial will be held in the manner prescribed by the statute, either before the court or a referee, for the purpose of determining whether or not the injunction ordered should be made permanent.

Under the Martin act the Attorney General is empowered to investigate, either upon complaint or otherwise, any scheme involving ficitious purchase or sale of securities or any practice, transactions or business relating to dealings in stocks and bonds. He may compel by subpoena any persons charged with fraud to submit to examination under oath, and may require the production of books and papers which he believes will aid him in determining the true nature of a suspect's activities.

Probably the most effective provision of the statute has to do with the power of the Attorney General to enjoin speedily suspected swindlers from continuing their business. This provision is designed to facilitate the closing up of bucket shops and holding the managers and agents pending an examination looking to indictment.

TUTANKHAMEN TOMB DAZZLES EGYPTIANS

Notables Are "Stupefied" by Beauty, Finesse and Magnificence of the Treasures.

CLEARS PERIOD IN HISTORY

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LUXOR, Egypt, Jan. 17.—This has been a quiet week at Tutankhamen's tomb as yesterday was the usual weekly holiday for the native staff and today Sarwat Pasha, ex-Premier; Sidky Pasha, ex-Minister of Finance, and Semeica Pasha, ex-Minister of Agriculture, with their families and a few other Egyptian notables, inspected the treasure first in Tutankhamen's ante-chamber and later in the tomb of Seti II. where the objects removed are being cleaned and preserved. Their visit occupied the most of the morning.

In response to questions from THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent later they declared that they felt "stupified" at what they had seen. The specimens of Egyptian art which they had had an opportunity to admire were, they said, unimaginably beautiful. They added that their wildest flights of imagination could not have prepared them for the grace, finesse and magnificence of these treasures, which had touched their pride as Egyptians.

They considered that such perfection was the most convincing proof of the high civilization reached by Egyptians thirty centuries ago. This period had always been a secret to them, and these treasures help to make it immortal. They concluded with expressions of the deepest appreciation for Lord Carnarvon and Howard Carter's work, patience and self-abnegation.

There was considerable disappointment that nothing was removed from the tomb today, but with the inspiring beauty of the day and general geniality, the disappointment was replaced by a common effort to make a picnic among these famous tombs. The picnic ultimately was successful.

Hopes that the Egyptian Government would broadcast information about the treasures in the tomb were dampened today by the statement of M. Lacau, Director General of the Egyptian Antiquities Department, to the press that he read the Egyptian Government's order in the local press relative to an official source of information for the correspondents, but intended to oppose it on the grounds that it was not a matter wherein the Government was entitled to interfere, pending the conclusion of Lord Carnarvon's exploitation of this information.

It is not expected that any objects will be removed tomorrow, as Mr. Carter hopes to erect a steel gate outside the tomb, which now holds treasures worth many millions of dollars. It is expected that the work of erection will occupy most of the day.

PLAN TO RESTORE STATE'S FORESTS

Plans for an intensive campaign to reforest idle lands of the State as replacements for the forests that have been denuded by excessive cutting were discussed yesterday by Alexander McDonald, State Conservation Commissioner, at a joint meting of the American and New York State Forestry Associations at the Hotel Commodore.

"New York, in common with other States, is faced with the problem of replacing its forests," Commissioner McDonald said. "It is not a case of saving them. The time for that has gone by.

"We are using in New York more than 1,250,000,000 feet of lumber a year. Three-quarters of this lumber comes from outside the State. We are cutting from our forests 350,000,000 feet and are growing only 70,000,000. In other words, we are cutting our forests five time as fast as they are growing, and we are using four times as much as we cut.

"In 1850 New York ranked first in the production of lumber and furnished about 20 per cent. of the annual lumber cut of the country. In 1919 New York ranked twenty-third and produced only 1 per cent.

"I believe New York State has laid the foundation for the replacement and intelligent use of its forest resources. Twenty years of practical experience has demonstrated that trees can be grown successfully and economically in the State nurseries and supplied to private owners at an average price of less than $8 a thousand. For planting on public land they are supplied free. During the last year more than 1,000,000 trees were supplied to municipalities for reforestration purposes."

As its contribution to the reforesting campaign, the State this year will plant 5,100,000 trees, Commissioner McDonald said. A campaign of education will be conducted to show that planted trees under proper management are a profitable investment.

At a meeting of the American Forestry Association, Colonel Henry S. Graves, dean of the Yale School of Forestry and former Chief Forester of the United States, was elected President of the organization. Henry M. Sage, former State Senator, of Albany, was elected President of the New York State Forestry Association.

SUNDAY ASSAILS DR. GRANT.

Special to The New York Times.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 17.—"It is time the churches drove from the pulpits preachers who are preaching false doctrines and blighting the faith of the people," was Billy Sunday's comment today on the statement of the Rev. Percy Stickney Grant of New York that the miracles of Christ were acts of autosuggestion and that the office of matrimony was not holy. Mr. Sunday is conducting a revival here and packing his tabernacle every night.

"You cannot tear the miracles of the Bible and leave the historical Christ intact," declared Sunday. "His miracles proclaim Him as divine. If Christ was not divine and raising folks from the dead and other miracles were simply autosuggestion, why doesn't somebody do it now? Ever hear of any one being raised from the dead by autosuggestion?

"The preacher who will put the miracles of Jesus on the same basis with Coué's asinine formula ought to get out of the Church. It is time the churches drove from the pulpits preachers who are preaching false doctrines and blighting the faith of the people. We have stood for it long enough.

"Failure of preachers to respect the authority and divine inspiration of the Bible is one of the prime causes today tending toward a disrespect of the authority of parents and the Church and the Government.

"One of the bulwarks of civilization has been the sanctity that Christianity has thrown around the marriage relation. To abolish that is the first step toward establishing the doctrine of free love.

"Any man has the right to speak and teach what he pleases, but he has not the right to stand in an orthodox pulpit and preach doctrines contrary to the authority of the Bible, and I propose to do all in my power to help drive from the pulpit those who oppose the Bible and its teachings."

Broadway at Ninth, New York

"Antiques of the Future" You Called Your Furniture

"That's a new conception," said a woman. "I have always loved antiques, but somehow I always thought of them as being made by hand."

So they are—antiques of today. Machinery wasn't developed when they were made.

But the antiques of the future will be made just as Wanamaker furniture is made—by machinery where machinery is best, by hand where hand work is best; but always out of the creative mind of the designer and worker.

In furniture, an antique, so-called, is an antique mainly because the lines and design are classical, purely representing a certain type and period. In addition the furniture should have been so well constructed that it will not fall apart in a hundred years or so.

The better grades of furniture being made today meet these tests: The designs are classical; the woods are more scientifically dried and seasoned than ever before; the construction is stronger because the machine aids the hand; and the finish is finer because in addition to being done by hand, as in the old days, we know more chemically about stains and dyes and finishes and are able to make them more artistic and permanent.

Yes, the "Antiques of the Future" are coming from this sale, because it offers the finest furniture that America produces, and some from England, too.

And it is all offered—our entire stock and large special purchases—at 10 to 50 per cent. less.

SPECIALIZED SERVICE — STREET FLOOR

BUSINESS MEN PRAISED

"Fifth Avenue was described as the "most beautiful street in the world" by one of America's foremost artists, was called "the national street" by a prominent publisher, and the Fifth Avenue Association, which has at heart the welfare and development of that thoroughfare, was cited as a model for the League of Nations at a luncheon given yesterday to the publishers and editors of leading magazines by the organization at the Hôtel Plaza. Charles Dana Gibson was toastmaster at the luncheon.

It was Gibson who described the beauty of the city's famous highway. He is the publisher of Life. After remarking that "editors were not half as ignorant as they look nowadays," he said:

"It is not necessary for you to bring us here to bring about our co-operation with you in civic matters. We have known of the work you are doing in behalf of Fifth Avenue, and I can assure you that we will always be willing to co-operate with you."

Mr. Gibson said that the group of business men organized to protect the interests and promote the advancement of Fifth Avenue were "a sort of League of Nations.

"If we could only get such a group of men to put the affairs of the world in order they would make a good job of it and we could have lasting peace," he declared.

Henry Collins Brown, editor of Valentine's Manual of Old New York, discussed real estate values, pointing out that as late as 1850 land within a stone's throw of where the Plaza now stands sold for a song. He said that the site of the home of Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Fifty-eighth Street and Fifth Avenue, sold then for $510. Corner lots at Fifty-seventh Street sold for $1,025.

He said the site of the home of Tiffany & Co. was once purchased from one Van Zorn for $15,000. The purchaser was called insane, but when the lots later sold for $45,000 he expressed the hope that such insanity might spread to the rest of the family.

Mr. Brown then described the school conducted by sisters of the late Andrew Green. He told how Elihu Root used to lecture to the students at this select school for young ladies.

The Old Fifth Avenue Hotel was described as a folly because it was so far uptown," Mr. Brown said, "it had what they called in those days a 'vertical staircase' by which was meant the first elevator in a New York hotel."

Herbert S. Houston, publisher of Our World, said that Fifth Avenue did not belong to New York City alone but to the whole United States. He described it as "the country's first outpost of welcome to visitors from other countries," and mentioned the rousing welcomes extended to Joffre, Foch, Albert, King of the Belgians and the ever youthful Clemenceau." Mr. Houston said in re-establishing peace in the world the United States Government should seek to apply the principle of co-operation as it was used by members of the Fifth Avenue Association.

"These scores of admirable things you have done in this association," he said, "were not individual things that concerned any one in particular, they were things that affected all of you. Therefore, you have joined hands and furnished an inspiring example of co-operation to America and to the world. To day what the world needs is a Fifth Avenue Association of Nations with the United States officially occupying an honored and useful place at the conference table."

"Keep it a real American, neighborly street, the most beautiful street in the world."

The committee, which arranged the luncheon, was headed by Harry A. Ahearn.

HEBREW UNION READY FOR GOLDEN JUBILEE

2,000 Delegates Expected at Convention Next Week—Nathan J. Miller Honored.

The final meeting of the Convention Committee of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations was held at the Hotel Astor last night, when reports of all committees working for the success of the Golden Jubilee Convention next week, were read.

Henry M. Goldfogle reported that there probably will be 2,000 delegates at the convention, which, he said, will bring together the best Jewish minds of the country. "The convention will not only arouse a great spirit for uplift, but will arouse the consciousness of American Jews and bring a better response to the call to the synagogue that is so necessary for the preservation of Judaism in America," he said.

Rabbi Joseph Silverman of Temple Emanu-El announced that Rabbi Jonah Wise of Portland, Ore., will occupy his pulpit at Fifth Avenue and Forty-third Street next Saturday morning. Many of the pulpits in New York will be occupied by out-of-town rabbis at services on Friday evening, Saturday morning and, in some temples, on Sunday morning. This has been brought about through the efforts of the Rally Committee, whose slogan is "Go to the synagogue."

A request was made that the New York delegates register at the Hotel Astor, where the convention will be held, on Sunday afternoon, to relieve the congestion which may occur on Monday when out-of-town representatives arrive. Preceding the business meeting, Nathan J. Miller, a member of the Executive Committee, was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the committee at the Astor. The dinner was in recognition of the work of Judaism in America. He will sail for Europe and Palestine Jan. 20.

FIRE ON BOARDWALK.

Guest Seized With Heart Disease as He Quits Atlantic City Hotel.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Jan. 17.—More than 100 guests of the Hotel Raleigh, St. Charles Place and the Boardwalk, were marched from the dining room early this evening when fire was discovered on the second floor. The blaze, apparently caused by a cigarette, threatened not only the Raleigh, but also the Lorraine Hotel, adjoining.

As Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Kahn of Philadelphia emerged from the smoke-filled lobby, Mr. Kahn collapsed. He was rushed to a hospital, where his condition was reported to be serious as a result of heart attack brought on by excitement.

When the fire had been put out the guests returned to their dinners. Fire Chief John Barnett estimated the damage at $250,000.

SAYS ENERGY FADED ON EVEREST CLIMB

PARTY WENT UP 27,235 FEET

George Leigh Mallory, a noted English mountain climber, arrived yesterday on the White Star liner Olympic from London to give a series of lectures on the Mount Everest expedition, of which he was one of the leaders. Mr. Mallory, who is about 30, gained his experience in the Swiss Alps. He was selected to make a preliminary trip to the Himalayas in 1921, and due largely to Mr. Mallory, it was said, the expedition sent out to India last year attained an altitude of 27,235 feet, the highest point known to have been reached and in sight of the summit.

Asked whether Mount Everest, which is 29,002 feet high, would ever be scaled, he replied:

"It is a gamble, of course. At the point where we stopped, fourteen hours would have brought us to the summit from the last camping place, but conditions were against us, night was coming on and our strength was giving out. The great trouble is that all your energy seems to evaporate. The mind is also affected."

"Did you take any alcoholic stimulant?"

"The medical advice was against it, but we did take a little brandy in the higher altitudes with good results. It seemed to give a mental stimulus and had no detrimental effect physically. The same is true of smoking. I never inhale, but smoking ordinary cigarettes in the usual way had no bad effect. Youth plays an important part in climbing to the high altitudes, and an older man would have been unable to get on without oxygen. The thing that tells most against older men is a lower degree of resistance in the arteries.

It has been said that the Tibetans and other people living at high altitudes have more red corpuscles in their blood than those living at a lower level. The red corpuscles supply the oxygen that is needed.

Mr. Mallory is a graduate of Magdalene College, Cambridge University, and is a Professor at the Charterhouse School near London when he is not pursuing his hobby. He says that another attempt may be made next year to reach the top of Mt. Everest and that the proceeds of his lecture tour here will go toward financing an expedition.

FORD EXPECTS AUTO TO END WAR FOREVER

It Teaches Use of Machinery, He Says, Which Will Make People Too Prosperous to Fight.

DETROIT, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—Henry Ford's industrial expansion program is world-wide, not national, in scope, and has been undertaken with the underlying motive of educating the people of the world to such a degree and of making them so prosperous that wars will be ended forever." This was disclosed today as the motive back of the manufacturer's desire to extend his operations into every part of the world.

Mr. Ford believes that "a busy, prosperous people do not stop work to make war; they go to war only when it is necessary to protect their homes or their ideals when these are menaced by some more idle nation."

"When the time comes that every one, everywhere, has a job, and lasting prosperity has been created as a result, the people of any nation will be too busy and too happy to even think about war," the manufacturer says. Therefore, it is pointed out by those in close touch with him, he is convinced that world industrial expansion, bringing with it prosperity for all peoples in all lands, automatically will make war impossible.

The manufacturer is known to believe that the automobile is the agent that will usher in the millenium of world peace.

"When the people of any country get to understand automobiles and use them daily, they will know considerably more about machinery," he declares. "Then, in the course of a few years agricultural machinery will appear in that country. Hundreds of bushels of grain will be produced where only a few were grown before. In many foreign countries the farmers know nothing of machinery. Probably they will not know it until they have learned to use automobiles.

"Machinery will help to make any country prosperous.

"There is another reason why world-wide use of motor cars will help to end war. That is in the increase of travel on the part of the persons of any country.

"In Mexico villages fight one another. If we could give every man in those villages an automobile, let him travel from his own home town to the other town, and permit him to find out that his neighbors, at heart, were his friends, rather than his enemies, Mexico would be pacified for all time.

"Russia could be saved by the advent of the automobile. It would educate the peasants by instruction in machinery. Other machinery would be brought in to till the fertile acres if the peasants once were taught to use it. There would be no more hunger anywhere in that country.

"The same is true, to a greater or less degree, of every country under the sun."

CIVIL ENGINEERS GATHER.

Leaders Favor Better Literary Training for Science Students.

More than 1,100 members of the American Society of Civil Engineers registered yesterday at the Engineering Societies Building, 33 West Thirty-ninth Street, headquarters for the seventieth annual meeting which will continue until tomorrow evening. Today the society will visit Lehigh University and the Bethlehem Steel Company at Bethlehem, Pa.

Engineering education was discussed at the afternoon session yesterday, which was held jointly with the Society for the Promotion of Engineering Education. The average engineer's inability to use good English and the narrowness of his training were deplored. John L. Harrington, President of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, suggested in a paper that engineering students also should include in the curriculum the study of English and one other language, history, logic, philosophy, literature, psychology and politics.

COCO TO IDENTIFY MER ROUGE SLAYERS

Attorney General Issues Statement That State Will Call Star Witnesses Soon.

EXPECTS TO NAME 5 OF BAND

KLAN TRIES OBSTRUCTION

Special to The New York Times.

BASTROP, La., Jan. 17.—Attorney General Coco announced tonight that what the State believes to be positive identification of members of the hooded band which spirited Watt Daniel and Thomas F. Richards to their death will be offered soon at the open hearing.

Two important witnesses for whom the authorities have been searching since the investigation began have been located and have signified their willingness to appear in court, it was learned tonight. They are the traveling man in the stalled automobile who saw the death truck pass with the bodies of Daniel and Richards on the way to Lake La Fourche and the man who sold the truck and the touring car used by the murderers. The latter witness, it is said, has supplied the authorities with license numbers and the numbers of the motors and other parts.

The Attorney General made a public statement to newspaper men soon after the open hearing adjourned for the day. The evidence to be offered, the understanding is, will definitely connect five men with the night-riders who kidnapped the two men.

According to semi-official authority, Berry Whetstone, the youth who declared he could identify members of the mob, will be brought here tomorrow and he may be placed on the witness stand at once. Whetstone is considered one of the star witnesses for the State. He told the authorities he had been drafted into service as a "waterboy" for the hooded band and that he was present when Daniel and Richards were kidnapped.

Attorney General Coco has admitted he is holding some of his best witnesses for the end of the hearing. Those to be heard tomorrow will testify on subjects not previously brought up in court, while those to follow will corroborate that testimony. There are about fifty more witnesses to be heard.

Klan Tries to Block Hearing.

Charging that the State's attorneys were using illegal methods and the "third degree" in the examination of witnesses, the Ku Klux Klan, through W. C. Barnett, its counsel, today caused the withdrawal of E. M. Gray, a Klansman, as a witness. When Gray, who was a witness yesterday, was recalled today, Barnett renewed his objections of the day before. He asserted that Gray's name has been connected with the case in published reports and claimed constitutional rights for the witness. Judge Odom ruled that objections could not be entered by attorneys representing persons who might be involved in the prosecution, and said that witnesses would have to testify but need not incriminate themselves. The Court was to be the judge of the questions.

Barnett asked if he could consult with witnesses. The Court yielded on that point, and when Barnett asked for permission to consult with Gray, permission was granted. Gray left the courtroom with his attorney and did not return. The State's attorneys intimated that he would not be recalled. It was hinted by the State that the alarm manifested by the Klan's attorney was entirely satisfactory to the Attorney General and his aids.

Following up its investigation of Gray's movements on Aug. 24, the State called witnesses who had been with him on the night of the kidnapping. Tom Higginbotham, reported by Gray as the man who drove him on that night to the home of William Higginbotham. Tom Higginbotham's cousin stuck to the story told by Gray. He testified that he picked up Gray at a point not far from the spot where the masked raiders held up the Bastrop picnickers.

William Higginbotham, who testified that he had received an alarming letter, substantiated Gray's testimony that he had asked Gray to go to his house and spend all or part of the night with him, fearing an attack.

Try to Trace Gray's Movements.

State's Attorneys admitted that Rufus Eubank, nephew of Gray, who drove him to the point where he was picked up by Tom Higginbotham, would be called as a witness at an early day. Eubank is depended on to describe the exact time which Gray was landed at the lonely spot on the Mer Rouge-Bastrop road, and will be asked whether there were any masked men in evidence when he got there. Eubank is expected to clear the mystery as to why Gray did not use his own car to go to the home of William Higginbotham.

William Higginbotham testified that Gray and Tom Higginbotham, arriving at his home, were provided with revolvers and remained outside the house until midnight of Aug. 24. He went to bed and slept, though fearing an attack. He admitted that he was a Klansman and that he had seen Klansmen wear their black hoods. He had seen Captain Skipwith, "Tom" Higginbotham and "Pink" Kirkpatrick in White regalia. He testified that Dr. McKoin had told him it had been reported that Leon Daniel, a brother of Watt Daniel, had said that Watt Daniel had threatened to kill him.

T. Semmes Walmsley, First Assistant Attorney General, entered the courtroom while the hearing was in progress this afternoon, carrying a bundle which, he stated, contained black hoods, which had been worn by Morehouse Klansmen and which would be introduced as evidence.

Former Deputy Sheriff "Jeff" Burnett, accused of the murder of Daniel and Richards, will be brought back to Bastrop Fri[illegible] it was announced today by Sheriff Carpenter. He has been in a Shreveport hospital for treatment for pleurisy.

Klan Counsel Fights Calling Gray.

Sheriff Carpenter, the first witness of the morning session, was asked only three questions. In reply to the last he testified that it was not until the morning after Alonzo Braddock had been released after having been dragged from his home by a Ku Klux band led by Captain Skipwith and taken to the Sheriff, who kept the farmer in his custody over night, that a warrant was issued for Braddock's arrest. Sam Conger the next witness, testified to seeing the black-hooded mob on Aug. 24, but was unable to identify any members of it.

When Gray's name was called W. C. Barnett, counsel for Dr. McKoin, Jeff Burnett and the Klan generally, objected, as he had done yesterday, on the ground that Gray "was in a sense accused of being implicated in the Mer Rouge crime." He further stated that Gray had engaged counsel of which Barnett was one. "In his behalf I say that he declines to give any further testimony on the ground that it might incriminate him," said the attorney. "The Constitution of this State provides that no man can give evidence against himself."

As a representative of others in this matter," he continued, "I want to say we have permitted the State to go ahead in this hearing, but for the State to subject this witness or any other witness to cross examination or the third degree is in violation of the Constitution."

"These matters have been submitted to a Grand Jury in this parish, to the District Attorney, to other officials and no one has been charged by them," replied Senator Warren. "The State has some evidence tending to show that some individuals have knowledge of the transactions which led to the death of two citizens of this parish. The sole purpose of this investigation is to get the true facts in the matter. The attorney of the State is not cross-examining, there is no third degree in this hearing. Every witness has been guaranteed protection and there has been no intimidation on either side, I think. The truth is all the State wants in these matters.

"The witness in this instance is free to refuse to testify. The court has told him so. The accusation against Mr. Gray, as published by an overzealous newspaper, is unfortunate. It was a wild story and the State had nothing to do with it."

Mr. Gulon cited Supreme Court decisions to show that the State was entitled to this hearing. He contended that if a newspaper writer had connected Gray with the accusations, it did not alter Gray's status as a witness in view of the fact that there had been no affidavit filed against him.

Court Rules Against Klan.

Barnett rejoined that the Constitution provided that Gray might not give evidence in any proceedings that might incriminate him. He contended that a witness who feared that his testimony in any way might lead to his being accused had the right to refuse to testify. He insisted that the witness and his counsel were the best judges as to what the witness should testify to. He repeated his objection to Gray's being used as a witness after asserting that the material on which the Attorney General was working had been furnished by agents.

"Will the gentleman tell us the names of his prospective defendants?" Senator Warren asked.

"We'll be here and let you know whenever they are called," Barnett replied.

Attorney General Coco insisted that Barnett's position was untenable, that if he were permitted to object in this case he might object to every witness called by the State.

Judge Odom said that if there was an affidavit against Gray he would not permit him to testify. "But there is no complaint," said the Court. "I now reiterate to you, Mr. Gray, that you don't have to answer questions that may implicate or involve you in these alleged crimes. I now want to state a policy, I am not going to tolerate objections from attorneys. If an attorney wants to tell a witness of his rights under the Constitution, that will be all right, but I don't want objections. A witness here has the same right that he has before the Grand Jury.

"I am going to permit the witnesses to come here and I shall require them to tell what they know so long as it doesn't incriminate them. That a witness might possibly say something that might incriminate him doesn't mean that he shouldn't testify at all. I think now we understand each other."

The Court then instructed the witness that if he were in doubt as to any question put to him, he should appeal to the Court. Barnett asked whether, in the case of future witnesses, counsel would consult the Court publicly or privately as to objections. Judge Odom said he would prefer that it be done privately.

The Court then permitted Gray to consult with Barnett in an ante-chamber. The State decided to examine Tom Higginbotham in the meanwhile.

Tells of Picking Up Gray.

Tom Higginbotham is a cousin of Will Higginbotham, with whom, according to Gray's testimony yesterday, he spent most of the night of Aug. 24. Higginbotham was examined as follows:

Q.—Any prisoners in them? A.—I didn't see any.

Q.—You didn't halt when they passed? A.—No.

Q.—Was the community excited over it? A.—No, sir, it was very quiet.

Q.—Do you mean to say people were not interested in it? A.—It looked that way to me.

Q.—When did you hear the news? A.—On the morning of the shooting.

Q.—You and Braddock? A.—No sir.

Q.—Why did you thing Braddock was making whisky? A.—I had heard it around.

Q.—Did you ever suspect that anybody had cause to write that letter except those who made whisky and sold it? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you show that letter to your wife? A.—She read it before I got to the house.

Q.—Any one else? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Had you heard of trouble between the Klan and people of Mer Rouge? A.—I had heard there were some.

Q.—Are you a member of the Klan? A.—I am a member, but I am too old to get out with them. I work all day and don't go out at night.

Saw Blindfolded Men on Truck.

Q.—Did you have the hood and regalia? A.—Yes, sir, a white one.

Q.—Did you have a black one? A.—No, sir, I never tried to get one. I know the others had them, but I didn't feel that I needed one. I don't just remember where I got the white one.

Q.—And you didn't have any need for a black hood? A.—No.

Q.—Did you see any men who had black hoods? A.—I saw them. I didn't know them. I did see Jim Norworthy.

Q.—Did he have a hood on? A.—No, he was standing out in the road.

Q.—When you told "Jap" Jones about the letter, you addressed him as a Klansman and a lifelong friend? A.—Yes.

Q.—You told him there was no reason for the letter? A.—Yes.

Q.—How did you get Gray? A.—He came up to me in a car.

Q.—He heard you were looking for him? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you talk to any one else about the letter? A.—No.

Q.—Did Tom know about it? A.—Yes, I told him at dinner.

Q.—What did he say? A.—Said he would be back by dark.

Q.—About what time did he get to Bastrop? A.—About 6:30 P. M., I guess.

Q.—After dinner, now, Newt Gray came looking for you about this very thing? A.—I think Tom Higginbotham told him.

Q.—Gray made it clear to you that he had already been told about this letter? A.—Yes.

Q.—And he offered to stay all night or part of the night with you? A.—Yes.

Q.—He asked you if you had any way of getting him out to your house? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Gray tell you that he'd have to get somebody to drive his car home? To take his wife and party home? A.—No, he didn't. I just told him he could come out to my house with Tommy Higginbotham.

Q.—Did you think Gray was taking any chances on missing Tom as Tom came back from the ball field? A.—No; Gray said he'd catch him. I told him if he watched the street he'd be sure to catch him.

Q.—Did you bring any men up from Mer Rouge? A.—Yes, Jim Wemble.

Q.—Did you go home by the Mer Rouge road? A.—No, Grabball road. I wanted to get away from that crowd.

Q.—You wanted to get home? A.—Yes, I wanted to get home before sundown.

Q.—You were at home more than an hour before the arrival of Gray and Tom? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—When you got out on the road the hooded men were there? A.—Yes, part of them.

Q.—And they had stopped some cars and taken some prisoners? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you see two men blindfolded on the truck? A.—Yes.

Q.—How many cars did you see? A.—About eight or ten.

Q.—How did you pass? A.—A masked man indicated the right, and my girl drove the car to the right.

Q.—What kind of hoods did you see? A.—Black.

Q.—Where was the truck? A.—On the side of the road. There were hooded men around it.

Q.—About how many in hoods did you see? A.—Eighteen or twenty.

Q.—You were not halted? A.—No, sir.

Q.—No one overtook you? A.—No, sir, but I passed Frank Bell and John Jones coming this way.

Q.—How far beyond the hoidup did you meet Frank Bell and John Jones? A.—About half a mile.

Asked About McKoin Shooting.

Q.—Were they driving fast? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did you meet anybody else? A.—Nobody.

Q.—You drove fast? A.—Yes.

Q.—Why couldn't you take Gray home in your car? A.—Well, I didn't want to crowd my wife and the girls.

Q.—You have never heard that Tom Higginbotham was a member of the Vigilance Committee? A.—No.

Q.—Had he talked about things they were getting out to do? A.—Not to me.

Q.—Did he want you to attend any meetings? A.—One in the woods.

Q.—Do you remember any one there? A.—Tom was there, Captain Skipwith and "Pink" Kirkpatrick.

Q.—Was Dr. McKoin there? A.—No.

Q.—Do you know him? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What did you hear at Mer Rouge about the shooting? A.—I heard that Dr. McKoin passed two men on the roadside and grew suspicious of them. Dr. McKoin told me this himself. He didn't know how he escaped with his life.

Q.—Did he say how far they were from the road? A.—They were in the ditch off the road.

Q.—When he saw them he squatted down in the car, and that is why he was not hit?

A.—Yes.

The witness then related that Dr. McKoin had told him that he was called to a negro cabin, found no one there ill, and passed the same two men going and coming. The shots, McKoin said, were fired after he had passed them on his return trip. The examination then continued:

Q.—Did you ever hear any one say they suspected any one of shooting at McKoin? A.—Leon Daniel said he had heard Watt Daniel was planning to kill Dr. McKoin. Dr. McKoin also told me that weeks before the shooting.

Q.—Did Leon Daniel tell that or did some one say he had said it? A.—Some one told me he said it.

Q.—Do you know why Dr. McKoin carried a bale of hay on the side of his car the night he was shot at? A.—Didn't know he carried a bale of hay.

Q.—You know whether Tom Higginbotham ever went out on any Klan raids? A.—He never did.

Says Gray Guarded Home.

Q.—Has he a Klan regalia? A.—He's got a white suit.

Q.—Now what did Gray do when he got out to your house that night? A.—He stayed outside and would not come in for supper because he said he didn't want to get the women folks worried. I brought him a gun and left him and Tom there. Gray went home about midnight.

Q.—Did Gray take your gun down with him? A.—Think he did. I suppose he did.

Q.—Did you see any cars pass? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Tom went in the house and told you Gray was there? A.—Yes.

Q.—Did Gray enter the house? A.—No, sir; I took the pistol out to him.

Q.—What conversation did you have with Gray? A.—I told him to watch and not to shoot until he found out who it was; that I didn't want him to shoot an innocent man.

Q.—About how long did you stay out the first time? A.—About ten minutes.

Q.—What then? A.—Tom and I went to supper.

Q.—How long did you stay out after supper? A.—Till about 10:30 P. M.

Q.—When was that letter opened—the threatening letter? A.—The day we got it, the day of the barbecue.

Q.—Your wife opened the letter? A.—Yes, she read it and showed it to me.

Q.—Did it scare you? A.—It bothered me. I was just mad, pardner. It would make anybody mad. If a man's going to shoot me, I want him to shoot me in the face, not in the back.

Q.—And you don't want him to have a hood on, with eyeholes in it? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You are in favor of this investigation? A.—I am.

Q.—Did you tell Judge Odom or Sheriff Carpenter? A.—I think I showed Carpenter the letter.

Q.—Did your wife or girls see Gray that night? A.—No, sir.

Says McKoin Accused Daniel.

Q.—You went to Dr. McKoin when you heard he had been shot at? A.—I went right away.

Q.—Is that when he told you that Watt's brother had said Watt had threatened to kill him? A.—Yes; he told me after the shooting and before the shooting, I think.

Q.—Did you ever go to Watt Daniel's brother? A.—No, I didn't go to him.

Q.—Did you go on to Bastrop? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who did you see there that you talked with about it? A.—J. D. and Will Higginbotham.

Q.—Why did you see J. D.? A.—Because he is Town Marshal.

Q.—Can you identify any of those masked men you saw in the mob that day (Aug. 24)? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Did you make any effort to find out who was responsible for the kidnapping? A.—Well, I asked several people about it.

Q.—Did you go to Captain Skipwith? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—What Klansmen did you talk with? A.—I'll be honest with you, sir, I don't remember.

Q.—(by Attorney General Coco)—Did you think the writer of that threatening letter intended to do you bodily harm on the night of Aug. 24? A.—I didn't know, so I played safe.

Q.—Didn't you go to bed and leave your friend Gray standing guard with your nephew? A.—Well, sir, I was tired, worn out and miserable.

Q.—You don't know what took place outside the house? A.—No, sir.

Q.—Were you asleep in the house? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Why did you think the danger was over? A.—I thought if anything came up my nephew and friend would let me know.

Q.—What time did they leave? A.—About 12:30, I think.

Q.—Don't you know that if a man wanted to do you harm he would come in the early part of the morning, when people generally sleep, and not before midnight? A.—Well, I was sitting up in the house with a gun until late.

Q.—Why did you say you feared Captain Skipwith? A.—I didn't fear him, but he was a man not to be opposed.

Thomas W. Butler, who lives on the Collinston-Mer Rouge Road, told of seeing masked men in cars while driving home from the Bastrop ball game on Aug. 24. Frank L. Plewellyn, Bastrop barber, admitted he is a Klansman, but "didn't remember" anything he had heard in discussions of the disappearance of Daniel and Richards.

J. D. Higginbotham, Town Marshal of Bastrop, said that he was on duty Aug. 24. He heard of the kidnapping about dark, being told by Mrs. Earl Andrews. They had started for Mer Rouge, but came back and reported the kidnapping. She said W. C. Andrews had been taken, but didn't know the rest. Earl Andrews told the witness the names of all five.

"What effort did you make to find out about it?" he was asked.

"None; I'm only Town Marshal."

He saw the Sheriff but didn't report the kidnapping to him. He went to the dance hall to hunt for bootleggers, and up to 10 o'clock just moved up and down the street. He knew nothing about a crowd in Thomas's hardware store, although the rumor was rife in town that there was to be an attack by Mer Rouge citizens.

THREAT TO BOMB MOVIES.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Jan. 17.—Ku Klux Klan activities in New England today included the sending of threatening letters to fifteen different persons. Ten letters, one to a priest, were received in Woonsocket, R. I., and included threats to bomb three different moving picture houses. Five letters were received by persons in Lynn, Mass.

In Lawrence the police were concerned over reported threats of Klavern 67 in that city to "completely annihilate" Council 67, Knights of Columbus. The Lawrence Klan for some time has been advising members of meeting nights and conveying other information through adroitly coded advertisements in the newspapers which have just been deciphered.

United States postal authorities were said to be concerned, as many of the letters were sent through the mails.

Legislature Asked to Appoint Committee on Ku Klux Klan.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 17.—An investigation of alleged activities of the Ku Klux Klan in Michigan is demanded in a resolution prepared for introduction in the lower House of the Legislature today by Representative Burns of Detroit.

The resolution declares the Klan has organizations in many cities of the State and that its purpose is to take part in the "alleged administration of justice without official authority." The appointment of a legislative committee to inquire into the Klan's purposes and activities is asked. The committee would report on or before April 1.

FOREIGN EXCHANGES DIAGNOSED BY KAHN

'BE HOSPITABLE TO IMPORTS'

Monetary Unsettlement Abroad, the Banker Declares, Psychological Rather Than Economic.

Describing the unsettlement of foreign exchanges as due to psychological rather than economic factors Otto H. Kahn of Kuhn, Loeb & Co., in an address yesterday before the British Empire Chamber of Commerce at the Bankers' Club, predicted that both francs and sterling would reach par within a short time. The strength of these exchanges, he said, was a direct result of the confidence of foreign countries in France and England as well as the confidence of the nationals in their own countries.

"I am entirely certain," said Mr. Kahn, referring to the present efforts of the English and American Debt Funding Commission in Washington, "that England will ask nothing which is not fair and honorable and businesslike, and I am equally confident that America will act in no way which is not fair, honorable and businesslike."

The conception and purposes of England and America are practically identical as to what has to be accomplished in Europe, he said. England, he added, was one of our best assets, for although export trade was not as vital to this country as England, we should, as a creditor nation, fit ourselves in the rôle and "be hospitable to imports." Citing England as a classic example of a creditor nation, Mr. Kahn urged that the funds of America be used in a broad and comprehensive manner.

"A nation is not made by commerce," he continued, "but by the quality of her people. This is what has brought British exchange to near normal, for the confidence manifested by a people in a country affects exchange primarily. Germany has $250,000,000 of gold in the Reichsbank, but her marks are selling at one-quarter their gold value because the rest of the world and even the German people have no confidence at present in the country. People of other countries are sending money at the present time to England for investment purposes because of their confidence in the country. This is reflected in the firm condition of sterling."

In his address on the international situation General Charles H. Sherrill, formerly Minister to Argentina, made a plea for an "interlocking of public opinion of England and America in order to make the rest of the world safe." Edward F. Darrell, President of E. F. Darrell & Co. and President of the Chamber, presided at the meeting.

COMMITTEE MODIFIED UNTERMYER'S REPORT

Criticism of Stock Exchange and Names of Insurance Officials Eliminated in Conference.

Reports circulated yesterday indicated that important eliminations were made in the Lockwood Committee's report shortly after it passed out of the hands of Samuel Untermyer last Sunday. Mr. Untermyer left Sunday evening for Miami and he was unable to learn what the changes were. Before leaving he said he hoped to have the committee report favorably his bill for the regulation and supervision of labor unions.

Characterizations of the alleged practices of the Stock Exchange in Mr. Untermyer's copy of the report were missing from the version revised by the committee. The first copy contained the names of a dozen highly placed officials of large insurance and other organizations and showed exactly what sums accrued to these men as underwriting fees in the formation of syndicates. The names and sums had been read into the record of the proceedings before the committee. In the revised report the names were missing. Instead of the names appeared "a director." The earlier report contained strictures on Attorney General Daugherty and the Republican Administration. These attacks were toned down in the later edition.

Last year Mr. Untermyer complained that the report had been endorsed. He protested when he reached Albany to speak on the bills. He expects to leave the South for Albany in two weeks, when the bills proposed by the committee come up for a hearing.

MAYOR'S MESSAGE COSTLY.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 17.—Mayor Rolph today faced an organized assault on his personal exchequer as the result of a random scientific experiment last night.

Dedicating a radio broadcasting station, he said into the transmitter: "I want to find how far my voice is carrying, how big my audience is. Send me telegrams and send them collect. Come on—everybody! Mayor Hylan of New York, and you, Mayor Curley of Boston—everybody."

Radio fans were not slow in responding. By midnight at least one telegram had come from every State in the union it was announced at the Mayor's office, and Honolulu and a ship 11000 miles at sea were represented. And as the night crept on toward dawn, the messages continued to arrive.

By daylight it was estimated that the Mayor had incurred wire tolls of $3,000, with the possibility that the figure might be doubled during the day.

GRAND JURY INDICTS THREE IN GEM THEFT

An indictment charging robbery in the first degree against the three men who held up and robbed Mrs. C. F. Hugo Schoellkopf of jewelry valued at $500,000, after a New Year's Eve party at 04 West Fifty-second Street, was ordered to be drawn up yesterday. It will be filed today. The indictment will not name the men by their real names, which are known to the police, but by the fictitious names under which they were known when they rented an apartment at the Fifty-second Street house from Frank Barrett Carman, in whose rooms the party was held.

Ferdinand Pecora, Chief of Staff of the District Attorney's office, said that he had decided, after a conference with the police, to withhold the real names of the men from the public for the present.

"The police at any moment may make an arrest of one or two of the three men in a city certainly not more than 1,000 miles from New York," said Mr. Pecora.

The prosecutor will continue the presentation of evidence to the Grand Jury today in the hope of getting one or more additional indictments. Paul W. Engelhardt, a dealer in used automobiles, who was a guest at the party, testified before the Grand Jury yesterday after signing a waiver of immunity. He was on the stand for one hour and will be recalled today.

Another man whose identity could not be learned testified before the Grand Jury yesterday. Mr. Pecora refused to tell who this mysterious witness was, except to say that he had important information and that he was not a guest at the party.

HARRISBURG, Pa., Jan. 17.—Governor Pinchot began today transacting the business of the State in the full view of any citizen who cared to come and see him. It was unprecedented in the history of the Commonwealth and visitors flocked to the doors to observe the new Executive at his desk.

At the Governor's direction a large desk was placed in the Gubernatorial reception room, one of the show places of the Capitol, where all who had business with Mr. Pinchot were received by him. At the door was a big sign reading:

Another notice read:

"Visitors will be received with as little delay as the public business will permit and as far as possible in the order of arrival. Senators, Representatives, heads of departments and those who have appointments in advance will necessarily be given precedence."

Once in a while the Governor's talks with visitors were interrupted by telephone conversations which he carried on just as though he were in the guarded precincts of the executive chamber where his predecessors transacted all their business.

FAILS TO REDUCE ARMY.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—An attempt to reduce the regular army failed today in the House, an amendment by Representative Jones, Democrat, of Texas to fix the enlisted strength at 100,000 men instead of the 125,000 provided in the Army bill being rejected without a record vote.

By an overwhelming vote, the House also adopted an amendment offered by Representative Dickinson, Republican, of Iowa, and said by him to be directed at Major Gen. James G. Harbord, former Deputy Chief of Staff, who recently accepted the Presidency of a radio corporation. The amendment would prevent active or retired army officers from receiving pay from the Government while engaged in selling goods to the Government or employed by others engaged in such business.

CLEARED OF DRUG CHARGE.

Juanita Hansen, screen actress, arrested on a charge of possessing drugs and of drug addiction last Thursday, was acquitted yesterday by Magistrate McQuade in the West Side Court. Later she issued a formal statement charging that she was a victim of police persecution.

Miss Hansen was arrested by Detectives Patrick Cotter and John O'Brien of the staff of Deputy Police Commissioner Carleton Simon, in charge of the Narcotic Division, in the apartment of Mrs. Ruth Burnett, 29 West Eighty-first Street. Before she left court she was served in an action by Frank Russek, furrier, 363 Fifth Avenue, for $345 alleged to be due on a fur coat purchased in December, 1920.

COLDEST DAY OF WINTER.

Yesterday's Temperature Dropped to 12 Above Zero.

The weather yesterday was the coldest in New York City this Winter, the thermometer several times reaching 12 degrees above zero. After rising slightly it had dropped again to 12 degrees at 10 o'clock last night, and was expected to fall another degree or two and then rise sharply.

The wind yesterday was mostly from the North, but warm currents of air headed this way were detected by the Weather Bureau, promising a radical change in weather. The temperature was expected to rise suddenly above the freezing point today, causing rain tonight or tomorrow. For today cloudiness is predicted and a fall of snow may precede rain.

Curley Won't Attend Sims Lecture.

BOSTON, Jan. 17.—Refusing an invitation to be present at Symphony Hall on the evening of Feb. 1, when Rear Admiral William S. Sims, U. S. N., retired, is to deliver an address, Mayor Curley today wrote to Telfair Minton, Secretary of the Loyal Coalition, the organization sponsoring the meeting, that he had "no desire to sit on any platform with Admiral Sims, retired, whose best service to the American Navy was his retirement from it."

LOG CABIN FIGURES IN CROMWELL CASE

TWO WOMEN AID PLAINTIFF

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Jan. 17.—Testimony that Mrs. Rose Barker Cromwell spent two weeks in a log cabin at Mamaweek, near Asbury Park, with Harry Cohn, motion picture promoter, was given today before Supreme Court Justice Seeger and a jury in the divorce suit of John Howard Cromwell, lawyer and yachtsman. Several negro waiters at Ross Fenton Farm, on the outskirts of Asbury Park, declared they served meals to them in the cabin.

Max D. Steuer, counsel for Mrs. Cromwell, cross-examined Justine Anderson, a negro maid, who testified yesterday that Mrs. Cromwell had men callers in Cromwell's absence. He brought out that Mrs. Genevieve Mulford, housekeeper for the Cromwells, on whom Mrs. Cromwell blames her troubles, dined at the family table and occupied a guest room. A photograph was also put into evidence showing Mrs. Mulford as a member of a house party and in an evening gown.

Mrs. Ella Hoyt, who described herself as a hat checker at Ross Fenton Farm, testified that "Mrs. Rose Barker," as she knew the defendant, hired a log cabin near the farm in 1919 and 1920, and a short time after arrival of Mrs. Cromwell with Mrs. Mulford, Harry Cohn appeared. She said Cohn and Mrs. Cromwell were there about two weeks. The witness also said Cromwell was never seen there.

Dan Kinnell and another negro waiter testified they had served meals at the log cabin which was occupied by Mrs. Cromwell in 1919 and saw a man there who was not Cromwell. Kinnell said he knew defendant as "Rose Barker."

Mrs. Mabel Ross testified that she leased the log cabin to Mrs. Cromwell in 1919 for two weeks. She said the defendant told her she had been ill and very unhappy, and it was "the only happy time she had ever had." Mrs. Ross said she had seen Harry Cohn on the porch of the cabin.

TRAVELER'S AID STARTS GUIDING IMMIGRANTS

Guide service for immigrants arriving at Ellis Island has been started by the Traveler's Aid Society with the help of Commissioner Robert E. Tod. The object of the service is to prevent exploitation of the new arrivals, particularly those who are looking for friends or relatives in or near the city.

Miss Virginia Murray, general Secretary of the organization, said yesterday that the service, which has been greatly needed, has been going on since Jan. 2d and is now operating smoothly. Three hundred and eighty-two people have been assisted to find friends and ninety-seven of them have been personally conducted to these friends.

The guide service starts when the immigrant passes the final inspector. He is given a badge and is sent to the guide service office at Ellis Island, where the names and addresses are taken of relatives he wishes to find. A guide then takes him to the Traveler's Aid room in the Barge Office, where telephone or telegraph messages are sent. Friends or relatives usually arrive within a couple of hours. But if they fail to respond to the messages the traveler is placed for overnight. In the morning, if the friends have not arrived, the immigrant is taken to them.

Many cases of exploitation of immigrants who were looking for friends have been reported. Taxicab drivers in the city lay in wait for them when the boats came in from Ellis Island and often refused to take English-speaking persons. These men would charge anything from $10 for a trip to all the money the passengers had.

The new guide service is an added expense and some of the many philanthropic organizations, it is thought, will assist in defraying the cost. Service of workers has been offered by the Jewish Council of Women, the National Catholic Welfare Association, the Woman's Christian Temperance Union and Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The Young Men's Christian Association will give from five to fifteen workers after 5 o'clock each afternoon.

"This is the biggest thing the Traveler's Aid has ever done outside of its regular work and nothing but the lack of money can prevent our going on with it," Miss Murray said.

SENTENCE ELWELL ROBBERS

Judge Mulqueen yesterday sentenced John Doran, 28, of 1,345 Second Avenue; Bernard Fantel, 24, of 1,455 First Avenue, and John Muller 25, of 432 East Eighty-second Street, to two years each in Sing Sing on their conviction of robbing the home of the late Joseph B. Elwell, slain bridge whist expert, at 244 West Seventieth Street, on Nov. 5 last.

Mrs. Marie Larsen, caretaker of the house, told the jury that the men forced the door and obtained a gold pencil, a silver vanity box and a Canadian coin worth $30 and which were the property of the murdered man. Assistant District Attorney McGuire told the Court that the three defendants were ex-convicts.

Nurses Dropped for Bobbing Hair.

PADUCAH, Ky., Jan. 17.—The bobbed-hair question was raised in Paducah today and as a result the nursing staff at the Riverside Hospital Nurses' Training School was minus five members. Temporary suspension of the five nurses—four who were "bobbed" and the one who plied the shears—came yesterday when Mrs. Geia Harper, Superintendent, saw through the camouflage of nets and cap that had concealed for a week the shorn tresses. Friends of the nurses yesterday appealed to Mayor Katterjohn to intercede in behalf of the young women.

Chandler Customers Settle.

MINEOLA, L. I., Jan. 17.—An order permitting the discontinuance of four suits brought against the brokerage firm of Clark, Childs & Co., 165 Broadway, by customers of Chandler Brothers & Co., stock brokers, seeking to collect money alleged to have been placed with the latter for investment, was signed today by Supreme Court Justice Lewis. The suits were started by Hugh Chalmers, Harry T. Sinclair, Harry Makransky and Alva Johnson Savescott, who disclosed that they had effected a settlement out of court. Clark, Childs & Co. recently were held responsible by Supreme Court Justice Benedict in Brooklyn for the liabilities of Chandler Brothers & Co. as alleged swindlers.

The Low Price of Oh Henry! Is Only "Skin-Deep"

DON'T judge Oh Henry! by his dress! That simple, little wrapper is deceiving... makes Oh Henry! look like most of the other candies on your dealer's stand. But remember, the low price of Oh Henry! is only "skin deep."

The wrapper IS inexpensive. But inside that wrapper is as fine a candy as you ever set your teeth in.

It's a rich butter cream, dipped in soft caramel, rolled in crisp nuts and coated with milk chocolate. Sounds good, doesn't it? Well, it IS good, as one bite will prove.

And it's a fine candy. All the trimmings are done away with, and for the 10c you pay for Oh Henry! you get candy, fine candy, and nothing but candy!

Try a bar of Oh Henry! this afternoon when you begin to crave "sweets". There's a surprise in its taste, and just enough in the bar to satisfy your hunger for good candy ... without waste!

Oh Henry!

SEVEN LONG ISLAND CROSSINGS MUST GO

HIGHWAY PERIL POINTED OUT

Stretch of Road to Be Four-Tracked and Electrified — Other Improvements.

The Transit Commission yesterday ordered the elimination of all grade crossings on the main line of the Long Island Railroad between Jamaica and city line.

The order is intended to abolish grade crossings at New York Avenue, Puntine Street, Smith Street, Canal Street, Prospect Street, Washington Street and Union Hall Street in Jamaica. The further effect of the order will be to provide for the four-tracking of the main line from the station of Jamaica east to the city line. It also calls for the electrification of these tracks and for other important improvements. Other grade crossings in the vicinity of Hollis and Queens are already under removal orders. This action was taken on the recommendation of General Lincoln C. Andrews, chief executive officer of the commission, who said in his report:

"Over all the crossings of the streets mentioned, at grade, there is a very heavy highway traffic. Without going into the details of this traffic, as shown by the traffic counts and testimony, it appears that there are many hundreds of pedestrians and vehicles crossing each of these streets daily. The traffic in the Summer time, particularly of automobiles, has very greatly increased, especially at the crossings on Smith street and Canal street, which converge on the Merrick Road, the principal highway to the south shore of Long Island. At every grade crossing there are at least five tracks, and at Canal Street there are seven. Both steam and electric trains operate over these tracks, and the electric trains are nearly noiseless. Freight as well as passenger operation is involved, and the trains are consequently both irregular and frequent. At all of the crossings the view is obstructed to a greater or less degree by buildings or other obstacles."

Pointing out that the special care taken at these crossings has resulted in keeping the number of accidents to a minimum, General Andrews, however, finds that where there are so many tracks and so much width between the protective gates, it is obvious that in spite of all precautions "a very serious accident may result and, to my mind, the public safety is endangered by conditions as they now exist."

"In addition to the question of safety," the report continues, "the commission may well take into consideration that of public convenience, which involves both the convenience of highway traffic and facility of train operation. It appears that highway traffic is subordinated to train operation, with the result that in Summer vehicular traffic piles up at the crossings for a distance of several blocks on each side, and it is obvious that when the gates are lifted for all this vehicular traffic to pass there is very great danger, in spite of every precaution.

"There are many other facts and circumstances bearing upon the question of public safety and convenience, which I consider unnecessary to detail, but there is no doubt that the commission may and should determine that public safety to say nothing of the convenience of highway traffic and railroad operation, imperatively requires the elimination of the grade crossings mentioned."

FUR AND SILK ROBBERS NET $20,000 IN A WEEK

Robberies of fur, silk and clothing firms within the last week, amounting to more than $20,000, became known yesterday, despite the efforts of the police to keep them secret. Askenas & Nimtzowitz, fur dealers, of 159 West Twenty-fifth Street, were robbed of 500 mink skins, 2 mink wraps, a short mink coat and 4 stone martin skins, valued at $7,000, some time early Tuesday morning.

On Saturday night or Sunday morning robbers cut a hole in the roof of the building at 227 West Twenty-seventh Street to gain entry to the establishment of Rizzo Brothers and escaped with about $2,700 worth of silk, cloth of various kinds and dresses.

The cloak establishment of Bernard Schnall, 245 Seventh Avenue, was entered some time on Saturday and a cutting machine, cloaks and suits valued at $1,600 stolen.

Tuesday night, about $2,000 worth of suits and overcoats were taken from the Manufacturers' Bargain Store, 231 Seventh Avenue. The Florence Silk Company, 456 Fourth Avenue, also was robbed of about $5,000 worth of silk.

TENTH ARSON CASE ARREST.

Man Held In $15,000 Bail Charged With Receiving Stolen Goods.

The tenth arrest was made yesterday by detectives in connection with the alleged arson conspiracy involving members of the Wet Wash Laundrymen's Protective Association, on which eight indictments were returned two weeks ago by the Grand Jury. Jacob Finkelstein, 32, of 69 East 101st Street, was held in $15,000 by Magistrate Earl H. Smith in the Harlem Court. He will be given a hearing tomorrow.

Louis Wallinger and Andrew Shea, who confessed to Assistant District Attorney Murphy that they were employed by members of the wet washmen's organization to drive rival laundries out of business, were alleged to have told Detective Sergeant Hastings of the Safe and Loft Squad that after they had destroyed the laundry of Jacob Levine, at 680 East 183d Street, the Bronx, they sold Finkelstein a check perforator, valued at $65, which they had stolen from the place. Finkelstein pleaded not guilty to a charge of receiving stolen goods.

WOMAN FROZEN TO DEATH.

Body Discovered by Two Boys in Cellar of Her Home.

Anna Martin, 54, of 139 Washington Street, was found dead in the cellar of her home late yesterday afternoon by Joseph Martin, 139 Washington Street, and Michael Donovan, 189 Greenwich Street, 14-year-old boys who had entered the cellar to chop firewood.

Mrs. Martin, who lived with her husband, James, a night watchman, and her 13-year-old son, on the second floor of the tenement house, was last seen alive on Tuesday morning by her son. When she failed to appear that night father and son made a search, and, failing to find her, notified the police.

While after firewood the two boys stumbled over what they thought was a bundle of rags. There in the semi-darkness the two boys saw the form of a woman on the cellar floor. Patrolman James Crank of the Old Slip police station appeared first, then summoned Dr. Cooper of Broad Street Hospital. It was found that the woman apparently had been stunned, then froze to death. Medical Examiner Benjamin Schwartz ordered the body to the Morgue. An autopsy will be made this morning.

ENRIGHT WINS PLEA FOR 759 POLICEMEN

HYLAN COMMENDS RECORD

Storm of Criticism Which Broke In Mayor's Absence Is Not Repeated at Meeting.

The Board of Estimate voted 759 policemen for Commissioner Enright yesterday, and Mayor Hylan praised him for keeping policemen on constant duty in cafés, cabarets and other places where rum selling had been discovered or suspected.

Commissioner Enright reported that 116 policemen had been used to watch such places. Forty-seven were kept in cafés, sixty-three in cabarets and the rest in so-called "speakeasies," according to the Commissioner. The charge that policemen stationed in eating places "ate their way from kitchen to kitchen" and paid no attention to their duties, was not repeated, and the storm of criticism leveled at the police a week ago in the Mayor's absence was not repeated yesterday in his presence. Controller Craig, who had censured the police a week ago, was at home, ill. Murray Hulbert, President of the Board of Aldermen, who had assailed Enright's policy a week ago, contented himself with asking:

"Are there any of your men placed in any of the large hotels?"

"No," replied Enright, "for the simple reason that the large hotels are not selling liquors openly and no policemen will be stationed in any place where there is no defiant violation of the law."

In reply to a question by President Julius Miller of the Borough of Manhattan, Commissioner Enright said he was making about seventy arrests a day for violations of the dry laws, but that the percentage of indictments and convictions was small.

"The Grand Juries and some of the trial juries," he said, "don't seem to think much of this act."

Mayor Hylan said critics had alleged that Enright would have plenty of policemen if he withdrew those stationed where "there were supposed to be violations of the law."

"Not supposed to be violations," said the Commissioner, "but actually violations. There is no supposition about it. They are selling liquor, or trying to. Gamblers and crooks and other violators of the law are importuning people to get police officers out of these places. They employ high priced counsel and there is a great deal of wire pulling used to get the officers out. Many people are going around this town making wise cracks about the Police Department, but let me tell you the police officers have kept the city clean in the last five years and that is known all over the country."

Then Mayor Hylan said:

"Continue the same policy in the next three years that you have pursued in the last five years. Keep this city clean of crooks and manipulators as you have done."

Commissioner Enright was unable to say, when questioned by Mr. Hulbert, how much zeal Government agents were using in checking the illicit sale of liquors here.

HYLAN HURLS THREAT AT FIRE UNDERWRITERS

Reduce Rates or City Will Enter Insurance Business and Bring Them Down, He Warns.

When the proposition recently advanced by Commissioner Nicholas J. Hayes of the Department of Water Supply, Gas and Electricity that the city go into the Fire Insurance business came up for discussion at yesterday's meeting of the Committee of the Whole of the Board of Estimate, Mayor Hylan asserted that the city would undertake the enterprise unless insurance rates were reduced.

"Don't think that this is an idle threat," the Mayor said. "I am now having the matter thoroughly investigated by the Corporation Counsel and the Commissioner of Accounts. I want to say right here that the plan is not a dream. The fire insurance companies will bring down their rates or the city will go into that business and bring them down.

"As a matter of fact the city is paying for all the protection, supplying the departments and men to prevent and stop fires and the companies are getting big returns. These companies, pleading for a high pressure water service, promised a reduction in rates and they never made good when the system was installed. A similar promise was made when the fire alarm telegraph system was advocated and again the promise was not kept.

"We are going right through with this thing, and I say now that if the companies do not reduce their exorbitant fire rates the city will launch into the business as soon as we can arrange it."

COTTON DIFFERENTIAL MEETS COASTING RATE

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Jan. 17.—At the close of the joint conference of Shipping Board officials and shipping interests here today it was announced that there would be no change at present in the list of parities and differentials in general commodities.

W. B. Keene, traffic director of the Shipping Board, made public the new cotton differential, which he announced would go into effect next Monday. Heretofore, the cotton differential between Gulf ports and North Atlantic ports has been 17 cents per 100 pounds. This, representatives of the Southern lines said, made it possible to ship cotton coastwise from Gulf ports to New York and then transship to Europe at lesser cost to the shipper than a direct shipment from Gulf ports to Europe. Under the new agreement, the differential will be the coastwise rate. Whenever the coastwise rate changes, the differential will change automatically.

"We are hopeful regarding the general commodity list," said Mr. Keene. "If the Southern representatives had pushed this matter to the breaking point, there is little doubt that the results would have been disastrous. As it is, there is time now for further counsel and for further study of the merits of the entire question."

Freed of Attempt to Rob Charge.

MINEOLA, L. I., Jan. 17.—Tony Blecklkl, brother-in-law of Philip W. Carberry, an automobile salesman whose mysterious death near Roslyn was believed to have been caused by a motorist who ran him down when he mistook Carberry for a highwayman, was ordered discharged yesterday by Supreme Court Justice Harry E. Lewis, following failure of the Grand Jury to indict. Blecklkl had been held on a charge of attempted highway robbery.

WORLD'S RECORD IS TIED BY JEWTRAW

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Jan. 17.—In the opening event of the Adirondack Gold Cup championship skating meet this afternoon, the world's record for 220 yards, made by Maurice Wood in 1909, was equaled by Charles Jewtraw of Lake Placid, who, as a result of the afternoon racing, added 60 points to his total for possession of the gold cup championship trophy.

The twenty-five skaters entered for the 220-yard dash were sent away in groups of five in the preliminary heats. Alfred Neuhfer of Johnson City, Charles Jewtraw of Lake Placid, Emery Stephenson of Toronto, Paul Foraman of New York and Edward Gloster of Toronto qualified for the final. Jewtraw outclassed his rivals, however, and finished an easy winner, leading Neuhfer by fully fifty feet at the finish.

Twenty-seven skaters came to the scratch in the preliminary of the three-quarter-mile event, twelve qualifying for places in the final. This was as pretty a race as was ever seen here. There was little jockeying for position, each of the skaters going out to win from the crack of the gun and forcing Jewtraw, the winner, to the utmost of his speed. Richard Donovan of Johnson City was at his heels when they came into the stretch in the last lap, only inches separating them as they breasted the wire. The timers announced the official time for this race as 2:03, but two of the five judges caught the time at 2:02 4-5, which is equal to the world's record made by Jewtraw at Johnson City last week.

The ice was in perfect condition and the skaters predict that at least one new world's record will be established tomorrow when the 440-yard dash and one-mile event will be pulled off.

Bobby McLean, national professional indoor champion, gave several exhibitions during the afternoon and will appear here during the entire week. The skaters will leave here Friday night for Chicago, where they will next week fight it out for the championship.

BINGHAM BACK FROM CONFERENCES ABROAD

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 17.—William J. Bingham, former head coach of track at Harvard, reached Cambridge today from England, where he has been on business and also negotiating for a track meet next Summer in London between Harvard-Yale and Oxford-Cambridge.

Bingham said that the hammer throw, which has been scheduled in past years, will be dropped this Summer. Three new events, however, have been added to the program—the 120-yard dash, the 220-yard hurdles and the pole vault. First places will count one point, as has been the custom in the past, and no other position will be recognized except in case of a tie, when the outcome of the meet will be determined by adding second places.

The tentative dates for the meet are July 14 or 21, and it will be held at the Queen's Club or the new stadium now in process of erection in London, which will have room for 80,000 persons.

Bingham's conferences were held with Captain Abrahams of Cambridge, who finished second to Ned Gourdin at Harvard two years ago in the broad jump and 100-yard dash; Captain Milligan of Oxford, who was fourth in the half-mile run, and Beryl Rudd, then the Oxford captain, who won the 440. This will be the sixth of these international meets. The meet is subject to the approval of the Harvard and Yale Faculty Athletic Committees.

Schulz Wants 'Eleven Raving Maniacs' for Detroit Team

DETROIT, Jan. 17.—Adolph (German) Schulz, once a University of Michigan football star and newly appointed coach of the University of Detroit squad, wants "eleven raving maniacs" under his guidance when Detroit opens the season this Fall.

Hard work, more than anything else, Coach Schulz said, would lift a team to the athletic crest. He also stressed team play, sportsmanship and loyalty, recalling some of the lessons he learned under Fielding H. Yost at Michigan.

Coach Yost, another speaker, praised last year's Wolverine squad as the most alert he had ever coached. That factor, more than any other, he said, placed Michigan among the leaders in last year's Western Conference race.

COLUMBIA SEXTET BOWS TO PRINCETON

Special to The New York Times.

PRINCETON, N. J., Jan. 17.—The Princeton hockey sextet made an easy victim of Columbia here this evening in a loosely played ice match in the Baker Memorial Rink, 14 to 0. A crowd of about 1,000 hockey fans gathered to see the teams battle and seemed disappointed at the Blue and White's poor showing.

Charlie Davis, Tiger centre, led the scoring, with five tallies to his credit. Captain Vangerbig and Stout accounted for three apiece and Snyder, Norrie and Wall each scored a point for the Tigers.

Columbia's offense lacked the power and co-ordination to work past the determined Tiger defense. Foger, right wing of the metropolitan team, led the Columbia defense, breaking up many Princeton formations.

Tonight's triumph was the fifth straight victory for the Tiger sextet. St. Nicholas, Penn, M. I. T., Harvard and Columbia have, in turn, fallen victims to the speed and skill of this season's Orange and Black team.

CANADIANS BEATEN BY ST. NICK SEXTET

The St. Nicholas Club defeated the Canadian Club at hockey by a score of 2 to 0 last night at the Iceland Rink Hall, a St. Nicholas substitute, scored the first goal. This was on a pass from Cushman.

The second goal was scored by Bierwirth, who took the puck down the ice unassisted and made the goal from a difficult angle from the left wing. There was a good-sized crowd in attendance.

The game was the second played between these two teams in the United States Hockey League series. In two exhibition games played previously the Canadians were winners, but in the two games which meant something in the standing of the teams St. Nicholas arose nobly to the opportunity.

ANTON AND GRASS BEATEN IN GARDEN

American ringmen repulsed a German invasion last night in the new talent boxing show at Madison Square Garden. Battling Anton, a middleweight, and Urban Grass, a featherweight, both from the Fatherland, made the tournament the occasion for their baptism of American ring fire and with disastrous results.

Grass bowed before the spectacular Carl Duane, Bronx featherweight, after 1 minute 9 seconds of the second round in the scheduled four-round battle which closed the show. Duane played with his rival as with a toy in the first round, and in the second dropped him soon after the bell with a hard right uppercut. At a count of eight Grass pluckily regained his feet, but was met with a shower of rights and lefts which drove him about the ring groggy until Referee Tommy Sheridan stopped the battle just as a towel was heaved into the ring.

Anton's début was also discouraging. He got more than he bargained for from Jimmy Canoro, Brooklyn welterweight, and while he lasted the four rounds, he was thoroughly beaten. Canoro dropped his big rival in the first round for a count of five, and thereafter toyed with the German.

A crowd of about 5,000 ushered in the Garden novelty and enjoyed the lively bouts furnished in the long program.

Perfetti Furnishes Surprise.

Lew Perfetti, a flyweight, and Sid Terris, grown into a featherweight, both graduates of the local amateur ring and former title holders, were the victors in bouts which featured the first half of the card. Perfetti furnished somewhat of a surprise in the third bout of the night, when he carried off the decision over the hard-hitting Charlie Izzo, Coney Island favorite. The heavy hitting of which the Coney Island boxer boasts was smothered under the rapid-fire, two-fisted assault of Perfetti, who boxed rings around his rival and easily earned the decision.

Terris was a participant in the fifth bout, which made a punching bag of Jackie Harris, Williamsburg featherweight, who was bewildered by the speed and cleverness of the former amateur champion. In the parlance of the ring, Terris hit his rival with every thing but the ringposts in the course of the four rounds. In the second session Terris had his rival groggy and in distress, but, though he lacked ability, Harris wanted for nothing in willingness and courage, Terris could not really land one single clean punch in the four rounds, but he never stopped trying. At the final bell Terris got the decision.

Cohen Knocks Out Powell.

In the second bout Wilbur Cohen, Harlem's speedy little negro flyweight, knocked out Leroy Powell, a former rival in the amateur ring, in 2 minutes 47 seconds of the third round. Referee Johnny Gallagher stopped hostilities in this encounter when it was apparent Powell was outclassed. Powell substituted for Kid Snow.

Ben Pontheau and Sandy Taylor, rival negro lightweights of Harlem, were the comeatants in the sixth bout. This was an exciting affair, in which both boxers experienced rough moments. Taylor, however, was master of the two and forced Pontheau through tempestuous sessions in the second and fourth rounds. A wicked body attack had Pontheau holding and clinching in the final round, and the closing bell was welcome music. Taylor got the decision.

Sammy Vogel, Harlem lightweight, gained the decision over Andy Tucker of the Bronx in the seventh bout. Although the lads did their best their efforts did not satisfy the crowd.

Lew Hurley added Frankie Sinclair to his list of vanquished rivals in the eighth contest, which was one of the best of the night. Sinclair, a Greenwich Village bantamweight, gave Hurley all the Harlem lad could handle in the first two rounds, but Hurley's superior boxing and hitting gained him the decision.

MORAN CHALLENGES WHITE.

New Orleans Lightweight Anticipates Victory Over Tendler.

Pal Moran, New Orleans lightweight, plans to seek a match against Charley White of Chicago immediately after his fifteen-round bout tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden against Lew Tendler, Philadelphia southpaw. The Crescent City boxer is confident he will survive Tendler's terrific left and outpoint the Quaker City lightweight. In anticipation of a victory over Tendler, Moran has issued a challenge to White for a bout here to determine the lightweight qualified to tackle Champion Benny Leonard when the titleholder returns to the ring in the Spring. Tendler is eager for another bout against Leonard and is confident he will blast Moran's title hopes. The weight for tomorrow night's encounter has been agreed upon as 127 pounds at 2 o'clock in the afternoon. Both boxers are reported in superb shape and near the required weight.

The twelve-round semi-final, in which Irish Johnny Curtin is scheduled to box Carl Tremaine, Cleveland bantamweight, is attracting as much interest as the main bout. The bantamweight battle promises a warm session between two lads who have established themselves as foremost among the challengers of Champion Joe Lynch.

CLARK IS WINNER IN UPHILL BATTLE

Ernest Clark, squash instructor at the Columbia Club, by one of the most remarkable and most courageous uphill fights in the history of the game, emerged the victor yesterday afternoon over John Macklin of the Buffalo Tennis and Racquet Club by scores of 12—15, 9—15, 18—16, 15—7, 17—16. This was in the national open championship squash tennis tournament on the courts of the Yale Club. That it was sheer grit and courage that won for Clark is shown by the fact that in the fifth game the Buffalo star led by a score of 14—love. Any one who has played squash or who has even watched a squash tennis match must know what that means. Love—14! Macklin had one point to go to complete a splendid victory. Clark had nothing except a dreary stretch ahead. Yet Clark won.

In the first two games of their match Macklin had the advantage. He has been far more accustomed than Clark to playing squash racquets, and he fed Clark soft shots all the time. Superior placing was the sole answer for Macklin's superiority in the first two games. Then Clark discovered his opponent's method of campaign and began to pick up ground by matching him in control, and when the opening was large enough sending through a finishing shot that admitted of no reply. By greater severity of hitting, Clark, on the verge of defeat in the third game, managed to win that and the next one, too. All the time Macklin was continuing his tactics of trying to play with Clarke as a cat would with a mouse. He outplaced him consistently, but he had not quite the same power in his finishing shots.

Macklin Discovers Mistake.

Then came the fifth game. Macklin discovered his mistake. He found that soft shooting and certainty of control were not enough to beat a man like Clark. So he shifted his tactics. He began to play squash tennis instead of squash racquets. He began to mix his shots, hitting as hard as Clark when he saw the least bit of an opening. It was good headwork on the part of the Buffalo champion. But, through no fault of his own, Macklin was forced to stop just short of success. He worked the thing up to 14—0 in the final game, with one more point to go for victory. Then Clark gritted his teeth and talked to himself. It doesn't matter whether he used the Coué method or some other. What he did goes on the record.

"I'll be darned if after that overwhelming lead by his opponent, Clark made six points. Then it looked easier. "If I can make six in one hand, I can do the same thing the next time I start," said Clark to himself. And that is exactly what he did do, excepting for the fact that he went one better. He made seven. Thus it was 13—14 and anybody's game, where before that hand it had looked like a walkaway for Macklin. Clark continued to keep the Buffalo star on the defensive all the time, and in the three extra points he won by a score of 17—16. It is impossible to give him too much credit for an incredible performance. As already related, it was simply pure courage of the highest order that enabled Clark to travel from a hopeless distance in the rear to a glorious victory. The man simply did not know when he was licked, and in the end it turned out that he was not licked at all.

Clark Gets Into Semi-Final.

Clark's victory places him in the semi-finals of the tournament in the same half with James Reid, the professional at the Crescent Athletic Club. Reid defeated John Jacobs, instructor at the Harvard Club, in straight games, 15—11, 15—8, 15—11, proving his superiority with absolute decisiveness. The third match of the day was won by Walter A. Kinsella, the present world's professional champion, who is playing through the current tournament in defense of his honors. He beat Harry Conlin of the Crescent A. C. in straight games, of which the closest was the third. Conlin made 10 points in the third game, but Kinsella was the real master all the way, outmaneouvring the Crescent man handily, well though the latter played. The remaining match in the round before the semi-finals between William F. Gahley, professional at the New York Athletic Club, and Douglas M. Bomeisler, the sole remaining amateur in the competition, was put over until today.

The summaries:

National Open Squash Tennis Championship—Third Round—Walter A. Kinsella, Squash Club, defeated Harry Conlin, Crescent A. C., 15—3, 15—6, 15—10; Ernest Clark, Columbia Club, defeated John Macklin, Buffalo Tennis and Racquet Club, 12—15, 9—15, 18—16, 15—7, 17—16; James Reid, Crescent A. C., defeated John Jacobs, Harvard Club, 15—1, 15—8, 15—11.

FINK SURVIVES AT NATIONAL SQUASH

R. Earl Fink of the Crescent Athletic Club and Douglas M. Bomeisler of the Yale Club became the finalists yesterday afternoon in the annual handicap squash tennis tournament of the National Squash Tennis Association. Fink, starting from eight points behind Whitlock and allowing two points to Fred S. Whitlock of the Harvard Club, won by scores of 11-15, 15-7, 15-2, 13-18, 15-7. Bomeisler won three games to one from his clubmate, Otis L. Guernsey, the scores being 15-17, 18-15, 15-11, 15-12. Bomeisler was handicapped at minus 2 and Guernsey at minus 4. Both men are former stars in Yale's football world.

Fink's victory was earned by greater persistency of court covering. Whitlock was the Crescent man's equal in angle shots and in heavy hitting. In fact, the difference between the two was of the smallest in every department of play, expecting that in the fifth game Fink was more consistent and steadier in his getting. In the fourth game, Whitlock had a lead of 10-3, yet almost lost, being extended to extra points to take it. That was the story of the entire match, with Fink trying for every shot and gaining the decision in the end by superior staying power. It was a notable battle, with honors as even as they well could have been.

Bomeisler's hard forehand hitting was the secret of his victory over Guernsey. In this match, also, the difference of skill was the slightest. Bomeisler had a bit harder punch in his finishing shots and that enabled him to win. In court tactics, Guernsey was quite his equal.

National Handicap Squash Tennis Tournament, Semi-Final Round—R. Earl Fink, Crescent A. C. (minus 2), defeated Fred S. Whitlock, Harvard Club (minus 6), 11-15, 15-7, 15-2, 13-18, 15-7; Douglas M. Bomeisler, Yale Club (minus 2), defeated Otis L. Guernsey, Yale Club (minus 4), 15-17, 18-15, 15-11, 15-12.

Penn State Names Bedenk, Star Guard, to Lead Eleven

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., Jan. 17.—E. J. Bedenk, right guard on the Penn State eleven for the last two seasons, was today elected captain of the Nittany Lions for 1923. He is a junior in the Liberal Arts Schools and hails from Mansfield, Pa. The choice is a popular one, for during the last season Bedenk was the outstanding player in the Penn State line and was given prominent mention as a leading guard in the East. While Captain Deetz was out with injuries during several games last Fall, Bedenk was appointed acting captain by Coach Hugo Bezdek.

With only three players lost through graduation, indications are that Bedenk will lead another strong eleven next Fall.

FORDHAM DEFEATED BY ST. JOHN'S FIVE

Loses Fifth Straight Basketball Game of Season—Score Is 40 to 21.

Fordham suffered its fifth straight defeat, and its most decisive one of the present basketball season, at the Hunt's Point College gymnasium, last night, when it went down before the assault of the St. John's College quintet by the one-sided score of 40 to 21.

The Maroon team displayed a poor brand of the court game, and, although trailing by only five points at half-time, the score then being 14 to 9, the visitors walked away with the game in the second half. Keenan, right forward, were the stars for the winning five, scoring fifteen goals from field. OPERATION ON HAND BRINGS RUTH HERE

Babe Ruth's quarterly operation was held at St. Vincent's Hospital early yesterday morning and was pronounced a complete success by Dr. Edward King of 417 Park Avenue, the operating surgeon. A slight infection on the third finger of the left hand was lanced and dressed, and at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Bambino was on his way back to his ancestral estate at Sudbury, Mass.

The Babe is now one of the most regular customers at St. Vincent's. It was there that he was treated by Dr. Hisg when his elbow became infected during the 1921 world's series. In March of 1922 Ruth tarried for a few days while he had his tonsils removed, and last August he played a return engagement, dropping in one Saturday afternoon and having an abscess on his right leg lanced. Yesterday's visit, therefore, was his third within a year and his fourth in fifteen months, making him one of the most active of the St. Vincent alumni.

Ruth is a man of many infections. In addition to the three mentioned above, he opened an old sore early last November and had to visit his physician to have it cleaned and dressed. Back in August, 1920, he was bitten on the right wrist by an insect and had to have a three-inch incision made. That may have been the beginning of his trouble.

Operations Casual Incidents.

Operations have now become a mere incident in the Ruth daily routine. This latest one was dashed off casually. Accompanied by Mrs. Ruth, he slipped into New York late Tuesday evening and went at once to see Dr. King, who looked his other infections, big and little. At the urgent suggestion of the surgeon, Ruth went immediately to St. Vincent's, arriving there at 12:45 A. M., spending a few minutes in the operating room and emerging again at about 1:30. From the hospital the Ruths motored to the Hotel Ansonia, and there the Babe rested until it was time to take the 2 o'clock train back to Boston and Sudbury. Mrs. Ruth will stay here for a day or two.

Fear of a rapid spread of the infection was what prompted such a speedy operation, according to Mrs. Ruth. The Babe was in much the same situation as his hard-smashing colleague of tennis, William T. Tilden 2d, who recently suffered a scratch on the middle finger of his right hand and had part of the member amputated between the first and second joints. The loss of the middle finger might have handicapped Ruth somewhat, for the big digit is something useful to have around when swinging a bat at a baseball. At any rate, Ruth decided to emulate his tennis confrere only to a certain limit, and wisely decided to have the infection removed while his hand was still whole.

Mrs. Ruth said the operation took only a few minutes and the surgeons were confident that there would be no further trouble. Asked how her husband was feeling after his sojourn on the farm, Mrs. Ruth said: "He never felt better, and he looks finer than in many years. He says that the work on the farm was just what he needed to get into shape. This little operation won't affect him. He'll be on hand for the Spring training trip, and he expects to show New York fans some things that will open their eyes. The baby? Oh, she's fine. We left her at Sudbury to watch over the place while we came to New York."

Giants Sign Yale Player.

On the recommendation of Billy Lauder, one-time Giant and later Yale baseball coach, the Giants yesterday signed Jim Kernan, the catcher who was the storm centre of a battle at the New Haven University last Spring. Kernan for a time was regular catcher on the Yale nine, but Coach Bernie Tommers benched him in favor of Bill Mallory and then the storm broke. Indignant alumni published an open letter condemning the baseball authorities and alleging that Kernan, a heavy hitter, had been relegated because he was not one of the "select group" of favorites. Charges of playing fraternity politics were hurled freely, but the controversy calmed down slightly when Coach Tommers brought out the batting averages, and showed that Kernan was batting about .232.

Shortly after that Kernan signed with Reading of the International League. He caught in three games and batted in five, making no hits and no errors. Then, at his own request, Manager Bender gave him his unconditional release, and he is said to have signed later with another minor league club, being released again before the end of the season. He was a free agent when the Giants got him.

Lauder told McGraw that Kernan is a real catcher, steady, brainy and strong with the bat. Acting on that advice, the Giants let Louisiana of Fordham drift to the Braves and signed the Yale man, who will be taken South in February.

Kernan is still an undergraduate at Yale, but he will be graduated next month. He was first enrolled at Syracuse and transferred to Yale, where he played both football and baseball. He had the reputation of being a good halfback, but he never got further than the second team in 1921. Last season he was ineligible because of his professional ball playing.

Yanks Unearth Phenoms.

The Yanks came to bat with two young phenoms they have unearthed. One is Corporal George Anderson of Battery C, Sixty-first Artillery Battalion, Fort Monroe, Va., who was recommended by Charley Herzog as an infielder who can play any position. Herzog says he is the best all-around player in the Third Corps Area, of which Charles is athletic director.

The other discovery is Fred Spates, a pitcher whose native habitat is Westboro, Mass. He was once with Brown University and then pitched for semi-pro clubs around Boston. Scout Paul Krichell picked him up. Spate is a right-hander, 22 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall and weighs 175 pounds.

Brooklyn yawned slightly over the Ebbets resignation threat and then went about its customary business. The Squire has been resigning two or three times a year since he came into baseball, and one of his favorite sayings is: "I will sell out if I get my price."

There was more interest in the borough over the report that Wilbert Robinson is angling for "Ollie" Mitchell, the sensational southpaw of the San Francisco Club. Bernie Neis is mentioned as part of the return consideration, the theory being that Neis will take the place vacated by Jimmy O'Connell. Robbie is understood to have been in touch with Jack Miller, the Frisco manager, who was Writers at Kearny, N. J.

WYNNEWOOD AT 15-1 NEW ORLEANS UPSET

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 17.—The old black gelding Wynnewood, owned by Mrs. T. O. Webber and dutifully and competently trained by her husband, tossed form into a topsy-turvy heap by winning the St. Charles Players' Purse, which held the position of honor on this afternoon's racing program at the Fair Grounds. A carefully restricted group of sharpshooters profited by the victory of the son of Ben Brush, getting the ripe odds of 15 to 1 for their investments.

Royce Rools, the Fairmont Stable's campaigner, was a heavily played favorite in this event and might have rewarded his backers with good racing fortune. He was cut off several times in the course of the journey of a mile and a sixteenth and yet fought it out for the place with C. P. Winfrey's Servitor, a length behind the winner, losing second money by a nose only.

The talent found the going very rough in the effort to pick victors. It was not until the final event of the day that a favorite showed in front at the wire. This was Little Ammie, L. T. Bauer's filly, which was a lukewarm choice at 7 to 2 in a field of eleven cheap horses and which beat the "good thing" of the race, C. N. Freeman's Encrinite by well over a length.

Encrinite Pounded Down.

Encrinite was pounded down from tens to sixes and finished with a powerful rush in the final furlong of the mile and an eighth, but was not good enough to threaten the winner.

Wynnewood's victory in the featured race was achieved without much difficulty. The dusky veteran was in prime form and was well handled by Aubrey Lang. The Canadian jockey kept his mount under light restraint back of the early pace set by Tan Son, and Wynnewood succeeded to the leadership without opposition when Tan Son quit cold at the entrance to the stretch.

When the racers were straightened out for the dash toward the finish Mrs. Smallwood brought Servitor forward with a determined rush, which caused Lang to shake up Wynnewood. The gelding responded willingly to the new demand and drew out to win handily. Royce Rools finished fast and almost got up in time to take the place from Servitor.

The colors of A. Swenke, which have often been flaunted in front during this Winter's racing here, were carried to victory in the third number, a six furlong sprint, by the chestnut colt, Leslie. This son of Mont d'Or II. or Peter Quince led a baker's dozen of three-year-olds past the judges, covering the route in the creditable time of 1:13 3-5.

Corcoran Holds Swenke in Hand.

Johnny Corcoran, who had the mount, kept the Swenke racer in hand to the stretch and then let him down to overhaul the pacemaker, Elizabeth Bean, and win by well over a length. Chiva took the show money.

QUAIL IS FIRST IN TWO-YEAR-OLD RACE

HAVANA, Jan. 17.—The running of the two-year-old race at Oriental Park this afternoon overshadowed the other races in point of interest. There were ten starters, several being Cuban bred, which were making their maiden effort. The Williams brothers furnished the winner in Quail, a bay filly by the imported stallion Iron Cross II.-Chanteuse.

Quail, favored by the inside post position, made all her own pace, winning in easy fashion from one of the W. R. Coe entry, Sleigh Bells, which beat Liborio. The last named and Chapparra, which was fourth, are Cuban bred.

American Legion was an easy winner in the fourth event. Brothers had him in hand in the early stages and, after trailing the leaders to the stretch turn, assumed an easy lead to win handily by a length from Twenty-Secen. The pacemakers, Pittsburg and Flying Orb, stopped to a walk in the last sixteenth, the latter being lame when pulled up.

Six of the nine starters in the fifth race fought it out all through the home-stretch. Fifty yards from the finishing mark five of them were aligned across the track. In the last twenty yards Split Grass, on the inside, drew away and won by a length. The next five were noses and heads apart.

APPLEBY DEFEATS KLINGER WITH CUE

Edgar T. Appleby, national and international amateur billiard champion, defeated Jacob Klinger, former amateur champion of Southern Europe, in last night's game in the Eastern amateur Class A 18.2 balkline billiard championship tourney at the Liederkranz Club. The score was 800 to 175. Appleby completing his string in twenty-four innings. He had a high run of 60 and an average of 12 12-24. Klinger's high run was 28 and his average, 7 14-23.

Klinger went into the lead when he gathered 22 before missing in his third stand at the table. In the sixth inning he continued to forge ahead by running 16. Outside of runs of 10 and 13 in the third and fourth innings, Appleby was unable to do much in the way of scoring and at the end of the tenth inning, the champion was trailing Klinger by 10 points, the score being: Klinger, 70; Appleby, 58.

In his eleventh inning, however, Appleby made a fine run of 51. It was the first time during the match that he showed the mastery over the ivories of which he is capable. This run brought his total up to 80. Klinger, with a run of 28 in the same session, still kept the lead with a total of 98. Klinger had runs in double figures only four times thereafter, while Appleby hit high marks several times. The first of these came in the thirteenth inning when he forged ahead with a run of 46. Two innings later he ran 30 before missing and in the following session he clicked off a total of 60 which settled the issue.

The score by innings:

B. T. Appleby—0 1 10 13 0 0 2 8 0 4 51 16 46 2 30 60 1 0 0 1 11 23 5 21—800. High run, 60; average, 12 12-24.

W. Raleigh was a winner and loser in last night's games in the Washington Heights pocket billiard tournament at Cranfield's Billiard Academy, 181st Street, last night. He defeated James Ferguson, 100 to 58, but lost to Edward O'Brien, 100 to 56. The first game required 52 innings, Raleigh having a high run of 14. O'Brien, in his game against Raleigh, had a high run of 18, and the game was completed in 33 innings.

Martin Ackerman, scratch player, defeated Morris Bloomgarden in last night's game in the Manhattan handicap pocket billiard tournament at the Recreation Billiard Academy, Manhattan, last night. The score was 75 to 34. Bloomgarden, who was playing for 35, had a high run of 10. Ackerman had a cluster of 14.

BROWN IS VICTOR IN PINEHURST GOLF

PINEHURST, N. C., Jan. 17.—The big feature of today's second round of match play in the Winter Golf League's championship tournament at Pinehurst was the match in which T. Russell Brown, the medalist, and Roy Barnhill of Des Moines went around together in 74 and in which "Rusty" Brown finally won by the narrow margin of 1 up. The medalist was 3 up on Barnhill at the thirteenth. They halved the fourteenth under par, and Barnhill, developing a great streak of golf, evened things up with a winning 3 on the fifteenth, a win under par on the difficult sixteenth and a great 2 on the seventeenth hole. The Des Moines golfer's fine uphill work went for naught, however, when Brown, missing a four-foot putt for a birdie 3 on the home green, stymied Barnhill and won the hole, 4 to 5, and thus won the match.

George C. Dutton of Boston, former league champion; R. Murray Purves of Beston, the present title holder, and B. V. Covert of Buffalo won their matches by comfortable margins and came through to the semi-finals in company with Russell Brown.

Appropriate ceremonies marked the award of a handsome trophy today to William A. Curley of Chicago, who won the final match in the "Coué division," originally composed of three players whose qualifying rounds were too high to permit them to qualify for the tournament proper. Curley was the third of the trio, and he came through to today's final round by drawing a bye.

Mrs. J. H. Wright of St. Albans, L. I., who won the qualifying medal in the women's round on Monday and who on Tuesday, by reason of incorrect figuring of her fractional handicap differences, was officially and erroneously entered as losing her first round match, was restored today to the women's championship sixteen. The medalist promptly proceeded to win from Mrs. Lorenzo, Daniels of New York, taking the match, by 4 and 3, despite a handicap disadvantage of seven strokes.

MORSE ADVANCES IN BELLEAIR TOURNEY

BELLEAIR HEIGHTS, Fla., Jan. 17.—George E. Morse of Rutland, Vt.; Grantland Rice of Englewood, N. J.; Hugh Halsell of Dallas, Texas, and George Belshaw, of Denver, Col., are the semi-finalists in the Belleair golf tournament which is being played here this week.

Morse was the medal winner Monday when he turned in an 81. Since that time his golf has steadily improved. Today he started off from the first tee with a drive that reached the ditch on the first hole, a distance of 300 yards. In disposing of Dr. L. B. Dickerson of Clearwater, Morse was out in 39 strokes. He made par figures for the next three holes, disposing of his opponent by 7 and 6.

Rice beat Burton Preston of Mansfield, Ohio, by 5 and 4. The Englewood golfer covered the first nine holes in 37 strokes. He was one under fours for the remaining five holes. Continuing at this pace he would have registered a 74. Rice defeated Morse in last year's tournament. They will meet again tomorrow in the semi-final.

The summary:

First Sixteen—George E. Morse, Rutland, Vt., defeated Dr. L. B. Dickerson, Clearwater, by 7 and 6; Grantland Rice defeated Burton Preston, Mansfield, 5 and 4; Hugh Halsell, Dallas, Texas, defeated Edwin Goodman, Hunningdale, 6 and 4; George Belshaw, Denver, defeated S. Hayes, Palmetto, 1 up.

Second Sixteen—H. E. Taintor, Aiken, S. C., defeated J. B. Newton, Roanoke, 4 and 3; F. F. Storm, Clearwater, defeated Charles A. Toring, Brookline, 3 and 2; C. H. Foster, Mayfield, defeated W. C. Denison, Shaker Heights, 2 and 1; C. J. Gleason, St. Andrews, defeated T. W. Kennedy, Merion, 1 up (19 holes).

Having resolved in 1921—the time we defied the protests of many retail dealers and opened our factory doors to the general public—not to allow any obstacles to stand in our path—we later discovered that 1922 presented still greater difficulties that would have to be overcome.

The beginning of 1923 saw all these barriers swept away—we are now firmly settled on the permanent foundation of selling to you at genuine wholesale prices. With a clean slate and a clear conscience, we are in a

ITALY'S PROPOSALS.

In Washington as well as in Paris and London keen interest is taken in the report that the Italian Government is about to come forward as an intermediary between France and Germany. All the dispatches from Rome, however, make one point clear. Premier MUSSOLINI is to stand by the essentials of the plan which he laid before the conference of the Premiers in Paris on Jan. 2. Of that the taking and holding of "productive guarantees" were an essential part. Hence the hints now given that the Italian Government, in any intervention which it may undertake, will notify Germany that she must submit to some form of economic control, if she is to be granted a moratorium during which her currency may be reformed and her budget balanced. At Paris MUSSOLINI proposed four different categories of productive guarantees. They included some of the same items as those covered in the French plan, but went even further than the French have as yet gone in their seizures in the Ruhr. It is altogether likely, therefore, that the Italians will be found very much at one with the French in any effort which MUSSOLINI may make to bring about another general conference.

To induce Germany to seek such a conference as soon as possible has been the aim of the French all through. It must also be the desire of the British Government. If Rome is really making approaches to Berlin in order to bring this about, the movement ought to be encouraged by American opinion, so far as our Government can with propriety express it. But Germany cannot deceive herself longer about the hard conditions which will be laid down for her. She can have the conference and can get a moratorium, but must give bonds for good conduct. That was the essence of the French plan produced on Jan. 2, which said on the subject of guarantees that, without them, "the last three years have shown that it is impossible to trust Germany to carry out her agreements."

AMENDING THE CONSTITUTION.

"We, the people of the United States," ordained and established the Constitution. In their several States they ratified it. From the process of amending it they seem to have disappeared. In their stead, State Legislatures, assuming to act as their agents, without caring to ascertain the will of the people of their several States, are driven by organized minorities, and in some cases ratify in express violation of their State Constitutions. After the methods used in the ratification of the Eighteenth and Nineteenth Amendments, how, outworn, how ludicrous, seems JOHN MARSHALL'S statement that "the people made the Constitution and the people can unmake it. It is the creature of their will." The rights of States are tossed away carelessly by Legislatures acting as "amending agencies" without knowing whether their principals, the people, want an amendment ratified or rejected.

That the action of Legislatures which ratify though elected before an amendment is proposed or submitted, of Legislatures that ratify an amendment though the Constitutions of their States forbid them to vote on it, is constitutionally and legally correct, doesn't alter the fact that the will of the people is not expressed by them. There ought to be some restraint upon the activities of minorities and of "amending agencies" that haven't consulted or refuse to obey the orders of their principals. The joint resolution introduced into the Senate by Mr. WADSWORTH and into the House by Representative GILBERT, and on which the Senate Judiciary Committee has been holding hearings, aims at such restraint. It proposes in place of Article V. this substitute:

> The Congress, whenever two-thirds of each house shall deem it necessary, shall propose amendments to this Constitution, or, on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments, which, in either case, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of this Constitution when ratified by three-fourths of the several States through their Legislatures or conventions, as the one or the other mode of ratification may be proposed by the Congress or the convention: Provided, that the members of at least one house in each of the Legislatures which may ratify shall be elected after such amendments have been proposed; that any State may require that ratification by its Legislature be subject to confirmation by popular vote; and that, until three-fourths of the States have ratified or more than one-fourth of the States have rejected or defeated a proposed amendment, any State may change its vote. And provided further, that no State, without its consent, shall be deprived of its equal suffrage in the Senate.

This article is to become part of the Constitution when ratified by three-fourths of the State conventions of delegates chosen by the people in each State. It is at least conservative enough. Both houses of a Legislature should be elected before it is properly qualified to act on an amendment; and confirmation by popular vote shouldn't be permissive but compulsory. To that submission of amendments to the people we must come, if Constitutions are to be creatures of the popular will; and the sentiment of the people of the several States should have an opportunity to manifest itself when it has changed in regard to a particular amendment, before that is hopelessly imbedded in the Constitution, subject to be kept there forever by the will of a few Legislatures in a few States. Amending the fundamental law ought to be a most serious and not too easy a business.

GOVERNOR PINCHOT'S CHART.

When GIFFORD PINCHOT talked to the Pennsylvania Society in this city a month ago he said that he was "eager "to buckle down to progressive government." ROOSEVELT was "the great American Executive," and he would walk in his steps. "The chart of the new order," which Mr. PINCHOT proclaimed in his inaugural address at Harrisburg on Tuesday, was notice to the Republican organization, which gave him the campaign manager he didn't want, that he will not take his cue from the politicians and will be his own Governor. "He is a good forester," said one of them during the campaign, "and it's a darned "shame to spoil a good forester in "an attempt to make a poor Governor." Mr. PINCHOT is going to see about that. And so is Mrs. PINCHOT, who said when the ballots had been counted: "I campaigned as a Re-"publican for my candidate. I did "not tour with Mr. PINCHOT. Mr. "PINCHOT will appoint a woman to "his Cabinet."

The two make a strong team. Great men who have had good wives always acknowledged that they owed their success to their better halves. Mrs. PINCHOT was bound to have her husband nominated for Governor of Pennsylvania, and she is equally determined that the good forester shall not be a poor Governor. But they will have to reckon with the "dark forces" that war upon progressivism. The bosses are cynical, but, after all, Pennsylvania is full of progressive Republicans, as THEODORE ROOSEVELT proved when he carried the State over WILSON and TAFT in 1912. In his inaugural address Governor PINCHOT made his appeal to these Roosevelt Republicans. He pledged himself:

> To drive all saloons out of Pennsylvania.
> To prevent and punish bootlegging.
>
> To advance the interests of the farmers who feed us.
>
> To meet the just needs of those who served in the World War.
> To get a dollar's worth of service for every dollar spent.

The chart called also for the eradication of abuses that are dear to the hearts of the politicians, for economic and industrial betterment, for a virtuous as well as a prosperous Pennsylvania. If Mr. PINCHOT carries out half his plan of reform and regeneration, he will prove himself a wonder among public servants. "Pennsylvania," he says, "needs a new birth of political righteousness." Can GIFFORD PINCHOT bring this about without following the example of his old friend ROOSEVELT, who chummed with MATT QUAY and kindred spirits to sift the wheat of good government from the chaff of unrighteous politics?

In driving out the saloons and preventing bootlegging Governor PINCHOT will have his hands full, if he does nothing else. Rum flows in Pennsylvania as water from an Alleghany Mountain spring. Enforcement of the Volstead act is the worst of all farces in the Keystone State. Under the Woner law licenses to saloons are issued "just," it has been said, "as if there were no Federal prohibition law," and liquor and beer are openly sold all over the State. The politicians connive at the traffic. "Pennsylvania," says Governor PINCHOT, with the valor of his purpose, "must either control the criminals or be controlled by them." In his job of house-cleaning, so much to do, so many enemies in the gate, the new Governor will be the observed of all. Is he Sir Galahad or Don Quixote?

GERMAN LABOR AND THE "ECONOMIC WAR."

Dispatches from Berlin yesterday asserted that labor in the Ruhr was standing firm and would refuse to work for the French in any circumstances. Messages direct from Düsseldorf, however, told a different story. Labor leaders were assembled to hear from the French General SIMON a criticism of their own Government, which seems to be largely justified. He argued that it had sacrificed the interests of the German people to those of the industrial leaders, and he invited the laboring class of the Ruhr to send scouts to the districts which have been under French occupation for two years past and see how much better German labor has fared under French control.

Presumably, the union officials assembled at Düsseldorf knew about that already. For while the mine owners were stubbornly refusing to work for the French, and declaring that they would rather go to jail, the labor leaders agreed to work so long as the mines are kept running. That it would be possible for the French to operate the Ruhr industrial plant in the absence of the technicians they seem to doubt, but at any rate labor is willing to work, apparently, so long as it is fed and paid.

The Ruhr, if not red, is rather cerise. Memories must still be alive of the campaign in the Spring of 1920, when a republican Government, which had not dared to punish the participants in the Kapp Putsch that drove the Government from Berlin to Stuttgart, relieved its feelings by sending the Reichswehr on a campaign of reconquest in the Ruhr district against labor forces which were in the field partly as a protest against the reactionary tendencies which the Kapp putsch represented. There is no reason to suppose that there is any enthusiasm for a French connection, or even for an autonomous Rhineland, but there must be a good deal of distrust of a Berlin Government which STINNES has always been able to wind around his finger.

Things will be different if The Tribune's Berlin correspondent is correctly informed. He tells us that the Socialists and a large faction of the Centre Party have decided that Chancellor CUNO's Government has outlived its usefulness. These gentlemen seem to doubt the sincerity of CUNO's "policy of fulfillment" quite as much as do the French. Socialists and Centre together can control the Reichstag by a small margin, and they plan to set up a Government under the Socialist ex-Chancellor MUELLER, which would try to make a compromise with France and would apply real pressure to the Ruhr capitalists. That, it can be said without hesitation, would be the most hopeful thing that could possibly happen. The control of the industrialists over the Government, exercised by threat or favor, is the most menacing political fact in Germany. A Government which really broke their power could deal with France on a basis of frankness; and in that case the elements in POINCARÉ's following which may have ulterior purposes could not stand up against the feeling of the great mass of Frenchmen whose chief interest is in making the Germans pay up.

CLEARING UP A MYSTERY.

The English Cabinet a few weeks ago had a case of a document that was sent to all the Ministers, but was read by only two or three of them. The others, including Lord BIRKENHEAD, Mr. AUSTEN CHAMBERLAIN and the Prime Minister himself, assumed that it never existed simply because they had not seen it. Apologies came later, when the facts were established. But that mystery seems simplicity itself compared with the Hughes-Boyden misunderstanding. On Monday a Paris dispatch stated that Mr. BOYDEN, our unofficial representative with the Reparation Commission, was about to present "an American plan" respecting German reparations, or at least a sort of address to the German Government on the general subject by the Reparation Commission. When this news reached Washington, the State Department was both thunderstruck and mystified. It put out a statement declaring that "this department does not know to what "this dispatch refers." It added that neither the Secretary of State nor any one in behalf of the department had approved any plan of the sort.

By Tuesday, however, the department discovered from its archives that it had indeed received from Mr. BOYDEN about Dec. 1 a memorandum respecting a draft of a plan which, on the request of the Reparation Commission, he was proposing to submit to it. Apparently, the department had paid no attention whatever to this communication, which it regarded as "a purely personal suggestion." Being held to be such, "it was not re-"garded as requiring any action what-"ever on the part of the depart-"ment." But see how great minds differ in interpreting so plain a matter. From Paris comes word that "the representatives of the State Department here" assumed that the Boyden plan met with the approval of Secretary HUGHES because he "made no suggestion" in regard to it. Thus we are led into a deepening mystery about the nice distinctions between "personal" and "official" documents, and are left with the great question unsettled whether, in diplomacy, silence gives consent.

The affair is of no vital consequence at present, since the Boyden plan, whatever it was in the middle of November, cannot have great pertinence to the situation as it exists today. But it does throw a strong light upon the awkwardness of having unofficial representatives, without direct and full instructions from the State Department, taking part in European conferences. So irregular a method is certain to lead to complications out of the ordinary. It is scarcely to be wondered at that Congressional leaders feel that the State Department's attempt to clear up the mystery only makes it more dense than before.

STOCK EXCHANGE REGULATION.

The comment passed by most people on the Lockwood committee's recommendations regarding regulation of stock exchanges is that the committee had been appointed to investigate housing conditions and nothing else. That fact would appear to put this part of the report in much the same position as if a legislative committee named to investigate the fuel situation were to report a bill for plural voting. It is not quite analogous even to the general legislation fastened as a "rider" on a Congressional appropriation bill; for in that case the bill must be considered as a whole, and the appropriations are peremptory. The Lockwood report does not have to be acted on as a whole.

Most of the arguments embodied in the Stock Exchange part of the report, presumably at the instance of the committee's counsel, Mr. UNTERMYER, are familiar from previous efforts to subject the Stock Exchange to public regulation. It is perhaps significant, however, that the program for compulsory incorporation, hitherto urged with great persistency, is now abandoned. What is left is chiefly a plan for "State supervision" over sale of securities on the stock exchanges, with a plan for licensing all dealers in stocks and bonds.

As to the first, such application of State authority was discussed by the Hughes committee of 1909, to which the Lockwood report makes respectful reference. The Hughes committee, speaking of the plan of incorporating the Exchange and of the argument that thereby State supervision and court processes would replace the arbitrary, disciplinary powers of the Stock Exchange's own committee, replied that "we think that such power "residing in a properly chosen com-"mittee is distinctly advantageous," for the reason that "the submission "of such questions to the courts "would involve delays and technical "obstacles which would impair dis-"cipline without securing any greater "measure of substantial justice." As for the plan of "licensing" all sellers of stocks and bonds, it will hardly be overlooked that, while a formal license implies restrictive powers by the State, it also implies recognition of the business done by the licensed broker as legitimate. It would apply to every kind of dealer in securities, and to that extent might easily enable the irresponsible peripatetic dealer, who had managed to get a license, to pose to his customers as having public authority behind him equally with a Stock Exchange house subject to all the restrictions and safeguards of the Stock Exchange.

THE STATE AND THE SCHOOLS.

The political reasons for making local Boards of Education independent of the municipal authorities are sufficient to call for such legislation at Albany as is suggested by the reported recommendation of the Joint Legislative Committee on Education. To these considerations this paper has repeatedly called attention. A recent episode in our city's educational experience threatens to become a settled policy—so complacently and brazenly is political influence admitted to be used in securing appointments—unless the educational system can be freed from this continuing menace.

Apart from this is the financial reason. In several cities with a population of more than 100,000, the combined expenditures for city purposes have reached the constitutional limit in relation to the assessed valuation of real and personal property. Four courses are open: either (1) the constitutional limit must be raised; or (2) the Constitution must be amended to exempt taxes for school purposes from the limitation; or (3) the State must raise by tax a larger amount for educational purposes and apportion it among the school districts of the State; or (4) municipal expenditures, including those for schools, must be reduced.

The cities are under compulsion to maintain certain minimum salaries, established by statute in 1920, for teachers throughout the State. They may not, therefore, reduce the largest educational expense without repeal or amendment of that statute. It was enacted by a Republican Legislature, but received not only the approval but the urgent support of Governor SMITH, and was carried into effect by an appropriation of $20,550,000. It is recommended by the Joint Legislative Committee on Education, appointed two years ago, that no attempt should be made to reduce these salary schedules. This advice should be followed, for, as the committee reports, the present salaries law has worked a "great improvement in the public schools of the State."

This reduces the alternatives to three. But two of the remedies are applicable only through constitutional amendment (unless, indeed, the courts should hold that moneys raised for school purposes are exempt from the municipal limitation because education is a State function). The remaining alternative is the assumption by the State of a larger share of the cost of education. This would further help to equalize the educational burden over the State. But any such step should be accompanied by legislation assuring the independence of the Boards of Education and their direct responsibility to the districts which they represent.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Lawlessness Met by Lawlessness.

A "labor trouble" which has developed in a way highly unusual, if not wholly unprecedented, is reported from the State of Arkansas. Two years ago the employés of a small railway serving an agricultural district of some size and importance as its only practicable means of communication with the markets where its inhabitants buy and sell went on strike against a reduction of wages. That was lawful and legitimate, in spite of the general feeling, nowadays, that both the employers and employés of a public utility are under a special obligation neither to suspend nor to stop its operation because of the inevitable inconvenience and almost inevitable loss thus imposed on what has come to be recognized as a third party in interest—the public.

But the railway men did more than strike; they determined that their places should not be taken by other men, and to carry out this determination they from time to time resorted to violences of many kinds, including the destruction of much property—bridges and the like—essential to the operation. By these means they did so reduce the service it rendered that the farmers whose welfare and almost whose lives depended upon the running of its trains gathered in a small army and took action. One striker they hanged, a prominent sympathizer they flogged, and the other strikers they drove away with a vehemence that made resistance as dangerous as it would have been useless.

That done, quiet and order prevailed, and the State militia, which had been mobilized, did not go to the scene of these riotous proceedings.

Was There Any Alternative?

For what these Arkansas farmers did there was, of course, no legal excuse. Whether or not there was for it some approach to an excuse of another kind depends on whether or not a proper appeal to the constituted authorities, State and along the railway line, had been made, and on whether or not those authorities had taken the certainly not impossible measures to protect the road's property and the operation of its trains.

That point has not been made clear, as yet, by the dispatches, but the circumstances as disclosed warrant a suspicion that, if the representatives of the law promptly had done their full duty as soon as the bridge-burning and general sabotage began, the farmers would not have felt obliged to do what they did.

As a class, especially in parts of the country like Arkansas, farmers are not particularly fond of railway corporations, and it safely enough can be assumed that these farmers' affection for the Missouri & North Arkansas Railroad was not the guiding impulse of their lives. Yet they went to its defense at last and made manifest their resolve that interference with its activities should cease. That they would have done this except as a desperate expedient for which they knew of no alternative does not seem likely.

At any rate, the farmers did not wear masks when they went about their savage work, and seemingly they are prepared to take the responsibility for it and to defend it as necessary for the termination of an intolerable situation.

As for the strikers, it is only fair to say that, though they were unionists in what they did, they were not exponents of unionism as its principles and methods are formulated by its only recognized leaders. But what they did, unfortunately, was what too often has been done by other unionists without exciting the amount of union condemnation which such acts deserve from every good citizen in or out of unions.

It Looks Rather Unpatriotic.

Strange as it may seem, there are tax-dodgers even in Germany, that land of such noble devotion to the general public interest as embodied in the State. An American just returned from Europe made on the way back the acquaintance of a representative of one of our big tobacco corporations and learned from him, in one of those moments of confidence that often come upon travelers, of a queer trick by which some Germans not only are cutting down their taxes, but also are getting real money to a place where the Government cannot get hold of it.

This is the way the trick is worked: The agents sold to a retail dealer in Berlin $1,000 worth of tobacco. By request he made out a bill for $1,500 and this bill was paid by real money to that amount sent here. Of the $1,500, however, only $1,000 was taken by the tobacco company; the remaining $500 was deposited in a New York bank to the credit of the Berlin merchant.

But there is more to it than that. The merchant enters his purchase on his books as $1,500 paid for stock, and then he sells that stock at prices bringing him only $1,200. He has made a real profit of $200, but an apparent loss of $300, and it is the $300 loss that figures in his income tax return as a deduction from gross.

That this is anything like a general practice in Germany cannot be deduced from a single example. A good many Germans have no opportunity thus to lighten their burdens—and thus to increase that of their country. It is not likely, however, that the case stands alone. At once ingenious, simple and effective, it would have a considerable popularity in any country where the millennium still delays. There are several of them. And one notices that the course of the American agent puts on him—and on his principals—a full share of whatever moral turpitude his customer must answer for on the great day when all hearts are to be searched.

With the motive that prompted the introduction at Albany of a bill compelling every secret society, under heavy penalty, periodically to make public the names of all its members, there will be, just now, a good deal of sympathy. It is almost, of course, directly at the only secret society the existence of which depends on keeping its membership from outside knowledge, and nobody minds what happens to the Ku Klux Klan if only the happening is one it does not like.

But the bill does weary to no small extent the semblance of a law which, in the accomplishing of a single effect needed at one time, will make a lot of inconvenience and some expense for many people against whom there is no grievance and will do it for a long time.

There are many secret societies that have no objection to having their members known as such; indeed, the members of most, if not all of them, take pains by the wearing of pins, rings and other more or less conspicuous decorations to make their affiliations known of all observers. Why should these rather naïve, but wholly innocent, folk be bothered till the end of time to make out for general public inspection their ever-changing rosters?

EASY MONEY OPERATORS.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Just as the people are getting cash for the Government war securities now falling due, an extra effort is being made by the swindlers and fake stock operators to get their money away from them. When the Ponzi and Bishop exposures showed how easy it was to dupe the people and take millions from them, the press of the country took up the subject and did a noble work. This did much to check the work of the get-rich-quick operators and to show the people that there were far better methods of investing their money. Working in conjunction with the press of the country at that time was the United States Government savings system. As a part of the great thrift and savings movement it offered the people a safe investment in Treasury saving certificates, Government obligations sold on a discount basis and yielding interest at 4 per cent., compounded semi-annually. In urging the people to buy these securities the Government took occasion to warn the people to beware of the sharpers and confidence men with bogus stock get-rich-quick propositions.

The joint campaign of the Government and the press had a good effect. The reports from all over the country showed that the people heeded the warnings. But the memory of the people is short. Of late, reports have begun to appear showing that these vultures are again preying upon the public in the hope of getting part of the $6,636,000,000 which the Government is now paying out on the matured 1918 War Savings stamps. The bogus oil wells and gold mines are again in evidence.

On this account it is time to issue another warning in the interest of people with hard-earned savings to invest. The Government is doing all it can; it has offered a safe and good-paying investment, but more is needed. Again there is an opportunity for the press of the country to render good service. We need a revival of the campaign against the fraudulent schemers and vendors of fake stocks. It has almost become a public duty to protect the people against these pliers of a nefarious trade.

Bismarck's Words.

In your recent editorial "A Language Which Germany Understands," you quote the following statement by Bismarck, early in 1871: "* * * We should from time to time send a flying column wherever they show themselves recalcitrant, and shoot, hang and burn."

If this is true, it would brand Bismarck as one of the most inhuman statesmen. I have relied upon your accuracy and repeated this statement in an argument, but its truth has been challenged, and I therefore ask of you to bring proof that you have quoted Bismarck truthfully. F. BERTUCH.

Conflicting Weather Signs.

How about it? Wild geese flying northward at Cape May, a wandering doe and fawn at Linden, N. J., an inquisitive robin at Elizabeth, the same State, darting from at Goshen, N. Y., and a saucy catbird, Otsego County, N. Y., on the 10th with eight inches of snowfall on the night of the 11th, making a total of three feet on the level in the woods and more coming all the while, with weather prognosticators informing us that the good old Spring time is almost here—does all this mean that we are to hold back our order for another half ton of coal?

If All Men Agreed.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It would be this poor old world's salvation if the President and Senate of this country thought the same as you and I do of the American people's duties to the world. I like to read your editorials on international affairs because personally I think it is the greatest crime of the ages that we stand aside and refuse to use our influence on the same side on which we fought.

You do not get the farmers' condition right, though, at all. No one would, though, who has not tried farming. It is unbelievable to any one who is accustomed to make real money in other business.

SO SOUNDS MY SYLVIA SINGING.

As far-off music
At nightfall in a city street,
As a kid brook's enticing call
To seek its veiled retreat,
As a pure rill of sympathy
For all who walk in misery—
So sounds my Sylvia singing.

No florid aria
Her songs to me discover,
No soulless scale of icy notes
That endless swoop and hover;
Like the sweet murmur of a dove,
Or waveless on a shore at eve—

No choir celestial
No martial brass of piercing sway,
Rending the heart asunder,
Could weave the spells enfolding me,
Urging to all I pray so hard to be,
When I hear Sylvia singing.

COST OF THE CITY COLLEGE

Borne by the Whole City, It Is Argued, for the Benefit of the Few.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The discussion of the trouble about the City College in your editorial article and news columns leads me to ask for an opportunity to bring out certain facts that do not seem to be generally realized.

There are hardly five cities in the United States which furnish entirely at the expense of the city treasury a college education without fee. Cincinnati is the only one that I can think of at present, and there the financial burden is partly borne by endowment.

A prevalent idea that State universities in the West furnish higher education without fee to citizens of the State is entirely erroneous. All of them in their professional schools charge a fee, and a large majority of them charge fees in their college departments. If I am not mistaken, the University of Michigan has always charged a fee to citizens of Michigan since it was established. The situation at the University of California is very interesting. In 1918, when I was there, President Benjamin Ide Wheeler, who was then in office, told me that the Summer session of the University of California had never given gratuitous instruction to any one since it was established. And at that time he said, "Not only have all expenses been met out of the fees paid by the students, but there has remained a moderate surplus."

Is it not an unwarranted supposition that if a fee of $60 or $100 a year were charged all students of the City College many worthy students would have to lose the opportunity of the higher education? The plain facts of the college bureaus of self-help at Yale, Harvard, Columbia and many other colleges negative completely this assumption. It is always to be remembered that the great hindrance to a higher education above the period of compulsory education is the cost of living, which the wage-earning parents have to bear. That is the reason why the student population of the City College is such an infinitesimal proportion of the population of the city, which carries on its shoulders the whole financial burden of the college. The number of students in the college is hardly one-tenth of 1 per cent. of the city's population, while the number of its graduates each year, which we may consider its finished product, is very much less than that.

When any one who is anxious to do justice to the wage-earning man or woman will really visualize that point, he certainly ought to hold that the heavy burden of the City College should be borne in considerable part by those who enjoy the benefit of it, and not wholly by the toiling masses who pay rent in the great metropolis.

NEGLECTED AVENUES.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Commissioner Enright's interesting plan for relieving congested traffic by construction of a second-story tunnel roadway from the Battery to Harlem would add merely one more roadway. Why not make sensible use, at comparatively little expense, of the three already existing roadways—not utilized by any means to their capacity—broad and straight, leading from the heart of the congested district out into the uncongested districts? Apparently no one seems to think of the great avenues lying on the east and west, Tenth Avenue, Eleventh Avenue and First Avenue, which could be converted into magnificent boulevards.

Tenth and Eleventh Avenues are at present practically useless to automobile traffic because of their barbarous occupation by railroads which should properly be in tunnels. Nobody seems to think of the waste of through traffic space perpetrated on this crowded city by the unnecessary blocking of traffic on these two broad thoroughfares by the surface operation of freight trains.

Tenth and Eleventh Avenues, paralleling each other, could be made one-way boulevards, thus making possible their use not only for slow and heavy traffic but also, at the same time, for light and rapid traffic on the same street, for they are both of them broad enough. As it is now, passenger automobiles avoid Tenth and Eleventh Avenues and First Avenue below Fiftieth Street because of the obstructions by trains.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In today's TIMES, under the heading "Reform the 'Hot Dog,'" you print a statement attributed to F. C. Foy, food expert and editor of The Daily Market Report. This is a serious indictment of the sausage and frankfurter industry as a whole, coming from a man whose statement carries a certain weight with the reading public. It is a misleading statement and wholly undeserved by the large group of reputable food product manufacturers who at all times have done everything to uphold the quality and wholesomeness of sausages and frankfurters in the New York market.

For many years past the sausage and frankfurter products of these manufacturers have contained 100 per cent. solid meat—prime, fresh meat—without the slightest suggestion of cereal, artificial coloring matter or synthetic flavoring. In fact, the quality of these products has always been up to the standard that the Board of Health now requires.

The reputable manufacturers are all operating their plants under United States Government inspection, while the non-inspected provision plants have been permitted, through a laxity of law, unlimited use of cereal, coloring matter and synthetic flavoring. These non-inspected plants are supposed to be inspected by local Health Department officials, but now this deceptive practice has been forbidden by the new law.

Wrong With the Whole Country.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your Topics of the Times on the Mar Rouge case seems to invite explanation; you cannot conceive what is wrong with these Americans. The thing that is wrong with them is the thing that is wrong with the whole country—a craze for interfering with our neighbors and regulating their lives for them. At large we inflict prohibition and censorship. Every separate unit, from a church congregation up, is obsessed with passing judgment on something or somebody. Those Louisiana people simply carried regulation to a logical climax of torture and lynching. Have you ever listened to a prohibitionist rejoicing over the death rate due to bad whisky?

Is It Fair to Germany?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

According to a statement in THE TIMES, one representative on the Reparation Commission has solemnly declared that the economic conditions of the peace treaty of Versailles are impossible of execution. This has been corroborated by the delegate of Great Britain in the name of his Government, and of late seems to have become the general opinion in Great Britain and the expressed conviction of all leading financiers and economists all over the world.

If this be true, has Germany received a fair test of her good-will in the rendering of reparations? ARTHUR M. RAY.

FRANKLIN HONORED BY MANY SOCIETIES

WREATHS ON HIS STATUE

The 217th anniversary of Benjamin Franklin's birthday was celebrated yesterday morning at the Franklin statue in Park Row at Spruce Street, under the auspices of the New York City Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The base of the statue was surrounded by wreaths placed there by representatives of many patriotic and business organizations.

Despite the cold and the chill wind the platform was crowded with guests and speakers. Mrs. Alfred W. Cochran, president of the New York Chapter, welcomed the gathering, and J. Henry Smythe Jr., representing the Red Cross Veterans' Post, presided. Suffragan Bishop Arthur S. Lloyd, representing Bishop Manning, made the invocation. The following message from President Harding was read:

"I cannot forbear the expression of my gratification that the New York City Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, has arranged for a fitting commemoration of the birthday anniversary of Benjamin Franklin. To few, indeed, among those who made our country's independence possible and who effected the establishment of a permanent union does our own generation owe a greater debt than to the great Franklin. Few of the great figures of history have represented such a versatility of genius as was personified in Franklin. His wisdom was truly the wisdom of the ages and our own generation might well give intimate study to his precepts. I have to congratulate the New York City Chapter and to express my most sincere hope that the exercises will be widely attended and thoroughly appreciated."

Children Decorate Statue.

Adolph Schmidt, a Boy Scout, dressed as was Benjamin Franklin on the day he arrived in Philadelphia in 1723, climbed the ladder reaching to the top of the statue and placed there a design of flowers representing the loaf of bread Poor Richard carried under his arm. Janice Peris, a Campfire Girl, dressed as Deborah Read, who smiled on Franklin that day and later married him, also climbed the ladder and placed a wreath on the head of the statue. So did Virginia Helene Ginter, dressed as the Countess Diana Polignac.

Murray Hulbert, President of the Board of Aldermen, who placed a wreath at the foot of the statue from the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States, of which he is Vice President, spoke of Franklin's life in a brief eulogy.

"When we come to reflect that in 1776 this remarkable man had already passed the allotted three score and ten of life, his achievements appear to be that of a superman," said Mr. Hulbert.

"Franklin from his early boyhood was a thorough believer in athletics and that a strong and healthy body was as essential as a cultivated mind and a moral and upstanding righteousness. From his early youth he participated actively in all the sports and athletics of the best of that time, none of which possessed a greater charm than the art of swimming. To illustrate his youthful inventive genius, I will cite but one example—his use of oval pallets for the hands and sandals of similar construction for the soles of the feet, which enabled him to obtain such a propelling stroke that even at the age of 11 he stated that he could with ease have swum across the Hellespont.

"In his autobiography he states that when a young printer he could carry with ease a large form of type in each hand up and down stairs, and when past his eightieth year he could be seen displaying the splendid physical strength which he still retained.

An Example for Youth of Today.

"There is no better example for the youth of today than the life of activity, frugality and perseverance which this man exhibited through more than four-score years of a busy life. Surely the placid philosopher who could calmly say to John Hancock, the President of the Continental Congress, that if the signers of the Declaration of Independence 'did not hang together they would all hang separately' had something of divinity in his wonderful character."

Major Gen. Hugh L. Scott, former Chief of Staff of the United States Army, Professor William H. Scott of Princeton and President of the American Philosophical Society founded by Franklin, both great-grandsons of Franklin, were presented to the audience by Colonel Arthur Woods, Commissioner of Police. Mrs. John B. Childwick, representing Archbishop Hayes, delivered the closing prayer.

FRANKLIN AS "AD WRITER."

Pepper Cites the Philosopher as a "Supersalesman" of Ideas.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 17.—Benjamin Franklin was held up tonight to the Poor Richard Club, an organization of advertising men, as a super-salesman by Senator George Wharton Pepper. From Franklin's work, he declared, posterity could find a lesson in the art of writing not only advertisements but in any other field.

As a basis for the literary construction of a forceful advertisement, Senator Pepper quoted a paragraph from Franklin's newspaper, in which the philosopher and scientist said that writing, to be read, ought to have a tendency to improve the reader by inspiring his virtue or his knowledge. The method should proceed regularly from things known to things unknown, distinctly and clearly, without confusion. Nothing should be expressed in more words that are required to make the whole should be as short as possible consistent with clearness.

"Franklin, the super-salesman," said Senator Pepper, "made liberty his selling point and sold to the New World the idea of a Republic effectively advertised to liberty. And he succeeded in selling the same ideas to the people of the Old World that they disenfranchised the attempt of their public men to threaten it.

"Franklin, as a salesman, used as a medium of distribution every package touched with the light of humor and the knowledge of human nature which must mark the successful advertising writer of today.

"It was well enough for us to withdraw our troops from the Rhine at an emphatic declaration that Europe must not count upon American guns as a factor in the settlement of her controversies, but we should be making an enormous contribution to the stability of civilization if, when the right time comes for conference with plan and purpose, we could send a representative who combined in wholesome proportion as Franklin did, idealism and practical common sense, unyielding courage and irresistible charm."

WM. BARNES WEDS MRS. BATTERSHALL

COURT WAIVES 5-DAY RULE

GREENWICH, Conn., Jan. 17.—William Barnes, prominent Republican leader of Albany, N. Y., and President of the company publishing The Albany Journal, and Mrs. Maud Fiero Battershall of Larchmont, N. Y., were married here this afternoon in the office of Judge Stephen L. Radford in the Town Hall. Justice Albert S. Mead, who performed the ceremony, said that Judge Radford had issued a permit waiving the five-day rule in regard to marriage applications. Clifford Fiero, brother of the bride, accompanied the couple and was a witness at the ceremony.

Mr. Barnes was divorced last November, from his first wife, who was Miss Grace Davis of Cincinnati. They have two sons, Thurlow Weed Barnes of Albany and Landon Barnes of New York. The bride is also divorced, her first husband having been Fletcher W. Battershall, whose father had long been rector of St. Peter's Church in Albany. They separated several years ago. She is a daughter of J. Newton Fiero, Dean of the Albany Law School.

Mr. Barnes is suffering from an attack of laryngitis and when interviewed was scarcely able to speak. He and his bride are planning a honeymoon trip around the world.

WANTS COLLEGES TO MAKE CITIZENS

REPORTS ON HARVARD YEAR

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 17.—In his annual report, made public tonight, President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard notes the rapid increase of Harvard men going into business at the expense of the ministry, of medicine and chiefly of law and education.

At the same time Dr. Lowell asserts with emphasis that the object of American colleges should be to fit students to be citizens, rather than merely to earn a living. It is in line with this thought that Harvard's President suggests that youths should begin their universify careers at an age when they have not become impatient of cultural pursuits because of a desire to devote themselves to utilitarian preparation for their approaching careers.

"At commencement many years ago Lord Playfair quoted the saying that the function of the two great English universities was to teach men to spend, that of the Scotch universities to teach them to earn, an income respectably: and he added that American universities existed for both of those objects. This cryptic remark might be the subject of endless discussion. The aim of the American college should be, not to give its students the technical training and tools of their future occupation, but rather to fit them to be citizens, to develop those qualities that lead to the better life both for themselves and for the community. Probably most people who now dispute about the object of college education would agree upon the traits, intellectual, moral and physical, which the perfect type of man should possess, and the aim of a college ought to be to produce men with as large a share of those traits as possible. This does not mean that it should seek to make its students all alike; to attempt it would be to stunt the growth of the strongest capacities. But it means that the aim should be something larger than a preparation for earning a living."

Wants Younger Students.

The grounds for his belief that students should enter college younger are set forth thus:

"A considerable number of candidates who pass the examination always fail to enter," he says. "Not a few are kept out for a year on the ground that they will derive more profit from college when older. This last reason seems in almost all cases a mistake. Statistics have shown conclusively that the younger students were better in scholarship and conduct than the older ones. This result is no doubt due in part to the fact that the student who enters young is on the average a brighter, more industrious, more serious boy than one who completes his school days at a later age. But there is also something in taking each part of the educational process at the appropriate time. Many a student enters older than is wise and then strives to go through his college course in three years, thereby substituting a year in school for one in college, although for the development and maturing of his capacity the latter is far the more valuable.

"With the long preparation now required for any professional or commercial career our youth tend to enter upon their life's work too late, and to lay the foundation for their career at a time when they should be actively engaged in it. That often creates a desire for knowledge directly useful to the neglect of deepening and enlarging the outlook on life; an impatience with studies that would have been appropriate earlier, but are irksome when taken too late.

"Any youth of ordinary ability can be prepared for our examination at 17. At that age he is quite competent to pursue college courses, and four years afterward, when he is 21, is as late as he ought to begin the study of his profession or the apprenticeship for his career. In the case of young men who pass the examination for admission and then postpone their entrance, there is a further disadvantage. Their course of study is necessarily broken or diverted, and it is often hard for them to take up again the normal current of work. The transition from school to college, from set tasks performed under a regular supervised assignment of time, to a freer self-direction—a change in which many students are in danger of losing their bearings—becomes more difficult if in the meanwhile their attention has been turned into a different channel and the momentum has been lost."

Ministry Deserted for Business.

The report comments on a chart which shows a decrease in the proportion of Harvard men entering the ministry, and a rapid increase of men going into business, this increase appearing "to have been made in part at the expense of medicine, but chiefly of law and education." Dr. Lowell deplores the decrease as "a source of great regret, the more notable because it does not appear to accompany any progressive diminunition of religious feeling among the undergraduates," but finds reason for satisfaction in the increase, as to which he says:

"The most striking fact that appears in the chart is the large proportion, and rapid increase, of graduates who go into commercial and industrial pursuits. In 1896 it was 35 per cent. of the class, and rose to over 53 per cent. in 1916. This is in itself by no means undesirable. That the men engaged in business affairs, and especially those who occupy positions of great power and responsibility, should have a broad education and a large outlook on life, is altogether for the advantage of the nation.

"Perhaps our colleges could do no better work than forming the minds and characters of such men; and if the growth in the total number of college students is due to the fact the youths who look forward to a business career are turning to the colleges more than in the past it is altogether a healthy sign, provided the colleges do not take it as a reason for substituting a technical business training for the greater purpose of enlarging and deepening thought. Whether the attraction of business will prove permanent or not is difficult to forsee. The result will probably depend upon the extent to which men of affairs find that college graduates are more useful to them, and show more resourcefulness and enterprise, with no less industry, than other men. If they do find this they will tend to prefer graduates who have made good use of their time in college."

President Lowell dwells on the acute need for more dormitories, pointing out that, while there has been growing recognition of the value of community life in forming student character, there has been a decrease of available housing facilities in Cambridge, because Boston people are going there to live in large numbers, since the subway now offers rapid transit. That some relief is in prospect for freshmen Dr. Lowell shows by this announcement:

"By the generosity of Mr. and Mrs. George A. McKinlock of Chicago, a fourth freshman hall will be built, in memory of their son, George Alexander McKinlock Jr., of the class of '16, a gallant officer, who fell at Berry-au-Bac on April 21, 1918. It is very grateful for this memorial to a brave soldier, which will be an inestimable boon to generations of future students living in the hall that bears his name.

The report mentions the need for a new chemical laboratory and shows gifts and legacies during the year, exclusive of Carnegie pensions, subscriptions to the endowment fund and other special forms of income, amounted to $3,612,471.

The aim and the value of general examinations are discussed at length, Dr. Lowell expressing the opinion that they have been effective.

ONE DIES, FIVE HURT IN BOBSLED CRASH

SOUTH ORANGE, N. J., Jan. 17.—One youth was killed and five were injured, two seriously, when a bobsled laden with ten High School boys crashed into a concrete pillar supporting the Lackawanna Railroad tressel at the foot of Third Street here tonight.

James N. Naulty Jr., 18 years old, of 144 Ralston Avenue, South Orange, a student in St. Benedict's Preparatory School, Newark, died instantly of a broken neck. The others badly injured are: Frederick Brautigan of 86 Valley Street, Orange, probably fatal contusions of the back, taken to the Orange Memorial Hospital; Howard Grady of 562 McChesney Street, Orange, leg injured, taken to the Orange Memorial Hospital; John Stieve of 189 Tichenor Avenue, South Orange, slight abrasions.

The police said the crash resulted from confusion. Gustave Cassie of 461 Valley Street, Maplewood, was steering the sled down the hill when he saw two groups of coasters coming up just as he approached an abutment in the middle of Third Street.

Fear that he would run into one or the other group bewildered Cassie and he sent the sled crashing head-on into the post.

Cassie was uninjured and is being held by the police pending a thorough investigation of the accident.

The sled belonged to Cyrus Wallace of 110 Second Street, South Orange. For more than twenty years it has been used on neighboring hills. Wallace was not in the party.

POLICE AID NEEDY FAMILY.

Mother Asks Help After Food and Fuel Give Out—Rent Is Paid.

After she, her husband and four children had suffered from hunger and cold all day, Mrs. Nora Tibbatts, 33, of 504 East Seventieth Street, went to the East Sixty-seventh Street Station House last night and pleaded with Lieutenant John Archipoli to help her get food and fuel and money to pay her rent. She said the rent agent threatened to dispossess her today if she did not pay $30 due for two months on her small flat.

Lieutenant Archipoli immediately took up a collection among the reserve policemen in the house. It was sufficient to pay her rent. He gave her $1.50 to buy food for the night. Loaded with several loaves of bread, a bottle of milk, sardines, tea and a can of beans, the mother hurried home. The place, investigation disclosed, was a cold three-room flat.

The food was soon eaten and the mother hurried out to hunt the docks for more food and fuel. She said her husband had been ill and had been unable to obtain work since Christmas.

OLYMPIC'S MASTER STRICKEN ON TRIP

MANY CELEBRITIES ABOARD

Viscount Burnham Says Trade's Future Depends on Getting Debt Question Out of the Way.

The White Star liner Olympic arrived yesterday twelve hours late from Southampton and Cherbourg with Captain A. E. S. Hambelton, R. N. R., the master, in a critical condition through having had two gastric hemorrhages on the voyage.

Captain Hambelton was 60 years old last month and was making his last voyage on the Olympic before "swallowing the anchor," as sailors term it, and retiring on pension.

Captain R. F. David, R. N. R., who will succeed him, was on the ship as observer for the voyage and was on the bridge when the Olympic docked. Lt. R. White, Assistant Commander, took charge of the ship last Thursday when Captain Hambleton collapsed.

Captain David will take the Olympic back to Southampton.

Captain Hambelton had his first attack last Thursday afternoon when Dr. Miles Prior was summoned and watched him for forty-eight hours during which the veteran commander nearly slipped his cable two or three times. Nothing but the unremitting care of the ship's doctor and the Captain's own physical strength pulled him through.

It was always Captain Hambelton's boast that during his forty-four years at sea the only time he went under and failed to report for duty was when he was "torpedoed" by a big motor truck after the war was over and suffered a fractured spine and a cracked skull. Much to the amazement of his doctors and fellow-officers he recovered to command the Olympic.

In Care of Local Surgeon.

The Captain was taken in a private ambulance late yesterday to Dr. McMillan's private hospital, 138 East Sixty-first Street, where Dr. Edwin Banha, the house surgeon, is attending him.

Dr. Prior said there was every hope that Captain Hambelton, undoubtedly the most popular ship master in the Atlantic trade, would pull through. He is also well known in the Royal Naval Reserve as the Mark Twain of the mercantile marine.

Among the many celebrities on the Olympic was Viscount Burnham, the managing director and principal owner of The London Daily Telegraph, who has come over to visit Canada and will later visit Jamaica. It is his first visit to New York since 1894. When the highest building in the city was located on Park Row and there were no subways.

Viscount Burnham in commenting on after-war conditions in England, said:

"We have got to get the whole debt question settled and out of the way before trade can be regained. The problem now is to get the United States and England standing shoulder to shoulder in the troubled situation that menaces the whole world.

"In England we have a million and a half unemployed on our hands and there are more women in business than there were before the war, which also makes a difference. There was no immigration from England for four years and that is why there are more people in the country to be taken care of in spite of the number that were killed or died during the war. England will improve but the movement will be very slow and it is no use buoying ourselves up with any other idea."

The general opinion about the French advance into the Ruhr district, the Viscount said, is unfavorable, "but France has done it and the only thing to do is to wait and see what happens."

Another passenger was Sir Robert Horne, the late Chancellor of the Exchequer, who is now Chairman of the Baldwin Steel Works, Sheffield, and has come here on private business. He will return to England on the Olympic Feb. 10. He will address the English-Speaking Union at a luncheon to be given him by the local organization next Saturday.

Sees Greater Role for United States.

"I profoundly believe," Sir Robert Horne said, "that it is the destiny of the United States in the near future to exercise a more important and vital influence for the good of the world than ever before in her great history."

Donald Harper, an American international lawyer from Paris, arrived for a six weeks' business trip and said that the Germany reparations and how Germany was to be made to pay those was the most vital question in France today.

Sir Stanley Bois, Chairman of the British Rubber Growers' Association, arrived with Lady Bois to attend a conference with American rubber manufacturers. Present fluctuating prices, he said, were causing large losses to the growers of rubber in the British colonies.

Sir Stanley was accompanied by J. Burgess and E. P. Miller. Percy S. Hill, President of the American Tobacco Company, was also a passenger on the Olympic.

Major General George H. Harris, U. S. A., now on the reserve list, was also a passenger.

Peggy Marsh, the actress, came back to town over the death of her husband, Albert Johnson. She had expected him to cross over on the Olympic next Saturday to join her in the new home she had bought in London.

MISSING GIRL FOUND WRITING LOVE PLAY

ONE CENT IN HER PURSE

Ate Only One Meal in the Forty-Eight Hours She Was Gone—Glad to Go Home.

After having been away from home for forty-eight hours, Miss Claire Rogers, 18 years old, cousin of Eugene O'Neill and a student at Columbia University, was found yesterday in Greenwich Village. She had taken a furnished room in Bohemia under a false name and was writing a play on a typewriter. Hungry and cold, for she had spent all but one cent of the $9.51 she had when she began her flight from home, she said that she had gone to Washington Square to look for local color and atmosphere to put into a play, but that she was glad to go home.

Her brother, William B. Rogers, an employe of the Hancock Insurance Company, Hartford, Conn., told how his sister had been found. "When the story of her disappearance was published in the papers this (Wednesday) morning," Mr. Rogers said, "Mrs. Helen Stone of 43 Washington Square South called up my sister's aunt, Miss Agnes Claire Brennan of 405 Riverside Drive, with whom Miss Rogers had been living. Mrs. Stone said that my sister had gone to her house Monday evening to look for a room, but that she had not been able to put her up.

Girl Sought Quiet.

"My aunt and I and some detectives from the Missing Persons Bureau went to Washington Square to look for Claire. We found her next door to Mrs. Stone's house. She was very much surprised to see me, but took it all as a matter of course. She said that she wanted to live in Washington Square and get a little of its atmosphere, so that she could put more realism into her plays. I told her that her little trip was all over and that she had better pack up and come along home."

Miss Rogers, having returned to the Riverside Drive apartment, then told the story of her experiences. She disclosed that Mrs. Stone was a friend of her family. "I saw Greenwich Village for the first time last November when my aunt took me to visit Mrs. Stone," said the girl. "I was shown around the village at that time. It was Sunday and very quiet, and it struck me as a place where I could be quiet and undisturbed while writing. I decided I could write better there than at home.

"Last Sunday night I packed a suitcase with some things, including text-books on play writing, manuscripts, copy paper and my portable typewriter. I hid the suitcase in the hall when I left for class Monday. After class I stole back to the hall, got the suitcase and went out again. I got a taxicab at Claremont Avenue and 116th Street, around the corner from my aunt's apartment.

"The taxi broke down and I had to get another one. The trip cost me $3. After going to Mrs. Stone's house I went to another house in the neighborhood, but there was a drunken man in the doorway. He frightened me and I ran away. In another house the woman who came to the door said that she didn't think I looked as if I belonged to the Village. 'You have no business here. Get out!' she said.

"Then I went to 41. They showed me one room for $5 without a bath and I knew I couldn't write there. I took the only other room, which was $6.50. That left me only one cent. I wrote all the time except Tuesday night, when I read a book on dramatic technique.

"After hiring the room I went back and told Mrs. Stone. I didn't know how I was going to eat, but it didn't worry me. Mrs. Stone invited me to have breakfast with her the next day, and I did. I did not eat anything the rest of the day and did not feel hungry."

Miss Rogers said she had enjoyed the experience, but would stay at home and go on with her university work. While living in the Village Miss Rogers worked on a play, "The Fateful Prank," dealing with a boy and girl love affair, and on some poems, which she had dedicated to friends.

JUBILEE SINGERS CHARM.

In strong contract to the tone and sentiment of the colored singers and players who have been making a name in New York recently and doubly beautiful because of it was the performance of the Fisk University Jubilee Singers at the Children's Theatre of the Heckscher Foundation for Children last evening. There were five of the singers, with the Rev. James A. Myers, the leader and tenor, giving the beautiful old negro songs with musical, harmonious voices that have always given them the charm and moving power which are like nothing else in the musical world.

There were the old familiar airs and words: "Steal Away," "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot," "Kentucky Home," the less familiar one, "Oh, Mary, Don't You Weep," "Witness," which the leader called an Homeric poem with its innumerable verses, bringing in Daniel, Joshua, all the Bible heroes, and the beautiful negro lullaby, "Little Bunch of Honeyness," among others. There was a solo by Luddie B. Collins, the bass, and Mr. Myers gave readings, with excellent action and dialect, of three selections from Paul Laurence Dunbar, "Saying Grace," "When Lias Goes to War" and "When Melindy Sings." The other singers were Mrs. James A. Myers, Carl J. Barbour and Horatio W. O'Bannon.

The program included what the Fisk singers called negro spirituals as well as folksong and they are fighting the "worrying of the negroes into jazz tunes," and endeavoring to preserve the old melodies which have soothed and charmed many generations of both white and colored people. The concert was given for the benefit of free entertainments for the children at the Children's Theatre.

MINNA KAUFMANN SINGS.

Soprano Heard in German, French, English and Swedish Songs.

Minna Kaufmann sang a recital of German, French, English and Swedish songs last evening in Town Hall. The program included "Cradle? Ah, no!" from Mozart's "Don Juan," a group of lieder by Schubert, Brahms and Strauss, French songs by Bachelet and Hahn; songs in Swedish by Grieg, Marikanto and Dannström, and songs in English by MacDowell, Densmore, Hageman and MacFadyen. The singer's higher notes were clear and well controlled, but the lower tones were at times strained to the extent of not being musical. The joy she took in singing the lieder she imparted to the audience, which seemed to take as much joy in listening.

Coenraad V. Bos made more of the accompaniments than is usually the case and he assisted the singer in getting back to the melody after she had continued singing through one of the piano passages. The program started promptly and was over an hour later.

Wagnerian Opera Company Sails.

The Wagnerian Opera Festival offices at the Manhattan received a cable dispatch last night from Bremen saying that 108 singers and musicians had sailed for New York on the United States liner President Roosevelt, after playing a farewell performance for the Seaman's Home. The Bremen opera house was packed at "ten times the regular prices" for this charity, the message said. The company was enthusiastically cheered at the close, and a large throng, including Governmental and civic officials, gave the singers a send-off when the President Roosevelt sailed.

MUSIC

Darius Milhaud and His Music.

There was a new and strange interest injected into the concert of the City Symphony Orchestra's series given yesterday afternoon in the Town Hall by the participation in it of Darius Milhaud, the French composer, and the performance of some of his works and works of other modern French musicians.

Mr. Milhaud has recently arrived in this country, where he is to spread the gospel of the latest French ideas in musical art. He is a member of the "Group of Six" in Paris, now reduced to five by the secession of one. He appeared yesterday as composer, conductor and pianist. The program included his "Ballade" for piano and orchestra, in which he played the piano part, and his "Serenade," which he conducted. There was other modern French music on the program; Erik Satie's "Two Gymnopédies," piano pieces orchestrated by an admiring Debussy; Arthur Honegger's "Pastorale d'été" and the second of Debussy's three "Nocturnes" for orchestra, called "Fêtes." The program began with Rimsky Korsakoff's "Scheherazade," played in a singularly laborious and unspontaneous manner. It took the place of Berlioz's "Fantastic Symphony," which could not be rehearsed owing to Mr. Foch's illness.

Mr. Milhaud's "Ballade" was the most difficult and problematical of all the modern French music presented; or, say, the worst. The piece seems to be permeated by a Spanish dance rhythm, but there is no "program"; "no connection with words, pictures or colors," as the composer expressed it in the notes which he contributed about his own and other French music. Some of the unregenerate would have added "or music." There are themes, as Mr. Milhaud points out, and even elaborate development of them. But the themes reach the extreme of insignificance and commonplaceness; and their development is equally unimportant. They are presented through a thick haze of discordant harmony, in which the orchestra is playing in several keys at once. As a guarantee of good faith, there is at the very end a perfectly good diatonic scale, up and down.

Mr. Milhaud played the piano part, which as he pointed out in his note, is not a solo but a voice in the orchestra, zealously; but the piece could not be given any importance whatever by any amount of zeal. His other composition is a "Serenade" in three movements; and, as in his account of the "Ballade" he did not hesitate to bring in the name of Bach, so in writing of this one he suggests Mozart as his model in form. It is considerably more like music than the other.

The first and the last movement begins with real tunes of a lively character; there is a suggestion of a fugato in the first—a very short one—and both are carried on into the same unnecessary ugliness of the discordant harmony resulting from playing in several keys at once. A milder species of this ugliness ends the slow middle movement, which begins with a likeness of the theme for English horn in the "Scene in the Fields" of Berlioz's "Fantastic Symphony," announced for this concert and not played.

Erik Satie's "Two Gymnopédies (a word whose meaning is not revealed) are unpretentious and straightforward, hardly seeming two contribute much to that marvellous record of "the whole evolution of modern music" which Mr. Milhaud finds in this composer's work. Nor does Arthur Honegger, in his "Pastorale d'Eté," show any of the horrific adventure that was heard in his "Horatius Triumphans," recently played by the Boston Orchestra here. It is simple, if not limpid, as Mr. Milhaud calls it, and goes some way to justify its title.

Among these pieces Debussy's impressionistic and pungently colored "Fêtes" seemed like the work of a towering genius.

Mr. Milhaud, whose appearance as conductor and pianist was unpretentious and unassuming, was hospitably welcomed and his music was politely applauded. There was applause for the other pieces; also a tendency to leave the hall before the end was reached. It did not seem certain that the number of convinced admirers was large, or that their enthusiasm was contagious; or even that the addition made to the knowledge of a new movement was highly significant.

MATZENAUER IN CONCERT.

Margaret Matzenauer, who had sung Isolde in a Brooklyn "Tristan" by the Metropolitan stars on Tuesday night, left the operatic aviary last evening to give a concert of her own in Carnegie Hall before an audience of imposing dimensions and demeanor.

In her program were an air, "Willst du dein Herz," attributed to Bach, with others of Brahms, Strauss and Erich Wolff, and groups by Russian, French and American composers. Gretchaninoff's "Over the Steppe" gave pleasure for some high tones securely held, and equally for the echoed nightingale trill of the piano, played by Frank La Forge. Arensky's waltz, "On Wings of Dream," a favorite of Sembrich, was repeated, and Rachaninoff's "Spring-time" was followed by La Forge's "If You See My Sweetheart." Mr. La Forge's own "Estrellita" was sung twice over, and there were lyrics by Lehmann on recall, as well as Elinor Warren, Cyril Scott and C. T. Griffes.

MELBA SINGS IN LONDON.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Jan. 18.—It was like old times at Covent Garden last night when Mme. Nellie Melba appeared as Mimi in "La Boheme," giving her services free in aid of the British National Opera Company. The audience gave the prima donna a great ovation and the critics declare her voice as wonderful as ever.

People began to gather outside the doors of the theatre at 11 o'clock Tuesday night in order to insure obtaining admission.

Strauss's "Rosenkavalier" Repeated.

BERTHA KALICH IN NEW ROLE

JITTA'S ATONEMENT, a play in three acts by Siegfried Trebitsch; adapted by George Bernard Shaw. At the Comedy Theatre.

Mrs. Blittier	Phoebe Coyne
Professor Bruno Haldenstedt	John Craig
Jitta Lenkheim	Bertha Kalich
Professor Alfred Lenkheim	Francis Byrne
Dr. Ernest Feesler	Walton Butterfield
Agnes Haldenstedt	Thais Lawton
Edith	Beth Elliott

"Jitta's Atonement" is an interesting comedy that does not always succeed in being plausible. It is important to this day and generation chiefly in that it introduces George Bernard Shaw in the guise of adapter—a rôle that he has not hitherto filled in the theatre—and secondly in that it brings Bertha Kalich back to the metropolitan stage.

As a matter of fact, the Shaw is only skin deep. As the play progresses there develop one or two situations, and occasional lines, where the hand of Shaw is momentarily evident. In particular, the philosophy of "Man and Superman" crops out of the play now and then. But in the main the play seems to have been the work of its original author, Siegfried Trebitsch, an Austrian who is not unimportant in his own country.

Dismissing Shaw for the moment, Trebitsch has sought in "Jitta's Atonement" to trace the consequences of infidelity in a given set of circumstances. The reactions of the various interested characters are set forth to be studied, and occasionally they seem to savor a little more of the theatre than they do of life. It is this note that gives the play its artificial character, but Trebitsch and Shaw would probably be the last to insist that they had been trying to write anything but an artificial comedy.

The first act reveals a rendezvous between a celebrated psychiatrist and the wife of another physician. The demise of the psychiatrist is here somewhat elaborately arranged for—not only is he subject to angina pectoris, but he calls attention to the unfortunate scandal that would ensue were he to die while in the wife's company. To make amends to the husband of the woman—a physician with whom he has been working—he exacts a promise from the wife that she will arrange for the publication of a posthumous scientific work under the name of the husband. This, of course, is a purely theatrical development.

Thereafter it is a battle to conceal the truth, with the facts being gleaned first by the husband and later by the daughter of the dead man—a suppressed character, incidentally, that persistently recalled the girl in Hartley Manners's "The Harp of Life." The atonement of the title consisted in Jitta's consenting to live out her life with her husband, so that thereby the reputations of all concerned—her husband, the dead man's widow and daughter and even the young physician who was about to marry the daughter—might remain untouched. There was a practical flaw even in this reasoning, of course, for the ingenious Jitta surely could have brought about a separation from her husband without permitting the whole world to guess the reason.

An artificial comedy, however, should not be examined too closely in the light of day—under the glare of the footlights it provides ample entertainment at the Comedy. Either Trebitsch or Shaw has written a number of amusing lines, and there is a generally capable performance throughout. Mme. Kalich is superb in several moments of the play, but yields to a somewhat over-guilty manner in the early parts of the second act. Francis Byrne is splendidly convincing as the husband, and there are other good performances by Thais Lawton and Beth Elliott.

Nora Bayes in Actors' Fund Benefit.

Contrary to an announcement made yesterday in THE TIMES, Ethel Barrymore will be unable to appear at the annual benefit performance of the Actors' Fund, which will take place at the Century Theatre on Friday afternoon of this week. Nora Bayes and Eddie Dowling have, however, been added to the program. Owing to the length of the bill, the curtain will rise at 1:45 o'clock.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Jan. 17.—Wednesday night the pressure was high throughout the Atlantic and East Gulf States, high and rising over the Rocky Mountains and over the western Canadian Provinces and low and falling over the great central valleys, the Plains States and the region of the Great Lakes with the centre minimum pressure, 29.00 inches, at Manitoba, where the barometer read 29.02 inches. This pressure distribution has been attended by fair weather in the Atlantic States and the Gulf coast, the Great Lakes and by much warmer weather in the Mississippi Valley, the Plains States and the Rocky Mountain region; also much colder weather over the western Canadian Provinces.

There have been local snows within the last twenty-four hours in the region of the Great Lakes and the northern Rocky Mountains and rain in the Pacific States, except Southern California.

In the New England States and New York the weather will be cloudy and much warmer Thursday, followed by rain on the coast and rain or snow in the interior Thursday night or Friday with increasing southerly winds. In the Middle Atlantic and South Atlantic States the weather will be cloudy and much warmer Thursday, probably followed by local rains Thursday night or Friday. In the lower lake region and the upper Ohio Valley the weather will be cloudy, unsettled, and much warmer Thursday, followed by rain changing to snow late Thursday night or Friday and colder weather Friday. In the East Gulf States, Tennessee and Kentucky the weather will be cloudy and much warmer Thursday, followed by showers Thursday night or Friday morning and colder weather by Friday night.

HIRSHFIELD RENEWS HUNT FOR PORTRAIT

FAILS TO ANSWER SUBPOENA

Commissioner Served With an Order to Show Cause Why It Should Not Be Set Aside.

The quest of David Hirshfield, Commissioner of Accounts, for a portrait of De Witt Clinton which once adorned the walls of the Board of Education met a setback yesterday.

The chain of circumstance that is making an art collector out of Mr. Hirshfield goes back to a Sheriff's auction sale last December. The Clayton Company, Inc., makers of automobile bodies, had a claim of $79 against the city, and got a judgment for it. Bertram Bodenheimer of 302 Broadway, counsel for the company, attended the sale and bought the painting for $175.

The portrait, done in 1854 by William Powell, was taken away. Eventually Commissioner Hirshfield casting up the city's accounts came to the episode of the portrait and an investigation was on at once. Mr. Bodenheimer explained that he had purchased the work of art for John Peiper of Water Street, but the most earnest efforts of Mr. Hirshfield failed to find Mr. Peiper. In order to find the owner, so that the Corporation Council could begin a replevin suit, the Commissioner issued a subpoena for Mr. Bodenheimer.

Commissioner Hirshfield was in his office in the Municipal Building waiting yesterday morning for the lawyer to come in and tell where the picture is when Miss Anna Epstein of 82 Eastern Parkway, Brooklyn, an attorney associated with Mr. Bodenheimer, came in. She said that Bodenheimer was busy and would be unable to appear. Then she handed the commissioner an order signed by Justice Leonard Giegerich, returnable in the Supreme Court on Saturday morning, directing Commissioner Hirshfield to show cause why his subpoena should not be vacated and set aside. Miss Epstein then left.

"I shall apply immediately to the Supreme Court for a body attachment and have Mr. Bodenheimer brought before men by the Sheriff," said Commissioner Hirshfield. "This action of Mr. Bodenheimer and his failure to answer my subpoena clearly indicates that he intends to do everything in his power to prevent the city from recovering this portrait.

"If it should develop that the city is responsible for the $79 judgment obtained by the Clayton Company against the Board of Education, the city has sufficient finances to pay it. There is no reason to believe that the city will evade payment of the judgment. The attempt to hide the picture can only be viewed as meaning that Mr. Bodenheimer means to keep the portrait from the city and retain it for his own use irrespective of the controversy between the Clayton Company and the city. This comes with bad grace from a lawyer who is presumed to uphold the law and protect the city."

Three Years for Postal Thief.

Abraham Goldsmith, a former postal clerk, who was convicted of having stolen a registered mail package containing Liberty bond coupons worth $3,500, was sentenced yesterday by Federal Judge Winslow to the Atlanta penitentiary for three years and six months. After his conviction Goldsmith pleaded guilty to an indictment charging him with having participated in the theft on July 18, 1921, from the General Post Office of Liberty bonds worth $1,400,000. Federal Prosecutor Moses Polakoff was in charge of the case against Goldsmith.

Freed of Larceny Charge.

Owing to lack of evidence, a charge of grand larceny against Armando Buccione, 20 years old, was dismissed by Magistrate Joseph E. Corrigan yesterday in Jefferson Market Court. The specific accusation against Buccione was that he had enticed boys from St. Phillip's Home, 417 Broome Street, to teach them to steal.

Vice Squad Arrests Ship Doctor.

Acting on the complaint of the Society for the Prevention of Vice that obscene pictures of foreign origin were being brought here, Federal agents yesterday searched the Orizaba of the Ward Line and confiscated a suitcase alleged to be owned by Dr. J. Musterole Works Without the Blister—Easier, Quicker

There's no sense in mixing a mess of mustard, flour and water when you can easily relieve pain, soreness or stiffness with a little clean, white Musterole.

RINCE BRINGS STORY OF GREEK DEBACLE

RMY FLED FROM TURKS

RIEVES FOR CONSTANTINE

re With Wife to Visit His Brother Christopher for Two or Three Months.

Prince Andrew of Greece, accompanied by his wife, who is a cousin of the Prince of Wales and the Queen of Spain, and sister of Lord Louis Mountbatten, arrived here yesterday on the White Star liner Olympic from Cherbourg, and was met at Pier 59, North River, by his brother, Prince Christopher, who preceded him to this country. When the brothers stood together on the deck their resemblance was quite noticeable. Both wore monocles. They are short-sighted, an inheritance from their mother, who was the Grand Duchess Olga of Russia before she married King George of Greece. Prince Andrew has gray eyes, while those of his younger brother are blue gray. The elder brother looks the younger because he is thin, but he is quite as democratic and cheerful in his manner as Prince Christopher. His fair mustache is so slight as to be scarcely noticeable. For a man who escaped facing a firing line by a narrow margin six weeks ago he was remarkably cheerful. His mood changed quickly, however, when he spoke of the sudden death of his brother, King Constantine, news of which came to him on board the ship. In his opinion his brother never recovered from his serious illnesses in 1915 and 1917, when he had inflammation of the lungs and pleurisy.

Says Greeks Are Tired of War.

Asked for his opinion on political conditions in Greece, Prince Andrew said there would be a change in the Government soon, as the general election could not be put off much longer, because the people were growing restless. This, of course, will mean a change in Premiers, he said. He did not believe Venizelos would return to Greece. The Prince said that the Greeks were heartily tired of war, that they had been fighting since the Turkish war of 1912, and wanted to get back to their land and to their families. He referred to the entry into Asia Minor as a grievous mistake, as it would have been impossible for a small country like Greece to maintain a large army to protect such a large territory outside its own frontiers.

Of his escape from death at Athens, Prince Andrew said that he owed his life entirely to the intervention of King George of England, King Alfonso of Spain and Pope Benedict XI. of Rome. He said:

"I have been able to thank King George personally in London for his kind interest in my behalf, and have sent through the proper channels my profoundest gratitude to the Pope and to King Alfonso at Madrid. It was the original intention of the military tribunal to try me at the court-martial with the Cabinet Ministers, in which case I should no doubt have been shot before there was time for intervention in my behalf. Fortunately for me the British Admiralty sent Commander Sir Gerald Talbot, who managed to have my trial postponed until Dec. 1, which was six days after the Ministers were executed."

Believed He Would Be Shot.

"Did you feel that you were likely to be shot?" the Prince was asked.

"Yes," he replied. "I had a premonition because I knew that the whole thing was a plot for revenge by the Venezelists who were defeated in 1920, when my late brother Constantine was recalled to Athens by the Greek nation."

"How long were you under arrest awaiting trial?"

"Just five weeks. I was confined in a private house and not in one of the public prisons as erroneously stated, and my wife was allowed to see me and my servant brought in my meals. Apart from the tediousness of the confinement I was not badly treated.

"The trial began at 9 A. M. on Dec. 1, and was concluded at 10 o'clock that night. I was sentenced to banishment at midnight just two hours later. The officials offered to let me sit with my wife in the royal box in the Parliament House while the trial was going on, but I preferred to remain in the house in which I was confined.

"The military tribunal accused me of having disobeyed the orders of my Commander-in-Chief in Asia Minor in the Sumer of 1921, when the Greek Army was marching toward Angora, Turkish headquarters under Kemal Pasha. When I first went to Smyrna in June, 1921, I was a Major-General with command of the First Division, and did so well that in July I was promoted to the command of an army corps, which meant about one-third of the entire Greek forces in Asia Minor. Roughly there were about 200,000 Greek troops in Asia Minor, but not more than 70,000 bayonets, as fighting men are termed in military circles.

The Advance on Angora.

"In my corps we mustered 18,000 bayonets and went marching away in high spirits to attack Angora.

"The Greek soldier is a good fighter while he is winning battles, but he does not possess the do or die spirit of the Anglo-Saxon races. We marched across the great salt desert where the dust was so great that the men had to scrape it off their faces at night with a stick before they could open their mouths to eat. We could only get water about every seven hours on the march, and that was rather brackish.

"The Greek soldier is a good fighter 600 kilometers and longer than that of the Allies in France, which made it very difficult to protect with the comparatively small army we had. I pushed on to Buyuk-Kokmlos with my Second Army Corps, which was about 60 kilometers from the Turkish base at Angora. After giving the matter consideration and consulting with my officers, I decided it would be dangerous to remain in such close proximity to the enemy lines andin so far advanced from the remainder of the Greek forces, and notified the Commander in Chief.

"Next day I received a reply stating that I had disobeyed orders by stopping, and directing me to continue my march to the eastward, which I obeyed. Twenty-four hours later I received another message from the Commander-in-Chief ordering me to retreat to Eski-Sher, a distance of 100 kilometers in the rear, which had been our front line early in July of that year, 1921. In my message I had not suggested to the Commander-in-Chief that we should retreat but that our army corps should withdraw the eastern flank, which was too exposed, and attack the Turkish forces on the western flank."

Tells Why Greeks Fled.

"How do you account for the disaster to the Greek Army last August?" the Prince was asked.

"The men were tired," he replied, "they had very little food and clothing, as there was not sufficient money in the Treasury to purchase necessary supplies. Then again the Turkish Army was equipped with splendid artillery of the Skuda type, made in Bohemia for the Austrian Government during the early days of the great war, which included cannon of all classes. They also had airplanes, and bombed our troops continually, which had a demoralising effect."

"Is it true that Soviet propaganda was circulated among the Greek troops in Asia Minor during the Turkish advance?"

"I don't know about that," the Prince replied. "I think our men were just tired of fighting, and a soldier's life in general, and decided to go home as quickly as possible."

"Did many of the regiments throw down their guns and run to Smyrna?"

"There is no doubt that is true, and thousands perished on the way. Just how many I cannot say."

"What about the minorities in Asia Minor?"

"Well, we went there to save them. King Constantine knew it would be impossible to hold Asia Minor much longer, and would have withdrawn the troops in the Summer of 1922, when he received no support from the Allies, but he declined to leave them to their fate. Now we have 1,500,000 of these unfortunate refugees in Greece, and we must find food and lodging for them until they can be distributed over the country and find employment, or emigrate to some other country. When peace is established in the Near East, which I hope will be soon, Kemal Pasha is a very fine military leader and Ismet Pasha is another good general. The Turkish soldiers fought well and were skillfully led."

Referring to the death of his brother, Ex-King Constantine, Prince Andrew said the last time he saw him was in August, in Athens, when he thought he was not looking well. He did not meet him at Palermo because the British cruiser Calypso, which brought him from Piraeus on Dec. 2, under escort of Commander Sir Gilbert Talbot, landed him at Brindisi, and he went from there to Paris.

Here Two or Three Months.

Prince Andrew, who is 40 years old, and speaks English fluently, said that he had no plans at present except to spend two or three months here as the guest of his brother and sister-in-law, Prince and Princess Christopher. He said the family would go into mourning for six months.

In the afternoon Prince Andrew went with his brother Christopher for an automobile ride, and the first stop was made at the Woolworth building, where Prince Andrew ascended to the roof for a view of New York City. He said he was nearly frozen before leaving the tower. He purchased models of the building to send to his six children. Three daughters are at school in England, and the others and his one son, the baby of the family, are living in Paris.

Prince Andrew was enthusiastic in his praise of the high buildings. He said he admired Broadway, and paid a compliment to New York's women whose costumes, he said, were "very neat indeed."

The Prince and Princess were accompanied here by a valet and a maid. They did not bring a great quantity of baggage. When asked why he did not have a gentleman in waiting to attend to social matters for him, Prince Andrew laughed and replied, "I am a democrat."

The couple occupy a suite on the eighth floor of the Hotel Ambassador, while Prince Christopher and Princess Anastasia are in apartments on the fifteenth floor of the hotel, where William B. Leeds and his bride, formerly the Princess Xenia, also are stopping. Mr. Leeds went to the pier with Prince Christopher to meet Prince and Princess Andrew.

The party shivered while posing on the "A" deck of the liner for twenty minutes for photographers and moving picture operators. The Princess was dressed in black and wore a black-trimmed hat with inverted brim. She is very deaf. In introducing her to the reporters Prince Andrew said: "Gentlemen, this is my wife."

DENIES POLITICS RULES IN OUSTING OFFICIALS

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Governor Smith declared emphatically today that he would not remove State Department heads for purely political reasons. Bureau chiefs who conduct their departments in a proper and efficient manner will stay, the Executive added, because the State wants them to stay.

The Governor's statement was intended to be removed after the disposition of the charges now pending against Walter W. Law Jr., State Tax Department President.

Conditions in the State departments are not ideal, the Governor said, much of the business being conducted in an inefficient manner, expensive to the State. But until the eighteen separate bureaus are brought together under a few heads, department chiefs cannot be blamed for faults not their own, he contended.

The three constitutional amendments advocated by the Governor in his message—the grouping of all bureaus under 18 heads; the four-year term of the chief executive, and the executive budget—provide the only solution for the betterment of State Government, Governor Smith declared.

"Until eighteen men responsible for the administration of the State's affairs can meet at the same time in the executive chamber," Governor Smith said, "we will have to get along this way. There is no good reason why the Governor should not be able to call his cabinet together as the national cabinet is called, and as any mayor calls his department heads into conference."

The governor condemned overlapping terms, declaring that men of his own party, in sympathy with his policies, could achieve better results than officials not in sympathy with him.

Senate Confirms Shientag.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—The Senate confirmed today the appointment of Bernard L. Shientag of New York, as State Labor Commissioner, and Miss Frances Perkins as a member of the State Industrial Board. It is understood Mr. Shientag will not assume office until the latter part of this month. He will succeed Henry D. Sayer, resigned.

Crime Correspondence School Found by Pittsburgh Police

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 17.—A correspondence school for training safe blowers has been brought to light here, the police say.

They arrested William T. Rheinhaffer, 28 years old, of the Wallace Building, South Highland and Centre Avenues, last night. In his home the police found a complete set of safe-blower's tools and instruction books showing how to open twenty-seven different makes of safes.

The police refused to give out the titles of the books seized. Neither would they give the names of the publishers, saying that they had communicated with the police in the city where the books were printed with a view to having legal action taken against the publishers.

IRISH ARMY DRAFTS MORE DRASTIC CODE

WOULD APPLY TO WOMEN

Labor Leader Attacks It in Dail, but Mulcahy Explains It Is Order to People to "Stand Clear."

DUBLIN, Jan. 17 (Associated Press).—The Army Council of the Irish Free State has drawn up a code of stringent regulations to punish attacks against the army and State. The code, which requires the endorsement of the Dail Eireann, prescribes the death penalty, after trial by military court, for any encouragement of murder, possession of plans prejudicial to the safety of the State or the national forces, or for having, without authority, military or police uniforms. Penal servitude would be the punishment for those assisting prisoners to escape from either military or civil custody.

Thomas Johnson, leader of the Parliamentary Labor Party, complained in the Dail today that discussion of the proposed regulations was prevented by the Ministerial prohibition of their publication. Ernest Blythe, Minister of Local Government, explained that this was because the House had not yet authorized the issuance to the press of parliamentary documents.

A noteworthy feature of the regulations is the use of the words "his or her," pointing to the belief that women are largely assisting the irregulars.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DUBLIN, Jan. 17.—The Army Council's plans for dealing with the new situation was taken up in the Dail Eireann this evening, and Labor Deputy Johnson moved for disapproval, maintaining that a case for the extension of powers granted in September was not made out. He said it may be suggested that one reason for the Army Council's request was the protection of the members of the Senate and Dail. He had received threatening letters from both sides and did not know if they were to be carried out. He hoped the members would be able to duck, and that the culprits on both sides would be shot simultaneously.

He advocated publicity for the Military Court proceedings to prevent the possibility of the death sentence being imposed on innocent men. He thought the army should not be engaged in judiciary work and argued that the death sentence was no deterrent owing to the fearlessness of men of death.

Defense Minister Mulcahy, replying, said the new order was intended to make the people definitely stand clear of the national destruction going on if they did not mean to be chargeable and punished for it. Within recent times the minority, he said, had turned to harass the people and drive them into war.

He gave instances of the irregulars throwing arms away. Every step by the irregulars, he declared, drove the Government to take further steps to conquer them, and the only alternative was to give the irregulars a free run of the country. Recent events were a warning to the Government that very serious steps must be taken. He referred to the words of the Assistant Chief of the irregulars that the people must be made to squeal for fear. He read a document containing instructions that all members of the Government and certain officials be shot at sight, and repeated that all luke-warm people must stand clear as a matter of discipline affecting the life of the country.

Push Attack on Economic Life.

A campaign against the economic life of the Free State is being pushed on with the utmost disdain for the Government, its orders, forces and penalties. The wreckers make no secret of their intention to come again and again to the same spot and to destroy communications, even threatening the railmen and the repair gangs should they continue to work.

Sunday's destruction at Streamstown on the Midland line was repaired, but the repair gang got a hint not to be too careful as the work would be undone, and it was undone last night when a locomotive was wrecked and three overturned engines are now lying across the road.

An excursion train returning from Dublin with many admirers of John McCormack, the singer, from his native town Athlone, having attended a concert at the Theatre Royal in Dublin reached Streamstown, but was sent back to Mullingar, where the passengers were forced to seek shelter for the night.

McCormack has declined invitation from the Governor General Healy at the Viceregal Lodge and also one from army authorities to visit the troops at the Portobello Barracks, on the ground of not desiring to mix in present Irish politics.

Train Wrecker Gets 12 Years.

When the Dublin Recorder had a Tipperary laborer before him today on trial concerned with a train hold-up between Nenagh and Cloughjordan in September, and with stealing goods, he sentenced him to twelve years penal servitude, remarking that he was found guilty of an offence against civilization itself. The prisoner's counsel argued on the voluntary statement of the client that he acted under orders.

Still another instance of the reckless disregard for the Government is found in daring invasion of the board room of the Cork Workhouse, where three Government inspectors there inquiring into the management of the institution by the vice guardians. Armed men entered today, held up the inspectors, solicitors and pressmen, and saying the Government would not be allowed to function and the sooner the people remembered that the better. They took away two inspectors in an automobile, warning all others not to leave within half an hour or to use the telephone.

In addition to the suffering of the people of Cork from rail destruction and conditions generally, the city's few activities received a further shock today by the wholesale dock strike, rendering the presence and arrival of many merchant ships temporarily useless.

EX-OFFICER GETS 3 YEARS.

Christian E. Gruber, formerly a lieutenant in the A. E. F., yesterday was sentenced to a maximum of three years in the Penitentiary when he pleaded guilty before Judge Collins in General Sessions to a grand larceny indictment. Gruber was employed as a bookkeeper by Bachmann, Emmerich & Co., importers, at 44 East Twenty-third Street.

He admitted that after office hours one Saturday afternoon he obtained the combination of the safe and extracted $677 in money and jewelry worth $1,800. He surrendered in Minneapolis a few days after.

Giant Sailor, Who Usurped Command at Sea, Shot by Skipper, Neglects Wound and Dies

ST. JOHN'S, N. F., Jan. 17.—The giant body of Krishan Jacob Lorensen, sailor man, who by right of might became a ship's master for a day, is a-rolling on the floor of the angry deep. The story of his passing, just a month ago, was told in detail for the first time today.

Lorensen's bunk was the most comfortable in the forecastle of the Danish schooner Centaurus. He was a good sailor and a good fighter. He took what he wanted and tolerated back talk from no man. He wasn't scared of the "Old Man," Krishan Rasmussen, neither did the size of the first mate, Erik Knudsen, bother him.

The Centaurus drove out of Spencer's Cove, Newfoundland, bound for Harbor Buffet on Dec. 15. Two days out the Captain and the first mate got into a heated argument about the schooner's position. They talked loudly. Entered Lorensen, scowling, hands on hips.

He told the skipper and the mate that neither of them knew where the vessel was. He laughed when ordered on deck. He tossed the "Old Man" and Erik clear across the cabin when they tried to put him out. He then locked them in and took charge of the schooner.

Seven times did the Captain and the mate try to get on deck. Seven times they were kicked down the companionway. Storms came. The Centaurus rolled and pitched. Lorensen, at the wheel, grinned and turned her nose to sea.

The skipper, frightened for his vessel's safety, got his gun, crawled to the cabin door and fired, intending to scare Lorensen. The bullet struck the sailor in the arm. He smiled, refusing to go below to have the wound dressed. Six hours later, while singing a song of the sea, he dropped to the deck, weak from loss of blood, and died.

Captain Rasmussen and his first mate, upon the arrival of the schooner at Harbor Buffet, were held for examination. They were discharged from custody today by order of the Justice Department, which declared it had no jurisdiction.

SMITH TRANSIT PLAN KEPT FROM LEADERS

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—With the time rapidly approaching when Governor Smith's transit program must come before the Legislature, the legislative leaders of the Governor's own party profess to have been kept in complete ignorance regarding the character and provisions of these measures.

Before Governor Smith assumed office it was stated by some of his adversaries that the transit bills were being prepared by Senator James J. Walker and Assemblyman Charles D. Donohue, the Democratic leaders in the Senate and Assembly, or, at least, under their supervision. When questioned recently both said they were not familiar with the provisions of the measures, although they are to become sponsors for the bills and will have the duty of leading the fight for them.

John H. Delaney, former Transit Construction Commissioner and at present acting Assistant Attorney under Mayor Hylan, has been in active charge of drafting the bill in which the powers now exercised by the Transit Commission, as well as all powers inherent in the old Rapid Transit act and the Public Service Commissions law in their relation to construction and operation of new and existing transit lines within the corporate limits of New York City will be transferred to the city authorities.

The prevailing opinion among lawmakers here is that Mayor Hylan practically has been dictating the matter to go into the city's transit bill. This prediction not infrequently comes coupled with expressions reflecting an opinion that under the circumstances only the sober common sense that has characterized the course of Mayor Hylan's chief assistant can save the proposed new law from becoming unworkable and the legislation itself from defeat when it comes before the Legislature.

Persons who have had an opportunity to see a first and tentative draft which already has come from the printer declare that it "goes the whole way" in giving to the city of New York home rule in transit matters. It was stated tonight that should the bill become law in its present form every surface line in New York would be practically at the mercy of Mayor Hylan, except for some constitutional questions on which the owners might be sustained by the courts.

It is understood that provisions embodied in the Public Service Commission law which gave to the Transit Commission, which supplanted it, New York City the power to scrap surface lines would be transferred to the city authorities. Mayor Hylan has gone on record as committed to a plan of substituting municipal bus lines for the surface lines.

Under the proposed new legislation the city Administration would have full power to lay out bus routes at will, and thus could parallel surface lines offering objections to the plan of the city Administration to drive them out of business through ruinous competition. The city will receive full power, unless the bill is changed, to go into the bus business, the only restrictions being a provision stipulating that the fares must not be in excess of 5 cents for any distance.

It was stated tonight that it will require several days to whip the Transit bill into shape, but that it may be ready for introduction before the end of next week. The first draft, it is understood, is being submitted to several experts, and undoubtedly many changes will be made in the original draft.

The central feature of the bill will be the grouping of all powers, including the right of municipal ownership and operation, in the hands of the city, which now, as a constitutional right, lays out all new transit routes and has final say over the cost of new transit projects, and will thus centralize responsibility and give Mayor Hylan and his administration an alibi for their plans should they fail to work out.

The new bill is said to follow the lines laid down in the Democratic State platform, which was drafted with a view to insuring the support of W. R. Hearst for the Democratic candidates. The transit plank in the platform was drafted by Mr. Delaney, who has been drafting the bill.

SMITH WANTS CONTROL OF FARM DEPARTMENT

Special to The New York Times.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 17.—Governor Smith will send to the Legislature, probably next week, a special message, urging in the strongest possible terms, that legislation be enacted restoring to the Governor the power the Chief Executives exercised over the State Department of Agriculture prior to the first term of Governor Whitman.

The Governor confessed today that he was utterly helpless to remedy evils and abuses in the administration of the Agricultural Department because of legislative encroachment upon the executive branch of the State Government. Under the present law the Governor does not even have the power to appoint the head of that important department, for the general conduct of which he is held responsible by the people.

The State Department of Agriculture under the present system is ruled by what Governor Smith tonight referred to as a "regency." This is composed of ten members, one from each of the nine judicial districts of the State and one representing the State at large. All are chosen by a majority vote, on joint ballot by the legislature. The farms and markets council, the official title of this conclave of agricultural "regents" in turn selects the executive head of the Agricultural Department.

Thus although the executive branch of the State Government was turned over to the Democrats by an overwhelming majority vote the slender Republican majority in the Legislature will control the Department of Agriculture.

PARTY FOES MOVE TO DEPOSE KOENIG

BERWIND TAKES THE LEAD

Friends of Chairman Say Adverse Resolutions Will Have Little Weight.

A demand for the resignation of Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the Republican County Committee, will come before the Executive Committee of the County Committee at a meeting this afternoon. If it is approved by the Executive Committee, the County Committee will act upon the matter at its regular meeting this evening in Bryant Hall. The attempt to depose Koenig is being made by Albert J. Berwind, Republican leader of the Seventh Assembly District. A resolution calling for the County Chairman's resignation was adopted Tuesday night at a meeting of the Seventh Assembly District County Committeemen at the district club, 2,228 Broadway. The resolution was introduced by former Assistant District Attorney Leslie S. Lockhart and was seconded by J. Van Vechten Olcott. It read:

"Resolved, That the best interests of the Republican Party in the County of New York require the resignation of Samuel S. Koenig as Chairman of the New York County Committee, and be it futher

"Resolved, That this resolution be communicated by the executive member of the Seventh Assembly District to the Executive Committee of the Republican County Committee and to the County Committee at its next meeting."

There were about 120 committeemen of the Seventh District, including Leader Berwind, at the meeting Tuesday night. There was some opposition to the resolution at first, but it was made unanimous after Brig. Gen. Louis W. Stotesbury and M. J. Ansorge, brother of Representative Martin S. Ansorge, had changed their minds and voted for it. About twenty women members were present. One of the men present was Samson Selig, member of the State Republican Committee, representing the Seventh Assembly District. Berwind and the other members of the party in the district will fight to prevent the shelving of the resolution in the Executive Committee.

Friends of Mr. Koenig said last night that they did not take the resolution seriously. Several attempts, they said, had been made to unseat him during his fourteen years as County Chairman, but they had never amounted to anything. Anti-Koenig sentiment, they said, did not exist in any other Assembly District.

ASK PUBLIC HEARING ON GAS CUT-OFF

A demand for a public hearing on the ordinance passed on Tuesday by the Board of Aldermen providing for a gas cut-off device to be attached on the outside of all buildings over five stories high was filed yesterday with Mayor Hylan. Opponents of the ordinance ask the Mayor to hold the hearing before he takes any action. The United Real Estate Owners' Association sent the following protest:

"This ordinance will not protect the lives of the firemen or the 5,000,000 tenants from gas explosions, but the automatic feature of it will endanger their lives. It will cost the realty owners $45,000,000 for installation and $1,000,000 per annum for maintenance and put millions of graft into the pockets of the grafters behind the ordinance, which is the sol object of the ordinance. Every tenant and every realty owner, taxpayer and civic organization should at once wire Mayor Hylan for a public hearing. This ordinance is the first sample of home rule for the people of New York, which really means 'graft rule.'"

It was disclosed yesterday that the Bureau of Standards and Appeals had approved a gas cut-off device in May, 1921, and again several months later after an investigation which had been made a year previously. The State Industrial Commission also approved the installation of such a device in February, 1921, and recommended that the Corporation Counsel draft an ordinance compelling its use for presentation to the Board of Aldermen. This was done, but was vetoed by the Mayor.

Two concerns whose appliances have obtained the necessary indorsement of both the Board of Underwriters and the Board of Standards and Appeals are the Fire and Gas Appliance Company of 185 Broadway and the Arthur E. MacLean Company of 271 West 125th Street.

CONTESTS ALTERMAN'S SEAT

Claessens Charges Assemblyman Won on Fraudulent Canvass.

S. John Block, attorney for August Claessens, candidate for Assembly on the Socialist and Farmer-Labor tickets at the last election, filed papers with the Assembly yesterday contesting the election of Mayer Alterman, Democrat, who on the face of the returns defeated Claessens in the Seventeenth Assembly District. The Board of County Canvassers declared Alterman elected by 109 votes.

Claessens contends that many errors were committed in the count and that the canvass was "falsely, fraudulently and incorrectly" conducted.

POLITICIANS ARE ACTIVE

Bail of $75,000 Is Offered for the Release of Cassese, Convicted Brooklyn Bootlegger.

There was a revival of talk yesterday upon his return from a brief official visit to Washington that E. C. Yellowley, Acting Federal Prohibition Director for this State, would soon be recalled to his former duties as chief of the general agents of the country, with headquarters in the capital city. Roscoe Harper, now attached to the legal division of the prohibition office, is again spoken of as successor to Mr. Yellowley.

The plan of Federal Prohibition Commissioner Haynes for the appointment of a seasoned and experienced revenue man to the office is understood to be counter to the wishes of the politicians. At one time it was announced that the politicians wished to get rid of any responsibility in the administration of the prohibition office, but it appears now that they are anxous to retain the patronage.

William H. Anderson, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New York, has sent a letter to George K. Morris, Republican State Chairman, protesting against "the crooked and outrageous ilimflam game respecting enforcement that the Republican organization of this State is in process of putting over on the public." Mr. Anderson favors the plan of Commissioner Haynes for the appointment of an experienced revenue man rather than for political reasons.

Appleby Can See No Smugglers.

Despite reports of a large and well stocked rum fleet lying just outside the three-mile limit off this port, John D. Appleby, zone chief in charge of the fight against liquor smugglers in this State and New Jersey, said last night he had received a report from men sent to Highlands that there are no rum-runners in that vicinity at this time. He added that he had received no further information concerning the eight or ten heavily laden rum-runners reported the day before as proceeding up the coast from the Bahamas. "But we will be ready for them when they arrive," Chief Appleby said.

Federal Prohibition Agent J. S. Adams of Ocean City, accompanied by State Policemen Larson and Gesch yesterday went to Cape May, N. J., and visited all of the saloons and other places where it was suspected liquors were being sold. Nothing intoxicating was found in any of the places.

Agents Charles Guttman, Harry Drescher and Peter Reager yesterday seized a truck load of fifteen half-barrels of beer at the northwest corner of Forty-fifth Street and Ninth Avenue. Horace Lee, chauffeur, of 689 Park Avenue, West New York, N. J.; Louis Schenck, his helper, of 140 West 101st Street, and Joseph Bowers of 400 West Forty-fourth Street, who is alleged to have interfered with the agents at the time of the seizure, were arrested.

$75,000 Bail Offered for Cassese.

Antonio Cassese, convicted bootlegger and rum-runner, was brought from the Raymond Street Jail before United States Judge Edwin L. Garvin in the United States District Court, Brooklyn, yesterday afternoon on a writ of habeas corpus for the purpose of obtaining his release on $75,000 bail. Cassese has been in the Brooklyn jail since his conviction for violating the Volstead act last November, pending a decision on his appeal to the United States Circuit Court of Appeals. Security amounting to $75,000 was offered yesterday as bail, but Assistant District Attorney Alexander G. Blue asked for time to examine the security offered, which consisted of real estate in Manhattan. Judge Garvin adjourned the hearing until Jan. 24.

Permits held by retail druggists for handling wine, whisky and alcohol were revoked at prohibition headquarters yesterday as follows: Jacob Goldberg of 4,322 Fifteenth Avenue, Brooklyn; Joseph Polanskt of 633 Howard Avenue, Brooklyn; Isidor Sowan of 1,979 University Avenue, the Bronx, and Jacob Breitbart, a manufacturer, of 179 Rivington Street.

Two intoxicated men kept Field Supervisor John A. Murphy at headquarters rather late last night. They claimed to be brothers-in-law of a physician and had empty liquor prescription blank books which they wanted to turn in for new ones. Mr. Murphy refused the request, but promised a thorough investigation as to how the men came in possession of the book stubs.

To Protect Prescription Whisky.

Collector Frank K. Bowers of the Second District of New York of the Internal Revenue Bureau announced yesterday that hereafter all bulk whisky, gin and alcohol "will be bottled in bond and guaranteed by the Government as to proof and quality." Mr. Bowers said that so many persons have been poisoned by liquor obtained at drug stores on a doctor's prescription that Commissioner of Internal Revenue Blair decided it was time to take steps for their safety.

Mrs. Mary Verde, 40 years old, of 1,671 Bergen Street, Brooklyn, was held in the Atlantic Avenue Police Station to await a hearing this morning on a charge of violating the Mullan-Gage law. A search made by the police for her husband, Louis Verde, who is wanted on the additional charge of stabbing Patrolman James Scotton of Inspector Thomas Walsh's staff. The policemas is said to have found three-fourths of a bottle of wine late yesterday afternoon in a grocery store conducted by the Verdes. The woman was arrested. About that time her husband entered the store. He resented the arrest of his wife and the search of the premises without a search warrant. It is alleged that he stabbed the officer in the side with a small knife. He made his escape.

Federal prohibition agents seriously interfered last night with wedding festivities in the Hotel Hermitage in Union Hill, N. J. The wedding party had brought wine, they admitted, and were proceeding to make merry when the agents appeared, removed the wine and severely admonished the participants, but made no arrests. The proprietor of the place refused to make known the identity of the wedding party.

Directly across the street from Police Headquarters, on Lewis Street, Union Hill, the agents raided another place, seizing a quantity of liquor and wine. In all, the agents made eight raids in North Bergen and Union Hill, but in none of these places were arrests made.

Robbers in Rockefeller's Church.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y., Jan. 17.—The police today discovered that during the night burglars had jimmied their way into the First Baptist Church, which John D. Rockefeller attends. The Rev. Ralph G. Hardley, pastor, reported that nothing of value had been taken.

Truck Driver Who Hit 70-Mile Express Duplicates the Feat

CAPE MAY, N. J., Jan. 17.—A week ago today the driver of a motor truck ran into the Reading night express when it was traveling at seventy miles an hour. When the train crew went back to look over the damage they found the truck driver sitting on the wreckage smoking a cigarette.

At the same crossing this morning the same truckman drove another truck into the Reading morning express, also going seventy miles an hour. Engineer Louis McLean applied his emergency brakes, but could not stop in time. The train crew went back and found the truck driver, uninjured, unloading lead from the remains of the truck to a wagon.

BUSINESS TO FACE OLD MORGAN HOME

REVERSES EARLIER RULINGS

The legal controversy between the Astors and the Morgans over the future character of the west side of Madison Avenue, between Thirty-fifth and Thirty-sixth Streets, has been settled by a decision of the Court of Appeals, which permits the use of the property for business purposes.

The property in question is diagonally opposite the J. P. Morgan residences on the east side of the avenue between Thirty-sixth and Thirty-seventh Streets. Heretofore Madison Avenue from Thirty-fifth to Thirty-eighth Street has been restricted to residential purposes, but the Board of Standards and Appeals of New York City granted the William Waldorf Astor estate, which owns the block on the west side of Madison Avenue from Thirty-fifth to Thirty-sixth Street, the right to erect a business structure on Madison Avenue, provided only one ornamental entrance be faced on the avenue. The Morgan estate maintained that the city had no right to alter the zoning restrictions and won its contention in the Supreme Court and the Appellate Division. The Court of Appeals, by unanimous decision, reverses the lower courts and permits the erection of a structure that may be used for business purposes.

The controversy between the two estates over the future character of the property, which is now improved with private dwellings, started soon after the passage of the city ordinance dividing the block into two parts of eight and ten lots. The ten lots might be used for business and the eight had to be kept residential.

The late Viscount William Waldorf Astor wanted the whole block opened up to business development, since it had ceased to be profitable to him otherwise. J. P. Morgan, whose residence is diagonally opposite the Astor property on which Viscount Astor planned to erect a seven-story business building, opposed the change and began a long fight to keep it a residential district exclusively.

Last Monday the National Democratic Club purchased the residence of the late Captain Joseph R. De Lamar on the northeast corner of Thirty-seventh Street, opposite the J. P. Morgan residence, for about $300,000. The club will take possession of the property on Feb. 1.

MRS. SLADE CHOSEN WOMEN VOTERS' HEAD

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Mrs. F. Louis Slade of New York was elected State Chairman of the League of Women Voters this afternoon at the closing session of the annual meeting. She succeeds Mrs. Frank A. Vanderlip of New York, who withdrew as a candidate for re-election in the interest of harmony.

Other officers elected include: First Vice Chairman, Mrs. Casper Whitney of Westchester; Second Vice Chairman, Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt of Hyde Park; Third Vice Chairman, Mrs. Willard D. Straight of New York; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Frank B. Keech of New York; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Edgerton Parsons of New York; Treasurer, Mrs. Thomas B. Wells of New York.

"I would rather see harmony in the organization than be re-elected Chairman," said Mrs. Vanderlip, in announcing her withdrawal as a candidate for re-election.

Miss Mary Garrett Hay of New York, who was opposed to the re-election of Mrs. Vanderlip, asserted that many members of the league were dissatisfied with the latter's administration and that if the league was to continue to progress Mrs. Vanderlip would have to step aside.

After a long and somewhat heated discussion it was finally decided to change the league's constitution from a centralized to a decentralized form of government. Mrs. Vanderlip was opposed to this change. She declared it "retrogressive and undemocratic."

Under the new form of government there will be regional directors, who will serve as a sort of connecting link between the officers and the members in the various localities throughout the State. These regional directors are: Mary Garret Hay, New York; Mrs. R. J. Caldwell, New York; Mrs. Joseph A. Gavit, Albany; Mrs. Robert D. Ford, Canton; Mrs. Frank Wade, Syracuse; Mrs. F. E. Bates, Rochester; Mrs. Melvin Porter, Buffalo; Mrs. Gordon Norris, Dutchess County; Mrs. Willis G. Mitchell, Washington County.

CALLS FOR MORE JUDGES.

ALBANY, Jan. 17.—Six additional Supreme Court Justices in the First Judicial District, comprising the Counties of New York and the Bronx, would be elected next Fall if a bill introduced today by Senator Cotillo is passed and approved.

A resolution offered by Assemblyman Ullman to provide for a speedy investigation by a legislative committee into the crowded conditions of the New York City municipal courts will come up for debate next Monday night.

Under a bill introduced by Assemblyman Steinberg three days would have to elapse between the application for a marriage certificate and the issuance of the license. Last year Mr. Steinberg sponsored a bill providing that three days must elapse between the issuance of the marriage license and the ceremony. It was killed in committee.

A bill introduced by Assemblyman Mandelbaum would amend the New York City charter so as to permit the Mayor to appoint two inspectors in each Assembly district, without pay, to inspect the preparation of kosher meat.

Under a measure sponsored by Assemblyman Fasullo of Kings every loaf of bread would have to be labeled as to its exact weight.

Senator Rabenold of New York introduced a bill making it a misdemeanor to conduct a bootblacking business after 1 o'clock on Sunday, except in hotels and first-class cities.

A measure introduced by Senator Knight would amend the State election law so that a candidate nominated for a State or judicial office at a party convention could decline a nomination made at a primary election.

OIL MEN SAIL SOON FOR SOVIET FIELDS

VICTORY OVER THE BRITISH

AGENTS FOR THE SOVIET

The sailing of a party of engineers and officials of the Barnsdall Corporation, one of the largest oil producing companies in the country, for Baku on Jan. 27 will mark the first step in the opening by American operators of this rich oil field, which has been the bone of contention among American, British and Italian interests. They will work under a concession approved by the Soviet Government at Moscow, and with the approval of the State Department at Washington.

The beginning of operations in this field is regarded as a decisive victory for American oil interests, for it carries with it a priority right in the Caucasus, where British oil interests in particular have been striving for a foothold. It is believed by those conversant with what has been going on in the Caucasus and Moscow that the investment of American capital will e

STRAW HAT MUST BE STRAW, SAY HATTERS

GUARANTEED 100% PURE

Question Arose Over Shipment for Farmers Which Was Blend of Chips and Shavings.

An official answer to this question was sought by the Customs Division of the Treasury Department at the convention of the National Association of Straw Hat Manufacturers held at the Hotel Astor yesterday. A committee headed by A. G. Keeshan of the Bonar-Phelps Company was appointed to draw up an answer, and after due deliberation issued the following definition:

"The sensible answer is the hat that women wear in Winter and men wear in Summer. But this is not enough for the Customs Division of the Treasury Department at Washington, which asks the question. It seems the reason for seeking information is the fact that a shipment of harvest hats such as farmers wear has been held up lately pending the decision of the appraisers, who have discovered that although they have been imported in the past under the classification of straw hats, they actually are not made of straw but of chips and shavings.

"This has opened the whole question as to what a straw hat is a straw hat and why. The Government has learned, however, that the straw hat which 50,000,000 men put on their heads on May 15 is really and truly made of straw—wheat straw, especially grown for the purpose by curious and ancient methods in Japan, China, Switzerland and Italy. American straw will not do and American workmen could not make the braid even if they had the straw.

"The material is used because it has been discovered after exhaustive tests that straw which is woven, bleached, pressed and shellacked combines in the greatest degree the quality of lightness with the ability to deflect the rays of the sun. Thus the heads of men are cool and the same time sufficiently protected from the burning rays of the sun and artistically decorated with a hat that makes them look young and handsome.

"Yes—your solid mahogany table may be pine, with a paper-thin mahogany veneer; your wife's sealskin furs may be dyed rabbit and your Scotch may be embalming fluid mixed with turpentine. But at least your straw hat has been ascertained to be 100 per cent. straw. A ban the bootlegger! Vive the hatter!"

Hill Muslins to Be Advanced.

Announcement was made yesterday by Catlin & Co. that, on Monday next, prices for Hill muslins in the 4-4 (36-inch), 40-inch, 43-inch and 45-inch widths would be advanced half a cent a yard for deliveries in January, February and March. The present prices on the goods are based on 17 cents, net, for the 4-4 cloth. The announcement was also made that the complete line of table felts made by the Tremont and Suffolk Mills and sold through Catlin & Co. has been sold up and withdrawn. These goods were priced last Friday.

To Hold Merchandise Fair.

Definite decision has been reached to hold the next Merchandise Fair in this city. A resolution approving the fair was passed by the Executive Committee of the Merchants' Association of New York on Tuesday. The event will continue from July 28 to Aug. 3, with the Grand Central Palace probably again selected as the scene. Lee Hahn, secretary of the National Retail Dry Goods Association, under whose auspices the fair will be held, issued no statement yesterday beyond confirming the dates mentioned. He said, however, that one would probably be issued today.

New Combination Veil.

Basing its hopes on increased popularity for draped veils, a local firm is now placing a new type on the market which it expects will prove a good seller. This is a combination of a square veil with a fancy mesh inserted to fit closely over the face, while having the draped effects at the back of the hat. It is available in a range of colors, with black, brown, navy and taupe being featured by the concern. Colored embroideries have been utilized as decorations for some of the veils. They wholesale from $18 per dozen up. The same firm thinks the Shetland veil is "coming back" strong in both square and long draped effects.

Selling Radio Goods.

The view was expressed yesterday by a wholesaler of radio apparatus that only the larger stores in the more important cities get any substantial volume of consumer business in this merchandise. This, he declared, was due to the fact that only the big stores did "broadcasting," and also because they were in a much better position to give repair and other services than the smaller retailers. The general holiday lull for a short time only and that line will be withdrawn and higher levels named. This would, it is pointed out, be in line with reports that the leading factor, in order to keep the machinery moving, will price its lines closely. But later advances, it is said, will not affect or benefit that company to as large an extent as independent concerns. This is so because the former will unlouddtedly try to book a heavy opening business, and normally does. But with some of the independents it may be different. How they feel about it was shown at the recent meeting of wool goods manufacturers in which this is to go in effect, for a popular pajama model for women is made with a collar that closely resembles the vivid article now in such high vogue for street wear. A two-piece pajama costume that has been put out by another manufacturer bears a striking resemblance to a sport shirt, except that it is trimmed with a ribbon fluting of a contrasting color. The newest thing in the treatment of nightgowns shows a use of slits with trimmed edges. These appear in the skirt of the gown, as well as in the shoulders, to which are attached various novelties in the way of sleeves.

Changes in Whittall Associates.

Several important changes in the organization of the M. J. Whittall Associates, manufacturers of carpets and rugs, Worcester, Mass., with New York offices and salesroom at 295 Fifth Avenue, were announced yesterday by A. W. Cole, agent. The Edgeworth and Desham Mills, which were formerly separate corporations, have now been merged with and become a part of the Whittall business. This section of the business, according to Mr. Cole, will still be managed by Alfred Thomas. Matthew P. Whittall is new President and Treasurer of the business and also general manager. Arthur Whittall, who for several years has been a Trustee, has become Assistant Treasurer. Ernest H. Vaughan of Worcester, who was personal attorney for Matthew J. Whittall, founder of the business, at the time of his death, has been made a Trustee to fill the vacancy left by the deceased.

Gray Goods Sales Fair.

A fair amount of business was put through in gray goods here yesterday, with the demand more spread than has been the case for the past several days. Good-sized sales of low-count tobacco cloths were reported. Further business was done in printcloths on the basis of 11¾ cents for 39-inch 68-72s and 10¾ cents for 38½-inch 64-60s. February deliveries of Southern 38½-inch 60-43s were sold at 9¼ cents, while Eastern spools of the same construction brought an eighth more. One of the few features of the day's sheeting business was the sale of some 40-inch 3.75-yard cloths at 12⅜ cents for spot and 12¼ cents for contract deliveries starting in about sixty days. Supplies of these goods for quick shipment are reported extremely low. One sateens some buying of 39-inch 4.20s took place at 13¾ cents, but buyers did not seem to be willing to pay 13¼ cents for 37½-inch 4.37-yard sateens.

Price Advances After Openings.

While the question of actual prices to be named at the openings of the heavy-weight lines to begin next Monday is still open to all guessers, there is one conclusion that may be drawn. This is that opening prices will probably prevail for a short time only and that lines will be withdrawn and higher levels named. This would, it is pointed out, be in line with reports that the leading factor, in order to keep the machinery moving, will price its lines closely. But later advances, it is said, will not affect or benefit that company to as large an extent as independent concerns. This is so because the former will unlouddtedly try to book a heavy opening business, and normally does. But with some of the independents it may be different. How they feel about it was shown at the recent meeting of wool goods manufacturers in which marked disapproval was expressed of accepting duplicate business later in the season at opening prices.

Sees Downward Trend in Furs.

About the only exception to the rule of lower prices for furs, which the entire trade welcomes so gladly, according to the market letter issued by Harry Rosenberg & Co. of this city is one in the case of wolves of the cheaper varieties. Whether the few foreign buyers who were so anxious for the article that they outbid each other and paid exorbitant prices for it, "goes wisely," the letter continues, "only time will tell." The question of separations has put a check on trading in the German fur market, the letter also says, and continues in part: "A rather large contingent of New York buyers and agents has taken the trip to the Far East. It is to be regretted that they seem to be trying to show their employers not how cheaply they can buy, but how much money they can spend in purchasing kolinskies, squirrels, lambskins, crosses and caracula. We believe that the careful merchant who only looks and listens will be the wiser in the end."

Retailers Discuss Troubles.

Foremost among the matters discussed at the meeting yesterday of the Retail Clothiers and Furnishers' Association of New York at the Hotel McAlpin were those dealing with wholesalers selling clothing at retail and the excessively high rents which retailers now have to pay. Several of the members, in discussing the former question, said that, despite all of the efforts which have been put forth to stop the practice, this evil was stronger today than ever. This was due, they declared, to the negligence of the retailers themselves in that, although they knew these manufacturers were guilty of such unethical procedure, continued to place orders with them. The case was cited of one manufacturer who, having 141 local retail accounts, still sells about $400,000 worth of merchandise direct to the consumer annually. Unless rents come down, many retailers will have to go out of business was the main thought of speakers on this matter. Some schemes were suggested to help change the situation, notably one of appointing a committee later to visit the Governor.

SHOEMAKERS ORDER A CODE OF ETHICS

National Association Determined to Prosecute Criminally Fraudulent Merchants.

The nineteenth annual convention of the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association of the United States, Inc., ended with a dinner at the Hotel Astor last night, after the re-election of officers in the afternoon. Frank R. Briggs of Boston continues as President and J. Dudley Smith of this city was re-elected Secretary.

The convention adopted a resolution empowering the Conference Committee to consider the "advisability of adopting a slogan for the entire industry, 'Walk and Be Healthy,' which is dedicated to the trade by the Tolman-Davidson Company of Boston."

It was decided to draw up a code of ethics for the boot and shoe industry, and the Chairman of the Trades Relations Committee was directed to select a sub-committee to draft the code.

The convention endorsed the "purposes and work of the Retail Shoemen's Institute in educating retail salesmen, and authorized the President to appoint a special committee of this association to co-operate in extending this work."

"There are certain people who engage in merchandising schemes for the sole purpose of defrauding those from whom they purchase goods, disposing of same by devious unethical ways to the great loss of the creditor and injury to legitimate business. Therefore, be it

"Resolved, That where such cases come under a criminal violation in which our product is involved, the National Boot and Shoe Manufacturers' Association of the United States, Inc., render, as far as possible, its aid with other affiliated trade associations in the prosecution of such acts and to give broadcast publication to such criminal prosecution."

The National Shoe Retailers' and Wholesalers' Associations and the Tanners' Council have gone on record by a majority vote to submit all controversies that cannot be mutually adjusted between the contending parties, to the Council of Arbitration, which has been set up. The following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved, That when in controversy, when one suggests arbitration and the other one refuses without justifiable reasons, the name of the firm, company or individual so refusing, be listed in our bulletin as refusing to arbitrate."

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 17.—An old crony bet James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor, yesterday that he could not snatch a 200-pound ball of white-hot metal from the furnace on the end of a pair of 12-foot suspended tongs as he did twenty years ago.

"Jim" took the bet and the party went down to "Brown's Old Puddling Mill" in Tenth Street, where they gave him a 12-foot bar, a pair of big tongs, and told him "go ahead." The Secretary thrust the bar into the 200-pound white-hot ball of iron, turned it around, took hold of it with the big tongs and guided the fiery mass to its proper course on its journey to the big trip-hammer. He repeated the "old trick" several times.

Then "Jim" was introduced to the workmen standing about as James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor of the United States," the puddler who came back."

The pressure on the markets in connection with the Franco-German situation was less in evidence on the Stock Exchange yesterday than the day before, but more in evidence in foreign exchange. Speculative selling of stocks occasioned early declines, but at the lower prices buying orders turned the market and the closing, although irregular, was generally above the final prices of Tuesday. In the foreign exchange market, however, the declines were substantial and the recovery slight. The German mark again led the decline; it fell to forty-eight ten-thousandths of a cent, as against 63 at Tuesday's closing and 93 at the close of last week. This, it will be observed, represents a depreciation of nearly 50 per cent. within three business days in the internationally quoted value of the German currency.

Declines in rates on other European markets were far less sweeping, but francs fell nearly ¼ cent to the lowest rate of last week though not the lowest of the season, Italian lire touched the lowest since last November, and even sterling declined nearly 2 cents. In these exchanges the day's downward movement probably embodied both hesitancy of ordinary commercial buyers to place orders at the market and resumption of active speculation for th decline. In the case of the mark the dominant influences were the same as have prevailed on every day this week; it is undoubtedly a "currency panic" at Berlin, with immediate consequences on the German stock markets and in the field of German commodity prices of which Wall Street was not informed yesterday, but which must have been of somewhat portentous character.

As to the situation in the Ruhr itself, not much clue was given in yesterday's dispatches. Some impression was made on the Stock Exchange by the fact that none of the particularly gruesome "rumors" of the day before materialized, that a late announcement from the French military command appeared to discountenance the idea of an extensive further penetration of Germany, and that the German Government's attitude continued to be only that of sullen and angry obstruction. Whether and when that particular deadlock will be terminated by concrete proposals from one side or the other remained a matter of pure conjecture at the close of the markets yesterday.

On the Stock Exchange the selling showed signs at noon of having for the time spent its force and the recovery, at first irregular and uncertain, became rather vigorous at the last. The day's transactions were 25 per cent. less in amount than Tuesday's and barely one-half of Monday's; they were in fact not much larger than those of the first half of last week, when the lightness of trading caused comment. The day's final prices showed both net advances and net declines, but the advances largely predominated in the stocks which were dealt in during the later hours. In the bond market there was considerable unsettlement.

Railway shares again failed to share in the early weakness; they changed little for the day. The car-loading statement, published yesterday and covering the first week of January, showed a considerable decrease from the full weeks of early December, but its figures have been exceeded in the first week of a new year only by the early January achievement of 1920. Loadings of general merchandise, which are still the best measure of the business situation, exceeded by 78,041 cars, or 22 per cent., the corresponding week in 1922. They ran beyond 1921 by 50,633, or nearly 21 per cent.

GERMAN MARK FALLS TO 21,000 FOR DOLLAR

Foreign Exchange Dealers Now Regard It as a Joke, Long Past Recovery.

There was almost total demoralization of the German mark in the New York market yesterday, following further declines in London and the continued penetration of the Ruhr Valley by the French. In this market the mark sold down to .0043, or approximately 21,000 to the dollar, as compared with .0063 at the close of the previous day. Most of the international bankers and foreign exchange dealers now decline to accept any business at all in the German exchange. Many of them regard it as a "joke exchange," with the point long since passed where there is any possibility of other than speculative recovery.

In this connection an active demand for the scarce paper mark has developed in New York, although it cannot be purchased at the going exchange prices. In some instances bids have been reported at approximately double the current market quotations for German currency.

The demoralization of the mark has had an effect, too, on the already weakened exchanges of Poland and Czechoslovakia. Both of them were extremely weak and, like the mark, in a state of extreme nervousness all day. Most of the other exchanges were weak and irregular, but their declines were established in a more orderly fashion.

Guaranty Trust Re-elects Directors.

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Guaranty Trust Company of New York, held yesterday, the following Directors were re-elected to serve for three years: A. C. Bedford, Edward J. Berwind, Marshall Field, Eugene G. Grace, Albert H. Harris, Frederic A. Juilliard, Thomas W. Lamont, William C. Lane, Charles A. Peabody and Edward R. Stettinius. At the annual meeting of the Board of Directors, held immediately following that of the Directors, the officers of the company were re-elected for the ensuing year.

BROOKLYN EDISON CO. OFFERS STOCK AT PAR

New Issue of $15,000,000, to Be Sold to Holders, Will Pay for Improvements.

The Brooklyn Company, Inc., announced yesterday an offering of $15,000,000 of its capital stock to be sold to its stockholders at par. The proceeds of the issue will be used to reimburse the company for expenditures made for additions to its plans and facilities, and for further construction now in progress calling for an expenditure of $15,000,000. Blair & Co., Inc., head a syndicate which has underwritten the entire offering of stock.

The proposed issue of stock will increase the total outstanding stock to approximately $43,400,000 out of a total authorized issue of $50,000,000. The Brooklyn Edison Company does all the electric light and power business in the territory which Greater New York is expected soon to embrace, according to the company's announcement. Dividends have been paid continuously on its capital stock since 1909, and since 1918 up to the present time the rate has been 8 per cent.

PLAN MERGER OF 5 STORES.

Negotiations Reported in Progress Here for $20,000,000 Combine.

Negotiations are in progress for a merger of five department stores now members of the Affiliated Retail Stores, according to a report in the financial district yesterday. The Affiliated Retail Stores was formed in 1919 for pooling purchases and exchanging information.

The new combination, it was stated, would have a capital of approximately $20,000,000. The following firms are said to be included: Bailey & Co. of Cleveland, Rosenbaum Company of Pittsburgh, B. Nugent & Co. of St. Louis, and George E. Stifel Company and George H. Taylor Company, both of Wheeling, W. Va.

Movement of prices on the Stock Exchange yesterday was decidedly irregular during the greater part of the day, with alternate depiines and recoveries, but a sharp rally set in during the closing hour which caused many shares to end the day with substantial gains. These gains were offset by declines elsewhere in the list, so that the averages showed little change from the closing of the previous day. The news from abroad continued to be closely watched by the rank and file in the Wall Street district, but the only effect produced on the market by dispatches received during trading hours arose from their evidence that the news received on Tuesday had been greatly exaggerated. This caused a somewhat more confident feeling. Those issues which scored fair gains included American Car and Foundry, Cosden Products, California Petroleum, Beech-Nut Packing, R. H. Macy, National Lead and Cast Iron Pipe. In the general run of stocks gains were confined to fractions.

Awaiting News.

There were some quiet whisperings in banking parlors yesterday afternoon about some of the gossip which had filtered in by way of the cables from London, Paris and Berlin. There was no definite information into which a pin could actually be stuck, but most of the private cables during the afternoon were cheerful in tone and hinted at some possible "constructive" developements in the international situation which might be expected to come about before the end of the week. One banker, whose sources of information on the other side are usually good, was willing to wager that preliminary agreement on the deliveries of coal and wood will be reached by the Germans and French before the end of another week.

January Security Issues.

It is probably not too much to say that just about all the new bond issues have been issued and sold during the month of January that the market has been able to take. This new financing in par value exceeds that of any other year on record, and includes deals of such tremendous size as financing the Anaconda-Chile Copper Company merger and the financial reorganization of Armour & Co. The total for the first three weeks of the month will aggregate well over half a billion dollars, and already it is said about the Street that all of the bonds have been issued which can be digested this month. Bankers in a position to be familiar with the industrial situation remarked yesterday on a rather peculiar development in the market, to the effect that the primary and secondary dealers are well sold up in their commitments, whereas their customers, who get the bonds at retail, have taken on just about all that they can handle.

The British Debt.

The fact that the British Debt Commission has suspended conferences with Treasury Department officials had no effect whatever yesterday on British securities quoted in this market. It was a well-known fact in the financial district that the British representatives probably would be obliged to return home for further instructions. Bankers here have been given to understand by their Washington friends that no insurmountable obstacles have arisen at the Washington conference and that the relations of the two committees and the attitude of these committees toward the proposals which have been made are entirely amicable. There are understood to be but two points of difference—one the rate of interest to be paid on the unliquidated British debt; the other the amount of the obligations to be retired each year.

Prices of finished cotton goods have advanced during recent months as a result of the rapid rise in the price of raw cotton, but the foreign news has begun to affect the local market for finished products, according to reports in the trade yesterday. Advices were received from abroad declaring that most of the German cotton mills, especially in the Chemnitz district, are preparing to curtail operations because of fears of a coal shortage as a result of the French occupation of the Ruhr. This, according to opinion, is expected to make for a shortage of finished products in Europe and increase the demand from this country.

Most Wall Street men have begun to complain this week of the increasing difficulty of quoting German marks intelligibly. When the mark was quoted in the exchange market at half a cent last February or even at one-tenth of a cent last August the meaning was clear. The quotation became clumsier after the price got down to 5 one-hundredths of a cent in the autumn, but when it broke below 1 one-hundredth a week ago, the division of values became complicated. Yesterday's low quotation might have been called either four and eight-tenths one-thousandths of a cent or 48 ten-thousandths. It is bewildering even to the eye, when stated in the ".0053" of the foreign exchange table. The London market manages things better by always quoting the number of marks to the pound sterling. Thus the latest comparative table received with rates quoted at a London exchange house states mark values thus: Today, 40,000 marks to the pound, year ago, 703; parity, 20.43." On a similar basis of reckoning yesterday's low rate in New York would have been stated as 24,833 marks to the dollar, compared with 158 a year ago and with par of 4.20. It is interesting to recall that before and during the war a similar plan was pursued in the New York market, but with the curious difference that the quoted rate was the value not of one mark but of four. Thus on the day the war broke out mark exchange was quoted on Wall Street at 90, meaning 24 cents per mark. When we went to war in 1917, the quotation was 60¾, or a little over 17 cents per mark. When trading in marks began again on July 15, 1919, the present plan was adopted and the mark sold for 3 cents.

Pennsylvania Railroad.

Interests close to the management of the Pennsylvania Railroad have figured that the company will show earnings for 1922 slightly in excess of 6 per cent. earned on capital stock, a computation which was made exclusive of the special dividend of 20 per cent. declared by the Pennsylvania Company last month, amounting to $16,000,000. The leases of the Pennsylvania Company are held by the railroad, and the special disbursement was considered a further step in the liquidation of the company.

Steel Operations Again Increase.

Reports from the steel trade received yesterday continued to be of an encouraging nature, and judging from semi-official information obtained in the trade the largest factor in the industry is that the largest independents are operating their plants as near capacity as transportation conditions permit the delivery of coal and raw materials. This news of increased production was also accompanied by higher prices in some products. The advance in prices during December alone were figured to approximate about $3 a ton. The Iron Age reports many mills as working at 85 per cent. of capacity, the highest of the season, and some plants of the United States Steel Corporation are said to be operating at nearly 95¼ per cent., the highest percentage reported since the reaction in the industry started in the Autumn of 1920. An official of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation said that orders have been given to all mills to operate as near capacity as possible.

ANACONDA COPPER OFFERS DEBENTURES

TO DOUBLE CAPITAL STOCK

Other Bond Offerings Include $3,000,000 Central Power and $2,500,000 American Glue.

After the sale of $100,000,000 6 per cent. long-term gold bonds for the Anaconda Copper Mining Company, the National City company and the Guaranty company of New York and their associates announced yesterday that $50,000,000 fifteen-year 7 per cent. convertible Anaconda debentures would be offered today at par. They are dated Feb. 1, 1923, and mature Feb. 1, 1938, and are redeemable in whole or part at the option of the company at 110. Part of the proceeds of the two issues is for payment of 2,200,000 shares of Chile Copper acquired from the Guggenheims.

The debentures are convertible into Anaconda common stock on an ascending scale. The first $10,000,000 to be presented for conversion will be exchanged at $53 per share; the next $10,000,000 at $56; the next $10,000,000 at $59; the next $10,000,000 at $62, and the last $10,000,000 at $65 a share. Anaconda is now selling at $48, and the new debentures are in effect a call on the stock.

Through the present financing, including the issuance of these $50,000,000 debentures and $100,000,000 of first consolidated mortgage bonds, the Anaconda will acquire more than 50 per cent. of the outstanding capital stock of the Chile Copper Company, will redeem the entire issue of its $23,080,100 Series B 7 per cent. ten-year secured gold bonds and will reimburse its treasury in part for the acquisition of the capital stock of the American Brass Company. The remaining proceeds will increase Anaconda's working capital.

Anaconda to Have 6,000,000 Shares.

Anaconda stockholders will be asked at the special meeting called for Feb. 26, to approve the acquisition of a controlling interest in the Chile Copper Company, and to authorize the doubling of the company's capital stock from $150,000,000 to $300,000,000, or from 3,000,000 shares of $50 par value each to 6,000,000 shares. The increase is necessary chiefly to provide additional stock for the conversion of the debenture bonds. No stock will be offered for sale.

Howe, Snow & Bertles, Inc., Moore & Cabot of Boston, E. E. Wilsey of Chicago, Gillot Company of Baltimore, Stephens & Co. of San Francisco and Bradford, Kimball & Co. of San Francisco are offering a new issue of $3,000,000 Central Power and Light Company first lien and refunding 6½ per cent. gold bonds, 1962 series, at 91 and interest, to yield about 6.75 per cent. The corporation operates thirty-two central electric power stations, as well as gas, water, ice and street railway enterprises in sixty-three cities in Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma.

Estabrook & Co. are offering a new issue of $2,500,000 American Glue Company 5½ per cent. notes, due serially from Jan. 1, 1924, to 1938, inclusive, at prices to yield from 5 per cent. to 5.85 per cent.

Weakness in francs and in many of the other mid-Continentals, with practically complete demoralization in marks, which sold at .0048, or more than 20,000 to the dollar, featured the foreign exchange market yesterday. Trading was on a smaller scale than on the previous day, but buyers were in a hesitant mood and very little support was furnished for the market as a whole. In comparison with the previous day, when the franc had closed at 6.83 cents, it sold down to 6.63 yesterday, while the Belgian franc dipped to 6.06⅛, as compared with 6.23⅛ on the previous day. Lira was unsettled, but inactive.

Sterling exhibited the effects of liquidation, but it was accomplished in such an orderly fashion that not a great deal of attention was paid to it, because of the general understanding that it was profit taking on gains which already had been established, rather than nervousness over the news from the Continent. There were some extremely sharp declines yesterday in Polish exchange, as well as that of Jugoslavia. The market, with the exception of that for sterling, was extremely erratic and narrow.

In the subjoined table the quotation on sterling represents dollars and decimals of a dollar; all others represent cents and decimals of a cent. Quotations preceded by the decimal mark indicate a price measured in fractions of a cent.

Cumulative Strengthening of Investments

Investment Bonds, issued under indentures providing strong sinking funds, are, in many cases, desirable for several reasons. Where provision is made to retire periodically and regularly a certain portion of an issue, it is obvious that the decreasing amount of bonds, which remain outstanding, accumulate strength through retention of the same security which was originally behind the total issue.

Let us send you a selected list of Sinking Fund Bonds yielding from 5% to 7½%.

CRUDE OIL ADVANCED TEN CENTS A BARREL

GASOLINE LIKELY TO GO UP

The Prairie Oil and Gas Company, the largest company operating in the Middle West, yesterday announced another advance of 10 cents a barrel in the prices of mid-continent crude oil. This is the second advance of 10 cents a barrel announced within the last five days. The increase was immediately met by the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company, which is jointly controlled by the Sinclair Consolidated Corporation and the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, and by the Texas Company.

Under the new schedule of prices the crude oil of various degrees of gravity is quoted as follows:

Name.	New Price.	Prev. Jan. 15.	Price.
Below 28 degrees	$1.10	$1.00	$0.80
28 to 28.9 degrees	1.20	1.10	1.00
29 to 29.9 degrees	1.30	1.20	1.10
30 to 34.9 degrees	1.40	1.30	1.20
35 to 36.9 degrees	1.60	1.50	1.40

This further advance in the price of mid-continent crude, the second within a short space of time, attracted much attention in local financial circles, but it was pointed out in the oil trade that this advance is small in comparison with price fluctuations announced prior to the recent grading of crude according to gravity. Previous to the grading of the oil, advances and declines of as much as 25 cents a barrel were common. According to one official, it was said that, small as the advance may seem, it illustrates the competition on the part of the leading factors in the industry to obtain as much high-grade oil of high gasoline content as can be stored, to prepare for the heavy demand for gasoline expected with the open weather of Spring. In connection with the advance in crude prices, it was predicted that higher prices for gasoline will also be witnessed within the near future. Lubricating and other products have already advanced fractionally.

Reports received in Wall Street from Casper yesterday declared that the Midwest Refining Company, which is controlled by the Standard of Indiana, will probably advance gasoline prices on Feb. 1. It was stated that gasoline consumption has been unusually heavy at this season of the year because of the open Winter in the Northern States and the absence of heavy rainfall in many of the Southern States.

PAY GREAT NORTHERN CLAIM

Northern Pacific Gives $1,500,000 on Burlington Refunding.

Announcement was made yesterday that the Northern Pacific had paid the Great Northern $1,500,000 in settlement of the Great Northern's claim for an equal division of interest charges resulting from the refunding of the joint Burlington 4's. This amount, it was explained, is less than one-half the difference in interest between the 7 per cent. on Great Northern refunding bonds and 4½ per cent. on Northern Pacific refunding bonds.

When the refunding of the Burlington 4 per cent. bonds was accomplished through the issuance of a new bond guaranteed jointly by the Northern Pacific and the Great Northern, it was decided that the former should authorize a 6½ per cent. bond and the latter a 7 per cent. bond into which the new issue would be convertible. The Great Northern immediately asked for an adjustment of the difference in the interest rate, and as the time was short for the completion of the refunding operations it was decided to leave the matter to arbitrators. Arthur Curtis James, George F. Baker and J. P. Morgan acted in this capacity.

CITIES SERVICE CO. SHOWS LARGE GAINS

FUEL SUPPLY NOW NORMAL

Net of $6,929,601, or 14.88 Per Cent. on Outstanding Common Stock, Is Reported.

The Cities Service Company, in its preliminary report for the twelve months of 1922, showed gross earnings amounting to $14,668,970, as compared with $13,481,770 during 1921. Expenses decreased from $517,054 in 1921 to $453,296 in 1922, making net earnings $14,205,674, against net of $12,944,715 for 1921. After allowing for interest payments and requirements for preferred stock, the company reported a net applicable to the common stock and reserves amounting to $6,929,601, as compared with $5,989,953 in 1921. This was equivalent to 14.88 per cent. earned on the outstanding common stock, as against 13.04 per cent. in 1921.

The report showed net earnings for December, 1922, to be $1,242,470, as against net of $1,162,030 for December, 1921. Commenting on operations during December, the company stated:

"Both gross and net earnings of the public utility division were the largest in the history of the company, increases being well distributed over the properties. The fuel situation is again practically normal, but all properties are arranging storage facilities preparatory to having large stocks of storage coal on hand by April 1."

DOHENY REPORTS ON OIL.

Says New Arkansas Field Is Good Producer.

Edward L. Doheny, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Mexican Petroleum Company and the Pan-American Petroleum and Transport Company, has just returned from a tour of inspection of property recently acquired in the new Smackover oil field in Arkansas. Mr. Doheny yesterday said the field was a good oil producer, but would not upset calculations in the trade. He expressed the opinion that the light oil sections of the field were overrated. He reported seeing fifty-six derricks on an area of 2,500 acres.

On the Pan-American Petroleum properties, Mr Doheny said, eight wells were projected, four of which are drilling, two of which have been cemented in and one flowing now at the rate of about 500 barrels an hour. The grade of oil produced, according to Mr. Doheny, is mostly heavy and without gasoline content.

CHANGES IN BRITISH TRADE.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—As compared with 1921, food, drinks and tobacco imported by England in 1922, as stated by the Department of Commerce, showed a decline of $440,803,380; imports of manufactured goods were less by $75,151,820; raw materials imports increased $126,122,900.

Raw materials exports increased $180,004,900 for the year, and exports of manufactured articles decreased $85,021,790. The disparity between price levels during 1921 and 1922 is believed to have played a large part in the decrease.

British exports of key commodities during 1922 made great progress toward the 1913 quantity totals. There was a 44 per cent. increase of 1921 figures in exports of cotton piece goods, although the increase in value was less than 5 per cent. Woolen and worsted goods exports showed slight increases, while the iron and steel exported more than doubled in quantity, although the value was $11,650,000 less than in 1921. Coal exports in 1922 were two and one-third times those of 1921, although the value was only one and one-half times greater.

ODD LOT MEN SUE COTTON EXCHANGE

CHARGE SERVICE MONOPOLY

Western Union and Gold and Stock Made Codefendants in Anti-Trust Action.

The New York Cotton Exchange, the Western Union Telegraph Company and the Gold and Stock Telegraph Company, in an action brought yesterday in Federal Court by Frank Moore as President of the Odd-Lot Cotton Exchange, were charged with violation of the Federal anti-trust laws. The bill in equity was filed by John M. Coleman, attorney, at 29 Broadway.

The New York Cotton Exchange was charged with having directed its members to refuse to do business with or give cotton information to members of the smaller organization. The telegraph companies were included in the charge of having refused continuous ticker service to the odd-lot dealers.

Counsel for the Odd-Lot Exchange said that it had been impossible to estimate the financial damage to his clients through the alleged acts, but he asserted that failure to obtain co-operation and use of the telegraphed quotations would seriously embarrass the small cotton brokers. He said that the association was composed of brokers who dealt in bales down to ten-bale lots, while the New York Cotton Exchange handled only transactions of 100 or more bales. He said that telegraph service was essential to the operation of the Odd-Lot Exchange, which was established last August.

"At the time of making application for service to the manager of the Western Union," recited Mr. Moore, "complainant's representative was informed and advised that the application could not be granted except upon the express consent of the New York Cotton Exchange * * * and the New York Cotton Exchange has failed and refused to give its consent to the installation of ticker service for continuous cotton quotations. The defendant New York Cotton Exchange has a monopoly upon the receipt and dissemination of the cotton price quotations on the foreign markets of the world, and in the establishment and dissemination of cotton price quotations in the City of New York."

Mr. Coleman also charged that the New York Cotton Exchange's rule against giving price quotations to the odd-lot dealers was strictly enforced and "the penalty for violation of the rule is expulsion." New York Cotton Exchange officials declined to comment on the suit.

SEVEN FOREIGN BONDS SET NEW LOW RECORD

Acute weakness developed yesterday in that particular group of foreign bonds in which strained relations between France and Germany are an active factor. The French national and industrial issues were under the particular pressure of liquidation and carried the external issues of Belgium down with them.

The bond list as a whole was unsettled, irregular, rather than weak. British bonds were only fractionally lower. The market for domestic issues was particularly "spotty," with a few cases of wide declines, wherein a thin market prevails.

New low records for all time were established by seven of the foreign group. These included the French 7¼s and the Belgium 8s, the "French cities" issues, and the bonds issued for the benefit of the Department of the Seine. There were some sharp recoveries near the close.

The record of this particular group for the day, in which is given the high for 1923, the low and close yesterday and the net change for the day, was as follows:

CAR LOADINGS INCREASE.

Total for Week 770,303, or 59,103 Above Preceding Week.

Car loadings for the week ended Jan. 6 totaled 770,303 cars, an increase of 59,103 cars over the week before, according to reports issued yesterday by the American Railway Association. The report showed that the week's loadings exceeded the loadings of the corresponding week of 1922 by 170,870 cars, and exceeded the same week of 1921 by 72,662 cars.

Loading of grain and grain products for the week amounted to 45,408 cars, 433 cars under the preceding week. This was, however, an increase of 5,473 cars over the same week one year ago, and an increase of 6,410 cars over the same week in 1921.

Loading of merchandise and miscellaneous freight, which includes manufactured products, amounted to 425,097 cars. This was an increase of 24,590 over the preceding week of 78,011 over the corresponding week last year, and of 50,633 over the corresponding week two years ago.

Coal loading totaled 187,746 cars, an increase of 14,368 compared with the week before and 52,224 cars compared with the same week in 1922, but a decrease of 3,487 cars compared with the same week in 1921.

RESUME DIVIDENDS ON REPUBLIC STEEL

Directors Declare Payment of 1¾% on Preferred Stock, First Since February.

CHAMPION COPPER PAYS $7

Ohio Fuel Supply Contemplates Issuance of $20,000,000 as Stock Dividend.

Directors of the Republic Iron and Steel Company yesterday resumed dividend payents on the company's preferred stock by declaring 1¾ per cent., payable April 2, to stockholders of record March 15. This is the first payment made by the company since February of last year when dividends were suspended because of the depressed conditions prevailing in the industry. Resumption of dividends at this time, according to the opinion expressed in financial and banking circles, indicates the rapid improvement in the steel industry during the past six months.

John A. Topping, Chairman of the Board of Directors, said that net profits during the last quarter of 1922 were more than double the dividend requirements on the preferred stock and that the outlook for business and earnings was encouraging. Declaration of the dividend was a complete surprise to Wall Street, as the directors do not generally meet to take such action until February, when the regular meeting is scheduled. It was explained, however, that several directors expect to be out of town next month, and for this reason action was taken yesterday.

Numerous reports have been circulated in the financial district during recent months to the effect that the company is contemplating some new financing. Whether this will be undertaken soon could not be learned officially.

Directors of the West Penn Company yesterday declared an initial dividend of ½ of 1 per cent. on the company's common stock, payable March 30, to stock of record March 15.

The Champion Copper Company, according to advices received from Boston yesterday, declared a dividend of $7 a share on the capital stock, payable Jan. 24 to stock of record Jan. 17. Last year the company paid dividends of $6 a share on the stock, while in 1921 no disbursements were made.

A special meeting of stockholders of the Ohio Fuel Supply Company has been called for Feb. 5, for the purpose of increasing the company's capital stock from $20,000,000 to $40,000,000. The increased capital, according to the information, will be distributed in the form of a 100 per cent. stock dividend.

CANADA CUTS A PULP DUTY.

MONTREAL, Jan. 17.—Pulp board in rolls for use in the manufacture of wall board will henceforth, by virtue of an order-in-council, be subject to the following reduced duty, namely: British preferential tariff, free, intermediate general tariff, 5 per cent. ad valorem.

At present pulp board, if classified under pulp of wood or straw, is liable to import duties of 15 per cent. preferential and 25 per cent. intermediate and general.

Canada is not an importer of pulp, and it is explained in pulp and paper circles that the new step on the part of the Government is in the direction of rectification of a situation created by the application of the new United States tariff.

GREATER DEMAND IN STEEL TRADE

PRICES ARE STIFFENING

Automobile Industry, Farm Implement Works and Builders Are Placing Heavy Orders.

Conditions in the iron and steel trade continue to improve. Operations of the leading companies are on a larger scale than at any time in three years. Steel companies in general are reported so well sold up for the first quarter that they are increasing prices on what remains for delivery, particularly on plates, structural shapes and bars, and are selling sparingly.

The Steel Corporation is reported operating at 88¼ per cent., of capacity, while the Bethlehem Steel plants have been ordered to operate as near capacity as labor and transportation conditions will permit.

The Iron Age in its weekly review says:

"Manufacturing consumers of steel in various lines have been increasing their production schedules and in view of stiffening prices and slow deliveries are seeking to place new orders. Thus both buyers and sellers are contributing to a stronger market.

"In the East a disturbing factor is the sweeping New England embargo which limits ingoing shipments to food and coal. The snowfall in that section has been twice the normal, whereas the Central West, the heart of the steel industry, has been unusually free of snow—a condition most fortunate in view of present heavy demands upon capacity.

"Pittsburgh mills have had heavy specifications from the automobile industry. Other sources that have been heard from this week are the agricultural works, the builders of tanks and barges and the builders of steam shovels and cranes. Also the smaller railroad equipment manufacturers have been particularly active in securing steel supplies.

"The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, which some weeks ago was credited with buying 200,000 boxes of tin plate abroad, is now in the market for upward of 400,000 boxes, some of it for the second quarter and the remainder for the second half of the year."

The Iron Trade Review says:

"Heavy demands, with strong possibilities of still further increases, continue to pile up in the steel market. Against this situation is the virtual inability of works to extend production beyond present limits. Consequently,

The Indianapolis Union Railway Company is one of the most valuable railway terminal properties in the west and one indispensable to the handling of railroad traffic at Indianapolis and the operation of the railroads in that city, the most important railroad center between Pittsburgh and St. Louis. The Company was the first Union Terminal organized in the United States, the formation of the original Company dating from 1850. The Company owns the only steam railroad passenger station in Indianapolis, and also operates under a 999-year lease the "Belt Railroad," which serves a large proportion of the industries in Indianapolis and furnishes the connecting link, both for the handling of through traffic and for the interchange of traffic between all the railroads that enter the city. All of the property of the "Belt Railroad" is located within the city limits.

The ownership of the Company is vested in The Pittsburgh, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company (Pennsylvania Railroad System) and The Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis Railway Company (New York Central System).

The following six railroads are obligated under agreement of September 30, 1883, to use in perpetuity the property of The Indianapolis Union Railway Company, each company paying a proportion of the rental therefor including interest and sinking fund on bonds:

Illinois Central Railroad.
Cincinnati, Indianapolis & Western Railroad.
Lake Erie & Western Railroad.

These bonds are secured by direct mortgage upon all the properties of The Indianapolis Union Railway Company, subject to $675,000 First Mortgage Sinking Fund 4½% Gold Bonds which mature May 1, 1926.

The total authorized amount of the General and Refunding Mortgage Bonds is $10,000,000, of which there will have been issued $4,000,000 Series A 5% Bonds, dated January 1, 1915, due January 1, 1965, and $4,000,000 Series B 5% Bonds, dated July 1, 1922, due January 1, 1965 (present issue). The remainder of the authorized issue is reserved for the payment of the above mentioned First Mortgage Sinking Fund 4½% Gold Bonds and for future extensions and improvements as set forth in the mortgage.

The mortgage provides for a sinking fund beginning in 1926 of 1% per annum of the outstanding bonds, and bonds purchased by the sinking fund are to be kept alive and their interest added to the sinking fund.

The proceeds of the present issue of bonds will be applied to the payment of the Company's $4,000,000 par value Three-Year 6% Secured Gold Notes which mature February 1, 1923.

HILL ROADS WANT PRESENT UNITY KEPT

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—Officials of the hill group of railroads in the Northwest differed before the Interstate Commerce Commission on railroad consolidation in that territory, but agreed that the present association of the lines—the Northern Pacific, Great Northern and Chicago, Burlington and Quincy—ought to be maintained in the interests of the public and the corporations concerned. The differences among them would arise, Charles Donnelly, President of the Northern Pacific, Ralph Budd, President of the Great Northern and Walker D. Hines, counsel for the whole group, told the commission at different times, only in case the Government determined to break up their present unity.

"Nothing has ever shaken our conviction," Mr. Donnelly explained, "that the public interest would be best served and the railroads themselves better placed if the commission could decide to maintain their present unity. At the same time, if they are to be separated, the Great Northern and the Northern Pacific each desire to retain control of the Burlington railroad.

"But we submit in all fairness that the evidence and argument advanced by each railroad separately in favor of its retention of the Burlington, as against claims of the other to its control, should not neutralize the vigor of testimony which has been submitted in favor of the proposition which all three favor—the continuance and extension of their present unity."

In case of a recombination of the Northwestern railroads, it was further indicated, neither the Great Northern nor the Northern Pacific desired to be consolidated with the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, the third transcontinental railroad running through the territory.

Headed by Mr. Budd, Great Northern officials advanced reasons why the St. Paul road should be associated with the Northern Pacific, which they said would bring cheaper and better service. The Northern Pacific will contest this view.

Mr. Hines called V. P. Turnburke a statistician for the Great Northern, to testify that if the St. Paul were consolidated with the Northern Pacific $6,500,000 might be saved in the operating expenses of such a unified system.

The commission has prepared a tentative consolidation plan under which all major railroads of the United States would be merged into eighteen or nineteen large units. In the Northwest the plan involves placing the St. Paul system in the Great Northern combination and leaving the Northern Pacific unified with the Burlington. Under the Transportation act none of the consolidations can be effected except with the co-operation of the ownerships and managements of railroads concerned.

CONTINENTAL MOTORS GAINS

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 17.—The net profits of the Continental Motors Corporation for the fiscal year ending Oct. 31 amounted to $1,560,944.57, President R. W. Judson reported to the stockholders at the annual meeting today. Sales of large truck motors increased two and one-half times the sales of the previous fiscal year, and surplus was increased by $1,327,560.57.

Value of sales orders on the books on Oct. 31 totaled $54,000,000, or 30 per cent. more than at the close of the previous year, notwithstanding the fact that prices of motors were materially reduced during the year.

Sixty main service stations now handle the distribution of parts for Red Seal Continental Motors and it is anticipated that at least 800 such stations will eventually be provided. Previous to Jan. 1 the corporation paid off all bank indebtedness, shown on the balance sheets as $1,450,000. On Jan. 1, 1923, there were 6,200 stockholders, despite the fact of the retirement of preferred stock.

The surplus account shows a balance of $8,179,065.51 on Nov. 1, 1921, to which was added profits for the year ending Oct. 31, 1922, of $1,560,944.57, less provision for Federal income and profits taxes of $91,000. Dividends of preferred stock at 7 per cent. amounted to $145,065.75, leaving the net surplus at the end of the fiscal year $9,106,026.38.

Paris Faces Heavy Deficit.

The Foreign Department of Moody's Investment Service has received the following information from abroad:

"Expenditures of the City of Paris for the current year are estimated at 1,264,000,000 francs, while total receipts are expected to yield only 1,181,000,000 francs, leaving a deficit of 83,000,000 francs. Inasmuch as it appears impossible to either raise taxes or float new loans to cover the municipal deficit, both the Mayor and the Reporter on the Municipal Budget are of the opinion that rigid economy which has been introduced successfully will tend to at least bring about a balancing of the budget.

Public Service Earned $14 a Share.

The Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, in its preliminary statement for 1922, shows operating revenues amounting to $78,356,962, an increase of $3,045,855 over 1921. Surplus available for dividends was shown at $5,570,239, an increase of $1,075,610 as compared with the preceding year. After deducting dividends paid on the preferred stock, the company's earnings amounted to $4,253,401, equivalent to more than $14 per share earned on the common stock.

Metropolitan Trust Directors.

William D. Baldwin, Chairman of the Otis Elevator Company, and Ralph Crews, of Shearman & Sterling, were elected to the Directorate of the Metropolitan Trust Company yesterday. Earl D. Babst, President of the American Sugar Refining Company, retired from the board and the other Directors were re-elected.

RAILROAD FREIGHT CLAIMS DECREASE

SHOWS GAIN IN EFFICIENCY

Bills in First Nine Months of 1922 Were $37,686,169, or 51 Per Cent. Less Than the Year Before.

The substantial improvement made by the railways in various branches of their operation during the past year was shown by executives during the past week who have been studying the problem of freight claims in an effort to cut down expenditures. In the first nine months of 1922, it was shown, the freight claims against the Class 1 railroads totaled $37,686,169, or 51 per cent. less than in the same period a year ago, when the claim bills amounted to $77,376,814.

If the same proportions between the records of last year and the year before are maintained in subsequent reports for the last quarter of 1922 the total claims for the year should not be more than $50,000,000, it was estimated by the officials. This is a marked reduction as compared with the claims presented in the period of Federal control, which the records of the Interstate Commerce Commission, along with those of other years, shows as follows: 1917, $35,070,000; 1918, $55,738,000; 1919, $104,587,000; 1920, $119,533,000, and 1921, $92,500,000.

In discussing the campaign of the railways for a curtailment of freight car claims the American Railway Association issued its findings in part as follows:

"The number of claims has also decreased since 1919. In 1920 4,800,024 claims were presented, and in 1921 3,384,000. In the first nine months of 1922 the number of claims presented declined to 1,649,790.

"More detailed reports show that in 1921 58 per cent. of all claims were settled within thirty days and 78 per cent. within ninety days. The report of September, last year, shows that in the first nine months of 1922 67.5 per cent. of all claims were settled within thirty days and 19.4 per cent. within from thirty to ninety days, leaving only 13.1 per cent. unadjusted after ninety days.

"The success of the railroads in reducing both the number and value of the claims is the result of a campaign inaugurated in 1920 to accomplish a saving in both time and money to shippers and railroads alike."

Freight Cars—Locomotives—Bonds

The Railroads

In 1922 the railroads placed larger orders for freight cars than in any year since 1912. A great deal of this new equipment has not yet been delivered but additional contracts are being let for hundreds of new locomotives and thousands of new cars. It is estimated that the total capital expenditure to be made by the railroads for improvements during 1923 will be in excess of seven hundred million dollars.

The Public

Having just passed through the greatest car shortage in history, the attention of the general public has at last been focused upon the necessity for backing the railway executives who are endeavoring through every means in their power to give the adequate transportation service upon which the commercial structure of the nation depends. The Interstate Commerce Commission is conducting an investigation to ascertain the condition of freight cars and locomotives now in use by the carriers and public sentiment is undoubtedly most strongly in favor of giving the railroads every opportunity to provide the transportation service which the country needs.

Investors

Large amounts of new capital must be borrowed to pay for the new equipment that will be delivered in 1923 and the great army of American investors will be called upon to assist in this program through the purchase of a larger volume of car trust securities than has ever before been issued.

This sale of equipment trust bonds by the carriers to meet their 1923 requirements has already commenced. Over $12,000,000 par value of equipment trusts were sold last week by the New York Central Lines to care for the purchase of locomotives alone. In addition to this financing, last week also witnessed the sale of $13,875,000 Baltimore & Ohio Equipment Trust 5s and $6,030,000 Norfolk & Western Equipment Trust 4½s.

Equipment Trusts

Equipment Trusts have been found to be a most desirable security for all classes of investors and no other type of railroad obligation has so fine a record for prompt payment of principal and interest. Equipment bonds have been purchased for a great many years by large banking institutions, the insurance companies and other conservative institutions. That their desirability as a form of investment is firmly grounded is best evidenced by movements on foot in various States throughout the Union to make this form of security a legal investment for savings banks, and also in States where equipment trust securities are already legal for savings banks to permit such institutions to invest even a greater percentage of their funds in equipment trust securities.

Briefly, the factors of safety surrounding standard Equipment Trusts are—

1—The title to the cars or locomotives is held by a suitable Trust Company as Trustee, whose duty it is to see that the equipment is properly insured and maintained. Every piece of equipment pledged is plainly marked with the name of this Trustee as owner.

2—The car trust issue is retired serially at a ratio substantially in excess of the estimated ratio of depreciation of the equipment and all of the originally pledged equipment or its equivalent must remain as security until the entire debt has been extinguished.

3—Since the Trustee has the right to seize and retake the equipment for the benefit of the Equipment Trust holders in case of any default, the railway or its receivers must promptly meet the equipment obligations or lose the cars and locomotives upon the use of which the value of practically all its fixed property absolutely depends.

National Distribution of Car Trusts.

Our organization has for many years been exclusively devoted to the underwriting and to the wholesale and retail purchase and sale of equipment trust securities and we maintain separate departments within our business devoted to the origination of, distribution of, and retail trading in this class of security. We do a national business with bond dealers and with institutions and investors in every State in the Union and because of this are in active touch with all equipment trust markets.

Investors, by purchasing railroad equipment trust securities, perform an economic service which becomes of immediate benefit to capital, labor and the general public. For many years we have been conducting an educational campaign intended to bring to the attention of every investor of the United States the desirability of placing at least a percentage of his savings in equipment trusts.

The factors of safety governing equipment trusts are clearly described in a booklet entitled "Equipment Trusts," written by a member of the firm of Freeman & Company, which will be mailed without charge to any one interested. We have also prepared and have ready for free distribution a booklet, "A Discussion on Equipment Trusts," consisting of four articles which were written by a well-known financial authority in the columns of the New York Evening Post and which represent an opinion on the subject independent of our own. The Fifth Annual Edition of "Car Trust Securities," a reference volume which contains statistical information covering every standard equipment trust outstanding, is now on the press and in accordance with our custom will soon be distributed.

We are now engaged in the annual revision of our mailing list and it is our sincere hope that we will be successful in reaching, through this advertisement, the attention of every person who is interested in the purchase of equipment trust securities and who, therefore, should have his name placed upon our mailing list. These lists of offerings of equipment trusts are mailed at frequent intervals, according to the requirements of our customers. If you are interested in the matter contained in this advertisement and wish to receive our lists, we urge that you write to us at your earliest convenience. Lists will be mailed weekly, monthly or quarterly, as you may stipulate, and without further obligation on your part. If you are interested in receiving any of the forms of educational literature which we issue from time to time on this subject of car trust securities, place your name on file with us by return mail.

COTTON IS ERRATIC, BUT MARKET WIDE

Extremely erratic price movements again characterized cotton trading, but after two separate waves of liquidation a sharp recovery developed the last hour. Mill interests bought heavily below 27¼ cents, several blocks of March being taken from the market. Trading in both July and October was unusually active and while speculative liquidation continued, decided resistance developed after each recession. The position of cotton appears so strong that trade sentiment has not suffered any fundamental change through disturbing European news. Fluctuations are now more extensive under a large volume of business. Prices gained 15 to 21 points.

For the first three hours trading became almost as exact duplication of the previous session. Liquidation of the afternoon before was continued early and selling pressure from large lines thrown into the ring carried March to 27.20, a decline of 70 points from high figures of the week. Commission houses carrying cotton for Wall Street and Western operators sold freely and for half an hour a very uncertain tone prevailed. Then pressure lifted and a rush of buying started a 30-point recovery. Demand for July became a feature, while transactions in October reached large proportions. So much resistance appeared around 27.40 for May that room traders took the buying side. A line of 5,000 March for sale around 27¼ cents held prices down for a time, with fluctuations erratic. But later it became difficult to obtain contracts to permit execution of buying orders and the 50-point recovery took place in about fifteen minutes. This carried March to 27¼ cents about as rapidly as the rise on Tuesday that lifted the price to 27.70. A large amount of March was purchased during the first two hours, one broker taking over 10,000 bales, believed to be for mill interests. On this upturn both New York and New Orleans began to feel the weight of contracts from various directions.

Shortly after midday a second period of liquidation set in, growing in volume with each few points decline until May again sank below 27½ cents. This movement was accompanied by a crop of disturbing rumors concerning the course of European events which dislodged a great deal of cotton bought early. July broke below 27.20 and May came within a few points of the morning low record before the market steadied. But from this point on support increased, bids for large blocks of cotton appearing through several brokers. Action of the stock market served to discredit rumors in circulation and brought in active commission house demand the last hour. Afternoon developments, therefore, were the reverse of Tuesday's, demand for contracts expanding at steadily rising figures. Not only was some of the cotton sold out replaced but bulls called on a scale that made a definite impression. The last half hour brought as active buying as had occurred any time during the week, May advancing to 27.75. Exports of over 44,000 bales assisted the recovery and closing orders were in large volume at highest prices of the day.

According to Secretary Hester, there was held at uncounted towns and plantations on Aug. 1 last 964,000 bales. As there has already appeared in sight 8,700,000 bales, the amount left in the South is not estimated at more than 1,000,000 bales. This would make roughly 2,500,000 bales still available for the balance of the season or until new cotton begins to move. Out of this quantity, plus the cotton now in ports and interior towns, must be supplied both foreign and domestic requirements for the coming seven or eight months.

BUYING LAGS AGAIN AND GRAINS GO DOWN

CHICAGO, Jan. 17.—Bearish considerations received more attention from grain traders than of late. While there was short covering in all grains the buying was not as aggressive as of late. The increased pressure put on the markets, combined with the weakened technical position, resulted in a sharp break in wheat, with May off 1⅞ cent as compared with the finish of the previous day and the close at the bottom.

Futures declined ⅞@1 cent. July showed more strength than the May on account of the drought in the Southwest. There was some selling of May early by houses with foreign connections, while the most effective buying at the start was by a local professional.

The latter sold out through commission houses later in the day, which was instrumental in making the first break to $1.20 for the May. Short covering made a strong rally from that figure but, toward the last, cables suggesting a disintegration of Germany led to general selling and a break to $1.19⅝. The continued decline in exchange coupled with the recent political developments makes some uncertain as to wheater sales abroad are to hold.

Export demand was fair with sales of 150,000 bushels of durum and 400,000 bushels of Manitobas. Milling demand here showed much improvement with sales of 110,000 bushels, Minneapolis May was bought by mills and went to 1¼ cents over Chicago, after being the same as this market at the close Tuesday. Liverpool reported increased pressure of Argentine wheat.

Local bulls were aggressive on the buying side of corn early and advanced May from 70⅝ cents up to 74¼ cents, but, at that figure there were heavy offerings on resting orders which could not be readily absorbed and the finish was on a good reaction, with the best sellers for profits on Tuesday the leading buyers on the break.

There was some change in the cash situation. Chicago bids in the interior were more in line with those from outside markets and offerings to arrive increased. Mild weather is reducing the Southwestern demand for feeding grains and Kansas City reported reakles of corn and oats for Texas account.

Primary arrivals of wheat so far this week are 4,248,000 bushels; last week, 4,929,000; last year, 2,510,000. Shipments are 2,151,000 bushels; last week, 2,242,000; last year, 1,540,000.

Corn receipts are 4,849,000 bushels; last week, 4,541,000; last year, 7,848,000, and shipments, 2,988,000 bushels; last week, 3,162,000; last year, 3,968,000.

$106,000,000 PAID FOR SINCLAIR LEASE

Oil Man Says He Got That Amount in Stock for Teapot Dome Concession.

NOW HAS $42,000,000 WORTH

He Tells La Follette Committee 1920 Oil Prices Were Based on the Theory of a Shortage.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—With Harry F. Sinclair again as its chief witness, the Senate Oil Investigating Subcommittee delved deeply today into the affairs of the various Sinclair oil companies, but again skirted the edges of the Teapot Dome controversy, in which Mr. Sinclair is one of the principals.

The committee, which is headed by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, one of the leading critics of the action of the Harding Administration in leasing the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve in Wyoming to the Sinclair interests, had Mr. Sinclair before it for more than four hours. In that time Gilbert E. Roe, the committee's attorney, asked question after question as to the operations of the Sinclair companies, but those who crowded the committee room expecting to see Chairman La Follette and the witness lock horns over the Teapot Dome matter had to depart at the end of the day without having heard the words "Teapot Dome" spoken either by the witness or his interrogators.

The testimony of Mr. Sinclair at the start today seemed headed toward the big controversy, but the committee's counsel, after getting various facts as to stock ownership of the Mammoth Oil Company, the Teapot Dome operating concern steered the examination into another channel.

Mr. Sinclair was asked in some details as to the disposition of the approximately 2,005,000 shares of stock he received from the Mammoth Oil Company in return for the lease to Teapot Dome. One million shares, approximately, he said, were exchanged for shares of the Hyva Oil Company, another Sinclair corporation; 121,200 shares were given back to the Mammoth Company and sold by it for $3,250,000 for development purposes, and the remainder is still held by him. He said the stock had a value of about $33 a share, according to New York Curb quotations.

Leaving the Mammoth Company, the inquiry turned toward two of the other companies, the Sinclair Crude Oil Purchasing Company and the Sinclair Pipe Line Company, both of which are owned jointly by Sinclair Consolidated Oil Corporation and the Standard Oil Company of Indiana.

The testimony regarding the Crude Oil Purchasing Company had much to do with prices paid for crude oil in the Mid-Continent field in 1920, when the price of oil rose within three months from $2.75 a barrel to $3.50 a barrel to continue at the higher price throughout a part of 1921 and to be reflected in high gasoline prices. Mr. Sinclair, in a long detailed discussion of this matter, told the committee that the price increase as made by his company was due to indications of a crude oil shortage, and that although all the larger companies in the field made increases almost simultaneously, it was without conference. Incidentally he declared that higher prices for crude oil in the near future might be expected.

The committee's counsel pointed out that Bureau of Mines and Geological Survey reports showed that production had increased steadily for several months after the period under consideration. Mr. Sinclair responded that the Government figures did not entirely influence his company.

Adjournment of the committee session last evening after Mr. Sinclair had been on the stand three hours cut short a possible excursion into the Teapot Dome field. Members of the committee privy to the convening of today's session said that Teapot Dome might be touched upon from time to time while Mr. Sinclair was before the committee, but declared they had no intention of obtaining from him the complete story of how he obtained from Secretary Fall, with the approval of President Harding and Secretary Denby, a lease to develop the naval oil reserve in Wyoming known as the Teapot Dome.

Chairman La Follette and the other committee members were understood to have decided on this course, holding that the task given them by the Senate —investigating the general conditions in the oil industry with particular relation to prices—did not include study of the Teapot Dome matter. They were further said to feel that inquiry by them into the controversy would be a trespass on the territory of the Senate Public Lands Committee, which is about to begin an active investigation.

FORECLOSES ON M., D. & V.

Girard Trust Company Asserts Maryland Road Is Bankrupt.

BALTIMORE Jan. 17.—Asking that a $2,000,000 mortgage it holds against the Maryland, Delaware & Virginia Railway Company be foreclosed, the Girard Trust Company of Philadelphia, as trustee, filed a bill in the United States District Court today charging that the railroad is virtually bankrupt. The action has been expected for some time.

An answer was filed by the railroad company admitting the allegations made in the bill and consenting to the passage of the decree of foreclosure as asked.

The bill charges that, in the opinion of the petitioners, the assets of the M., D. & V. are insufficient to pay its outstanding claims. No charges of mismanagement are made against the defendants.

The railroad, which lies on the eastern shore of Maryland, operates a line of steamboats between Baltimore and Eastern Shore and Virginia points. It has been controlled by the Pennsylvania Railroad for many years, and this company is expected to take it over. The Pennsylvania also controls the Baltimore, Chesapeake & Atlantic Railroad, a sister line of the M., D. & V.

BROADWAY BLOCKS SOLD

Herbert Du Puy Sells the Bellecialre and Lansing, Held at $3,000,000 —Investor Buys Forest Chambers.

Apartment house trading was a strong feature of yesterday's real estate market, when properties valued at about $8,000,000 changed ownership.

The largest transaction involved the sale by Herbert Du Puy, formerly of Pittsburgh, of the Hotel Bellecialre, at the southwest corner of Broadway and Seventy-seventh Street, and the Lansing Building, comprising the block front on the west side of Broadway, between Eighty-second and Eighty-third Streets, which are valued at about $3,000,000. The sale was made by L. J. Phillips & Co. to Samuel Brener for the Morewood Realty Holding Company.

The Bellecialre is an eleven-story fireproof structure, fronting 105.5 feet on Broadway and 119.10 feet on Seventy-seventh Street, and is 146 feet on the southerly line.

The site contains about 14,000 square feet. The building contains about 250 rooms, and last Summer a roof garden was added.

The Lansing Building fronts 204.4 feet on Broadway, 107.7 feet on Eighty-second Street and 104 feet on Eighty-third Street. It is a two-story building, consisting of stores, a theatre and dancing academy, and was sold to the present sellers in 1908.

The property was valued at $2,000,000 and was purchased for cash over mortgages totaling $1,340,000. It fronts 200 feet on Broadway, 100 feet on 113th Street and 125 feet on 114th Street.

A Low Rent That Includes Low "Overhead"

The New Barron Building on Newark Avenue, Jersey City, offers you a combination of plan, construction, shipping facilities, space arrangement, labor supply and location, that will minimize your "overhead"

THIS 6 story factory building of modern reinforced concrete flat slab construction eliminates those factors of waste space, faulty lighting and poor floor arrangement which are reflected in excessive manufacturing costs. The favorable location—the convenience and accessibility for easy trucking—the direct shipping service by seven great railroads—coupled with the better building itself, makes it the best and most economical factory and warehouse building in the Metropolitan District.

Your space requirements can be met in the I. M. Barron Building whether you need 10,000, 30,000, or 200,000 sq. ft. Our booklet "The Solution of Your Factory Problems," is an informative study of the factors of "excess overhead" as they affect your rental. A copy will be mailed on request.

OUR business era has been and probably will be characterized by important manufacturing and financial consolidations.

Whatever advantages have been gained by these combinations, it is noteworthy that to the ultimate consumer the name of a familiar product is still a greater controlling factor in its purchase than the mere immensity of the interests which produce it.

Nujol, Polarine and New Perfection are relatively recent concessions to the fact that so great and powerful an institution as Standard Oil should offer the individual buyer names which fit naturally into his scheme of thinking.

Combinations may have natural advantages in financing, buying, manufacturing, and selling; but in the struggle for favorable Public Opinion the little name on the package is the one which Johnny-on-his-way-to-the-store murmurs to himself.

In no classification of business has this been more manifest than in food products.

The manufacturers of food products whose profits are derived from prudent operation and whose sales are nourished by Little Trademarks, soundly advertised, have outstanding causes for self-congratulation.

They are in a field where the power of advertising is unchallenged even by other major business advantages and where the favorably known name, creased into the mind of myriads of people, is an impregnable fortification.

The development of food product advertising, its relation to sales growth, and its possibilities of future development have been the subject of some study by us.

The things that advertising has accomplished and may accomplish might prove the basis of an interesting and profitable discussion with any manufacturer who desires at this time to consolidate his trademarks with favorable Public Opinion.

ONCE a month, or more frequently, we issue a publication called Batten's Wedge. Each issue is devoted to a single editorial on some phase of business. If you are a business executive and would like to receive copies, write us.

This Ends Unruly Hair

Now the most stubborn hair can be kept neatly combed all day. You can keep your hair looking as well as your clothes and shoes. Hair that never stays combed is a fault to otherwise smart dress that Stacomb ends at once.

Apply Stacomb in the morning when you comb the hair. Then comb it in any style you like and see how it stays. Rub on palms of hands, and apply to the hair—easy and quick to do.

Stacomb is winning millions as it will win you, too, if your hair won't stay combed. It's the fastest selling product ever made for the hair. Unkempt hair is a flaw in men's appearance that all should overcome. Stacomb will do it.

Ideal After Washing Your Hair

Apply Stacomb also after washing your hair; then comb it any style you like. It will stay that way.

Greaseless, stainless, not a liquid. It shows only in a neatly combed effect.

Ask your barber for a Stacomb Rub.

Women

Women who know Stacomb no longer say, "I've just washed my hair and can't do a thing with it." Stacomb restores the natural oils and makes the hair easy to dress.

Stacomb controls short hair and stray locks. Particularly helpful if you are letting bobbed hair grow long again.
